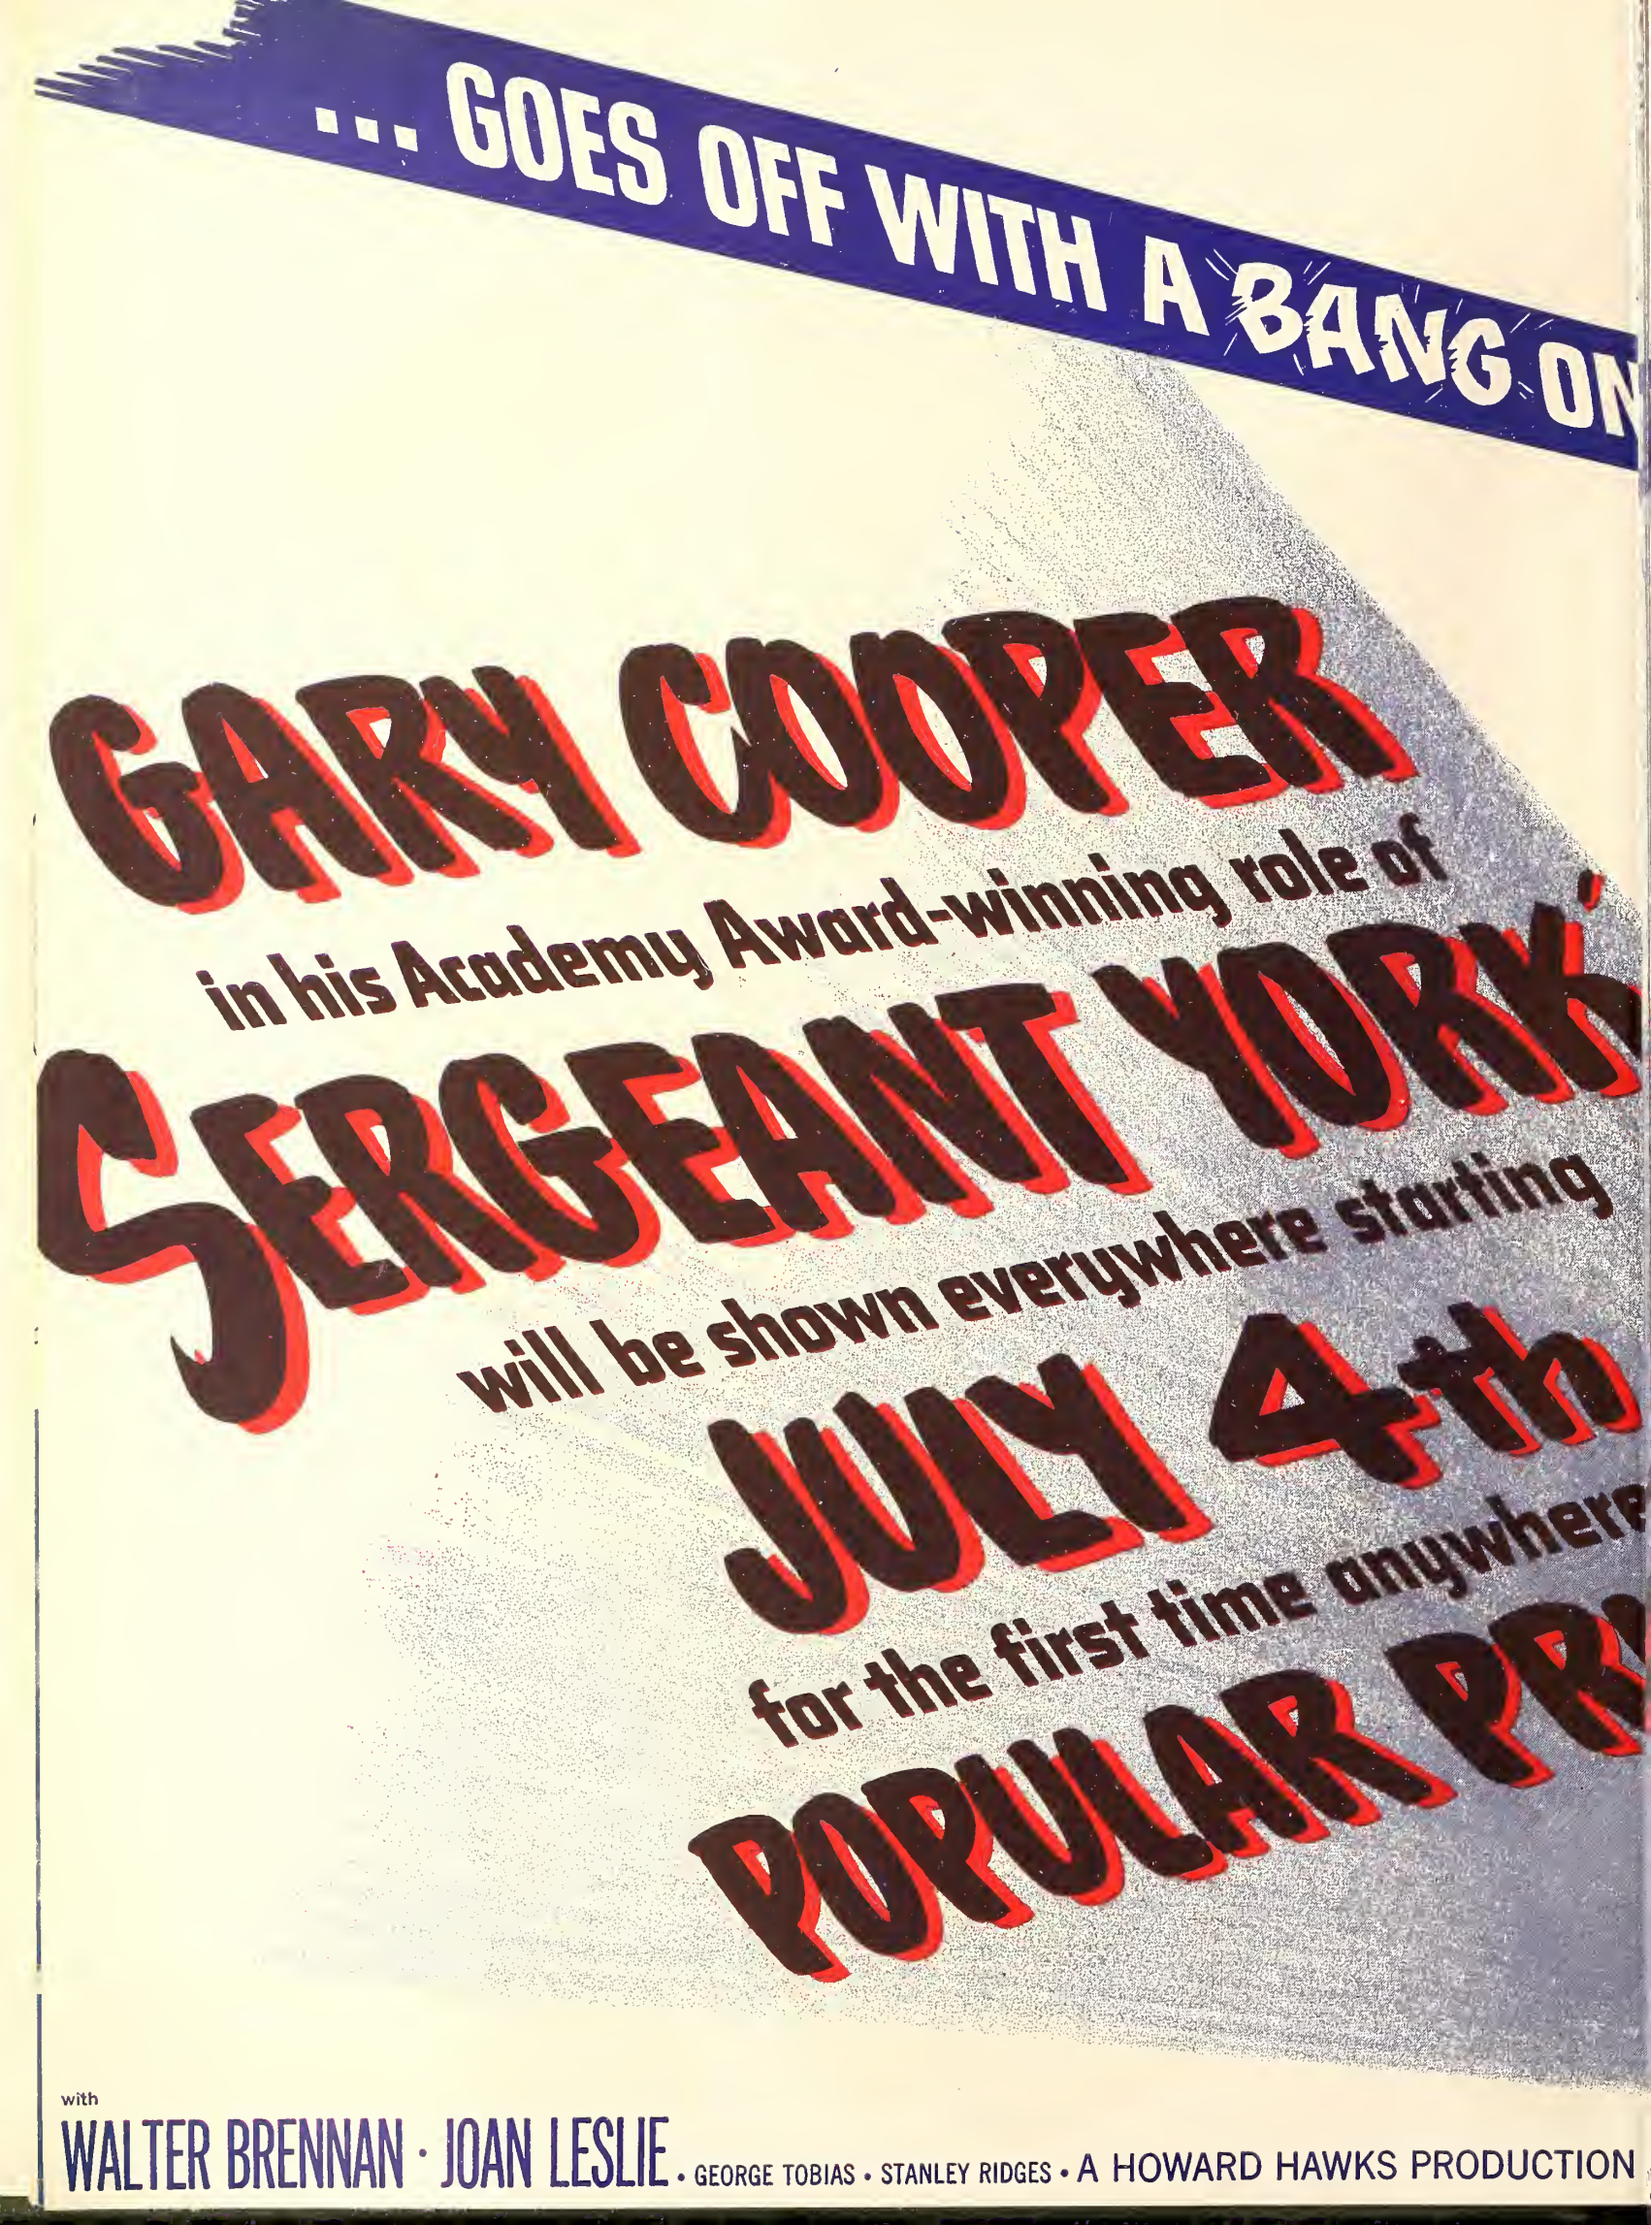
The Line That Will Soon Stretch Across America!

"'Mrs. Miniver' is Redbook Magazine's 'Picture of the Month'. And now Liberty picks it too. I never read such reviews on a movie before!"



"The newspapers say it broke the 10-year record of The Music Hall."

"I had to wait on this same line for 'Woman of the Year,' 'Tortilla Flat' and 'The Philadelphia Story.' Only this line is longer! That M-G-M company makes the best pictures!"

INDEPENDENCE DAY

THE MOTION PICTURE has been a part of our lives through one quarter of the years of the Republic. Since its coming to the screen in the middle 1890's the people of these United States have doubled in number. All of that litte group which saw the motion picture born in fleeting images on film in a work shop at West Orange have joined the yesterdays. It is only the older ones among us who remember a world without the pictures. Most of us have grown up and into maturity with the screen, and there is a generation and a half of us to whom the motion picture and its theatres have been always a part of life.

Our wars will be won, our independence will be saved and the peace of the future made safe by men and women of this time to whom the screen has been a fact all their lives. Those daring young men who fly the big bombers and the dragon-fly pursuit planes can not even remember when the movies were not talkies.

It has been said that we are a movie-made people. It is more the truth to observe that we the whole people have made the motion picture an experience meeting for the sharing of adventures, laughter, loves, tears and hope.

The virtues of the American motion picture are the virtues of the American people, and the failings of the screen are theirs, too. In all the affairs and doings of humanity that is the inevitable, in the best and in the worst. The average is always made of both and all.

The world place of the American motion picture through the two decades of the last peace was the place of the United States among the nations and empires. There is prospect that this may be so again when there is a peace again.

Our motion picture has been to and through most all the wars beginning with '98 and the Spanish-American conflict which made us responsible for the Philippines.

American cameras went to the Boer-British war. It was American skill that made the first great color pictures in a record of that gilded and jewelled procession of empire, the Durbar at Delhi where Indian princes made obeisance to the Lion and "the Widow at Windsor." An American camera landed with the Marines at Tampico and camera men rode with Villa in his rebellion and afterward with Pershing's expedition over the border. American cameras were at Antwerp with the fall of Belgium in 1914, and they were at Cantigny and Belleau Wood and Chateau Thierry, and again at Versailles.

They have been just newly at Pearl Harbor, and scattered where only God and the Navy know, from Reykjavik to the South Seas. By and by the screen will be telling and showing, if the Democracy and its free screen shall prevail, of those vital events that are related, so far, principally in official rumors.

It is the motion picture of the people's theatre which has evolved this great instrument of saying and showing. Faithful, in its fashion, the screen has long revealed, while it has served, the wishes and ideals of the multitudes, the people of the Republic.

We have come now into a day when we have a nation to defend and save, both abroad in a world swept by all the demons of fear and hate and selfishness, and at home where some purposes of politics and power would make a servant of the people's screen, builded up these many years—and, failing that, would by-pass with a new system and machinery of screen telling and showing—all as free as the acts with a medicine show, prelude to the selling of the Old Indian Herbs and Rattlesnake Oil. Millions of dollars are going into film devices aimed to go another way around to the people who have always chosen to order their own entertainment.

It is one thing to use the screen to advance the war and to teach soldiery and quite another to use it to order a peoples' thinking.

A free people have created, by their vote of patronage, a free press and a free screen, for their own service, bought and paid for in the American way. That was something declared for on that first Independence Day—something to remember on this one.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Birdwell Indicts

HOLLYWOOD is "fantastically," "sloppily" wasting a million dollars a day; it is not proving it is essential to the war effort; Hollywood has seen six months of war—and a losing war thus far—go by without developing a single, all-purposeful policy for an all-out war effort; it has done nothing on an over-all conservation program; instead of creating morale in the country it is wasting man and woman hours by subjecting millions daily to four and five-hour screen bills; Hollywood has a "business-as-usual" policy.

This was the picture drawn for the public press this week by Russell Birdwell, self-styled "public relations counsellor and representative of many of Hollywood's notables," in a statement issued on his arrival in New York. It was a Birdwell indictment more severe than previous ones, and came in the face of much evidence to the contrary on Hollywood's war efforts. And it was an indictment that gained him little or no attention in the public prints, so far as was known at midweek, three days after its issuance.

Mr. Birdwell dramatically described for public consumption how the million dollars a day which, he said Hollywood was "sloppily wasting," would buy five large bombers every 24 hours—would feed 1,000,000 Chinese, 1,000,000 Greeks and 1,000,000 in Holland and Belgium—"three million persons every single day.

"Even plumbing companies have converted," informs the Hollywood press agent-on-commission, who recommends that, "after Hollywood has prepared itself," it should stage "the largest publicity and advertising campaign in its history." Elsewhere in his statement Mr. Russell reminds that his New York business offices are at Rockefeller Center.

Saving Raw Film

DIRECTORS have cut negative consumption an average of 35 per cent, and in some instances 70 per cent, during production, Hollywood's Film Conservation Committee was told Tuesday night. It had assembled to hear reports on conservation efforts, and about the meeting with War Production Board officials in Washington last week.

The latter was detailed in writing by Ray Klune, who represented the committee. He said the next Washington session would be July 18th, and that meetings thereafter would occur on the fourth Tuesday of each month.

Reports on raw stock consumption for this year's first six months will be forwarded to the WPB on July 15th, and similar reports will be semi-monthly thenceforth.

Mr. Klune, Lindsley Parsons and Ben Goetz were appointed to check studio operations in order to maintain economy measures in Hollywood's 13-point program submitted to the WPB two weeks ago.

U.S. Counts 15,115

THE U. S. Census Bureau this week completed verification of returns made by motion picture theatres in the 1939 census, reporting a total of 15,115 film theatres, with a seating capacity of 10,029,009, in operation in 1939, with gross receipts of $673,045,000.

The totals were reported last year and published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD February 22, 1941.

The previous census, in 1935, showed that there were 12,024 theatres, with receipts for the year of $508,196,000.

Approximately seven per cent of all motion picture theatres were in New York State, where 1,153, with a capacity of 1,201,156, reported receipts of $114,129,000, or approximtaely 20 per cent of all the money going into the box-offices of the nation's exhibitors.

At the other end of the scale, Delaware reported only 30 houses, with a capacity of 25,106, and receipts for the year of $1,349,000, but this was a lot better than Nevada where, with 34 theatres, the seating capacity was only 14,041 and receipts were but $868,000.

New York was the only state to report receipts in excess of $100,000,000, which was more than twice the receipts reported by the next busiest box-office states, California and Pensylvania, each of which had revenues of more than $55,000,000. Five other states, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and Texas, reported receipts in excess of $25,000,000, and seven showed between $10,000,000 and $25,000,000, but 18 reported less than $5,000,000.

Analysis of the division of business by the Census Bureau showed that there were 1,505 theatres with annual receipts of $100,000 or more each. These houses had a total capacity of 2,561,224 and a total 1939 income of $306,173,000.

In the $25,000 to $49,999 class there were 3,296 theatres with a seating capacity of 1,483,038, reporting 1939 revenue of $118,192,000, while 3,983 exhibitors reported annual receipts between $10,000 and $24,999, with 1,832,732 seats and aggregate receipts of $66,595,000.

The final classification showed that 3,964 theatres did an annual business of less than $10,000, having a seating capacity of 1,890,008, and 1939 receipts of $18,671,000.

Gas for Newsreelers

NEWSREEL cameras will be kept rolling by truck and car through special gasoline allotments which the Office of Price Administration is expected to approve within a few days, Washington hears. Camera and sound trucks will receive what is described as "an adequate but not unlimited supply" of gasoline under the new gas ration system which goes into effect in the east on July 22nd. They will be classed with essential services which are to receive sufficient fuel to maintain full operations, it was said.

"Eagle" Soars

AMERICA'S thirst for information of the war, so slightly served under censorships of newsreels, is reflected in Universal Pictures' report of record-breaking pre-release openings, widely scattered over the map, on "Eagle Squadron."

The picture is in essence a handsome documentary product, as William R. Weaver remarked in his Herald review, of "war, grim and stark. . . ." It is also, for the people becoming newly intimate with the war, of that order of high tension interest which is also entertainment. In the lines of the role of the heroine, subduing the hero-suitor, she found the cause more important, too important, for love and marriage. The picture is like that, too. War, our war, terrible, compelling, urgent, now! [T. R.]

Following upon the openings at Buffalo, Baltimore, Chicago, Dayton, Harrisburg, San Francisco and San Antonio, over the last week-end, "Eagle Squadron" opened in New York at the Globe theatre under the auspices of The Eagle Squadron Fund and the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund of the U.S.A., Inc.

Lt.-Col. Curtis, M.A.

OUT FROM behind the scenes of Washington's War Department, the other day, came Edward Peck (Ted) Curtis, widely known in those motion picture quarters which do business with Eastman Kodak. Unheard of, officially, now these two years, since he obtained a leave of absence as Eastman's motion picture sales manager, to go to the War Department, Mr. Curtis made public appearance to receive an honorary degree of master of arts at Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts, which he left in 1917 for World War I.

Since re-entering the Army, in 1940, Mr. Curtis has risen to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He blasted six enemy planes from the skies in the last war. Then in his early 20's, he was the youngest Major in the Air Service, and was decorated by the United States with the Distinguished Service Cross, by France with the Croix de Guerre, by England with the Order of St. Anne.

Those Frozen Funds

TOO LONG past due is the belief of American motion picture companies, eyeing their frozen revenues in Great Britain; and they were reported this week importuning the British, through Washington, to release more of that money. Loew's is reported to have more than $9,000,000 tied up; other companies have smaller amounts. The total amount, for all companies, is rumored at $50,000,000. The current monetary agreement with Britain allows the American firms to withdraw $20,000,000 during the year ended October 31, 1942. Aid to Britain from our Government, is being stressed.

Manual of Themes

NELSON POYNTER, Hollywood representative of the U. S. Office of War Information under Lowell Mellett, made available to motion picture producers, writers and other directly interested parties in Hollywood Monday a "Government information manual for the motion picture industry."

Labeled "Government property, not to be reprinted in whole or in part without specific permission," the manual is in loose leaf form, mimeographed, and runs to 50 pages, to which additions are to be made from time to time as developments suggest additional recommendations and advices. The advisory nature of the agency's functioning is explained on the title page of the manual.

Statement and clarification of Government policies and war aims, pointed up with quotes from addresses by President Roosevelt, Vice President Wallace and others, make up the bulk of the manual.

Six specific suggestions which, the manual says, might be dramatized effectively, are conveyed in the final pages. They are: the sacrifices of individual soldiers and sailors, the importance of a unified command on a worldwide scale, the dramatic aspects of the less spectacular branches of the service, the heroism of the merchant marine, the woman's army, the Medical Corps as a direct adjunct of the fighting forces, etc., etc.

They Want Revivals

NEW YORK theatregoers want more film revivals. That is the gist of a survey conducted in the city's four chief boroughs by Dr. Leo Handel's Motion Picture Research Bureau.

Of persons questioned, 91 per cent said they wanted to see again the past ten year's most outstanding pictures, eight per cent said they didn't, one per cent didn't care. Ninety-seven per cent will attend old pictures they haven't seen—if they are good.

The Bureau calls the percentages indicative of an "extraordinary interest."

Welles Overflows

AN RKO Studio statement released Wednesday in Hollywood read in part:

"Upon completion of 'The Magnificent Ambersons' and 'Journey Into Fear' and pending completion of Orson Welles' work in Brazil and his return, there is nothing further to be done at RKO studio by representatives of Mr. Welles or Mercury Productions in connection with either of the completed pictures or the picture currently being photographed in South America.

"Accordingly, because space was urgently needed for those engaged in current productions, RKO requested representatives of Mr. Welles to make available offices which had been occupied by them.

"RKO's future relationship with Mr. Welles will be discussed with him upon his return from South America."

Loyd Wright, attorney for Mr. Welles countered with the following:

"Disagreements that have existed between RKO and Orson Welles and his Mercury Productions have culminated in the necessity of his leaving the RKO Pathe lot. . . . 'Journey Into Fear,' on which Mr. Welles was working prior to leaving for Brazil, was arbitrarily taken over by RKO during Mr. Welles' absence and is being edited without benefit of the services of those who worked on the picture and conceived its creation.

"Mr. Welles is at present completing his services in Brazil where he went at the request of the Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs to make a picture in the interests of hemispheric solidarity. This film will be released by RKO. Mr. Welles will return to Hollywood the last week in July after reporting to Washington."

Screen's War Job

CHARLES FRANCIS COE, of the Hays Office, in an outgiving to a businessmen's gathering, issued in a formal brochure this week, proclaimed the earnestness of the motion picture in the national service, and gave with that a warning:

"Eagerness to win the war, coupled with recognition of the power of motion pictures, is apt to impel the unknowing to excessive demands on motion pictures. Two dire things would result from excesses. Instead of apprising the people, we might begin to instruct them. That would empty the theatres. The greatest public contact would be so lost for all purposes."

Mr. Coe cited the progress of war production and the eager support of the cause by the people, and the acclaim for a "second front" by the people of both the United States and Britain, both alike getting their entertainment preponderantly from the American film.

"The Britisher's chief surcease from a ghastly, personalized war, is the American produced motion picture. His indulgence in American motion pictures has not dulled his patriotism or lessened his war effort."

WAR BRINGS OUT-OF-DOORS, COLOR TO THE SCREEN

Limitation on Set Construction Sends Producers Back to Desert and Mountains

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

War and its urgencies are bringing the out-of-doors into the motion picture theatre and screening it in color.

Use of color for features is up 50% over the 1941 total, with the year but half gone and product announcements still to come from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO-Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and United Artists.

The War Priorities Board's $5,000-per-picture ceiling on expenditures for new materials for construction of sets is a factor in the trend.

Depletion of talent ranks by enlistment in the armed services is another.

The swing to war themes (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 20, page 12) is a third, and there are others.

Nub of the matter is that producers are resorting to use of color to obtain what they call "production value," which they rate an indispensable and declare to be daily more difficult of obtaining in other ways.

Outdoor Subjects Predominate

Twenty-two of the 27 color films for 1942 are preponderantly outdoor subjects.

Four of the others are musicals and one is a cartoon.

At least three of the 22 outdoor subjects will use the terrain around Kanab, Utah, in lieu of studio sets, panoramas and backdrops. No priority is required to photograph the High Sierras, but color gives them a glamour that sets the big-budget film apart from the lowly Westerns which have used them as background from the dawn of production.

The Pacific Ocean, the Mojave and other deserts, Death Valley, Yosemite National Park and other settings provided by Nature are similarly exempt from the War Priorities Board's ruling.

Scenery, Sun Were First Attractions

It was the accessibility of these settings from Hollywood, it will be remembered, that caused this place to become the camera hub of the universe 'way back there in the beginning, and just as the economics of a developing technology conduced to the use of fabricated counterfeits in the period of flourishing peace so the economics of war are forcing return to them now.

The effectiveness of color in stepping up the "production value" of an outdoor subject is perhaps most readily to be indexed in terms of the service pictures produced and released in the past year.

Standouts in the long list of films about soldiers, sailors and Marines are "To the Shores of Tripoli," "Captains of the Clouds" and, a bit further back, "Dive Bomber," color pictures.

Whatever the trade, press or public attitude toward any or all of these, or the black-and-whites on service themes, may have been, the opinion of the military authorities is that use of color profits a service picture substantially and steps up the value of it as they reckon value. Since all service pictures are subject to their approval in advance and during production, an uppage in the use of color in this field of activity is indicated.

May Substitute For Star Value

The extent to which depletion of talent is influencing the trend to color is not yet to be documented precisely, although it is by no means a secret that many an outdoor subject using herds of cattle stampeding across a gulley, over a stream and through a town has succeeded impressively, both as entertainment and investment, with one star of magnitude, or several minor ones, performing at head of a band of extras and bit players against a background supplied by Mount Whitney or Old Baldy.

The enlistment of some 28 name players reported on page 41 of the June 6 edition of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, plus that of Clark Gable, regarded by producers as certain to accelerate the rate of stellar enlistments, suggests that there will be increased rather than diminished turning to the out-of-doors and its compensations. In the case of big-budgeted productions, looked to to produce big revenues, this is coming to signify pigmentation.

Three of the seven color features completed since January 1 have been released. They are "Bambi," "My Gal Sal" and "To the Shores of Tripoli."

Completed also since turn of the year but not yet released are "Forest Rangers," a Paramount outdoor subject; the same studio's "Happy-Go-Lucky," a musical; Twentieth Century-Fox's "Thunderbirds," a service picture, and the same studio's "Black Swan," a sea subject.

The seven color features now in production are:

Paramount's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," predominantly an outdoor subject; Warners' "The Desert Song," being shot in Arizona; MGM's "Lassie Come Home," a dog story; Twentieth Century-Fox's "Springtime in the Rockies," against a mountain background; the same studio's "My Friend Flicka," announced as 80 per cent outdoor material and using the country around Kanab, Utah, as setting, which place will also serve for scenes of Columbia's "The Desperadoes" and about 50 per cent of Walter Wanger's "Arabian Nights."

Seven Companies Planning Color

Seven companies are represented in the list of pictures announced for filming in color.

Paramount has on its list "Rurales," the Cecil B. Court Distinguishes on Active, Permissive Waste

New Jersey's Supreme Court of Errors and Appeals, went back to the 13th Century of English statutes and common law this week to reverse the lower court and find in favor of Warner Bros. in a unique real estate action.

The suit arose out of the acquisition of the Tower Theatre, Camden, by Warners in 1930. The circuit closed the house and did not acquire a mortgage. When the mortgagee foreclosed and sold the property for less than the loan, he sued Warners, charging the circuit had permitted its value to deteriorate by failure to keep the property in repair.

The high court sustained a distinction between active waste and permissive waste.

RENTAL PROTESTS GROW AS EXHIBITORS MAP BATTLE

Convention Calls from 4 Organizations Stress Debates on Increases

Growing exhibitor uneasiness against what many independent leaders have described as "constantly increasing rental demands" crystalized this week as convention calls from at least four major exhibitor organizations stressed discussions to be held on the subject of film rentals.

Philadelphia, Connecticut, Michigan and Texas leaders all gave voice to sentiment in favor of taking immediate steps to oppose price changes by concerted exhibitor action.

Texas Theatre Owners, Inc., independent organization headed by Henry Reeve, of Menard, this week sent a bulletin to members and distributors protesting against admission advances and special rental terms for pictures related to the war. The message asserted that the policy of increased admissions was taking advantage of the public and likely to make the industry appear in the position of capitalizing on a national crisis.

The protest, the bulletin asserted, was motivated not by the selling terms of these pictures but "solely upon the improper demand upon the public at our boxoffices."

Increases in key cities, the Texas owners asserted, amount to 10 to 15 per cent of the established price. "In the tremendous majority of subsequent runs, suburban and small towns theatres this increase is 25 to 33 per cent, and often as much as 50 per cent of prevailing prices," they said.

"This situation is a distinct strain upon the motion picture public and, we contend, a misuse of the patriotic impulses of the country," they continued. The message recalled theatre contributions to Army-Navy Relief, USO, stamp and bond sales and other drives and the increasing tax contributions of the industry.

"Our industry has not yet been affected by the national price freezing program. We call your attention to Mr. Leon Henderson's recent statement in that regard and its forthcoming possibilities to warn the motion picture industry against this false merchandising basis, which can obviously cause a disastrous situation, in the event that admission prices are frozen, for the show business," the message declared.

"Great pictures, and fine pictures are worthy of the money they earn" the message concluded, but the Texas exhibitors asked distributors to give their "best thought and earnest consideration before this policy is adopted too generally, as present actions indicate.

Allied Heads To Meet In New Haven

Rentals were also mentioned in the call this week for an Allied regional conference to be held at New Haven's Hotel Garde on Monday, July 6th. Joseph F. Reed, regional vice president announced the meeting of representatives from the Albany, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Baltimore and Connecticut areas.

Following luncheon there will be a forum with discussion of film prices, UMPI, double features, pooling of equipment in war emergencies and theatre participation in the war effort. Speakers will include Sidney Samuelson on "Advantages of Organization," Ray Dollinger on "Group Buying," Colonel H. A. Cole, M. A. Rosenberg and Abram Myers.

At Philadelphia further discussions by a committee of exhibitors protesting rental increases were held on Monday. The session, as were previous ones, was conducted in secret.

Philadelphia to Have Buying Combine

Creation of a 66-house co-operative buying combine in the Philadelphia area to combat high film rentals, was reported last week. The new group will start functioning with the new selling season. It will concern itself only in buying film and will not handle the bookings. All the legal aspects of the co-operative have been cleared and an outside executive will be engaged as chief film buyer. The group will operate along the lines of the old Equity buying organization which functioned in the territory about ten years ago.

While the identities of the cooperating theatres were not disclosed, a spokesman for the group said that it included a number of the larger independent circuits in the territory. While the co-operative is an outgrowth of the "Committee of 38," independent organization of exhibitors that have been meeting here in recent months in protest against high film rentals, and all the members of the new co-operative are associated with the "Committee" group, the buying combine will have no connection whatsoever with the independent group.

Although the co-operative now is restricted to the 66 theatres, it is planned to take in other independent houses after the plan has been in operation. It will function as a permanent unit, each exhibitor having signed a contract providing for the group to do the buying for a period of ten-years. Additional members will be subject to the same regulations to discourage hopes of merely bettering spot deals. Expenses will be shared proportionately, fees to be based on the percentage of the total film bill at each theatre during the year.

Michigan Prepares Petition to Arnold

A general membership meeting of Michigan Allied was held at Midland, Mich., on Wednesday at the call of Ray Branch, president. The exhibitors discussed wartime operations and problems and the question of special rental deals.

Petitions to the Department of Justice were presented at the Michigan meeting asking the Government to secure relief for independents from what were described as excessive distributor demands for per centages, preferred time and guarantees and increased admissions. The message said many theatres in the ITPA territory had been forced to reduce operations to weekends, or to close entirely because of population changes.

St. Louis area exhibitors will hear a report on participation in the War Activities Program from Francis Harmon, executive secretary of the War Activities Committee on July 8th. The meeting is being arranged by Fred Wehrenberg, of the local MPTOA unit.

Allied's national board of directors will move their mid-summer session forward from August to July, it was announced this week in a message from national headquarters in Washington. This is being done, it was said, at the request of several directors who have expressed worry over increasing rentals, new season selling plans and the priority question.

ALBANY GROUP MAY BUY, BOOK

A new New York independent theatre organization, Upstate Theatres, Inc., which observers predicted would develop into a buying and booking combine, was incorporated at Albany, N. Y., on Monday. A membership corporation without capital stock, it listed its purpose as the establishment of fair dealing in the industry through the association of unaffiliated theatres. It will have from five to 15 directors.

The initial board, to serve until the first meeting, is composed of A. Stone, Albany; Charles F. Wilson and Robert Rosenthal, Troy; and Frank X. Shay, John Gardner, Sid Dwore, David J. Willig and Marvin Dwore of Schenectady. Leonard L. Rosenthal, of Troy, a New York Allied leader, is counsel.

ALLIES EXPECTED TO ASK U. S. TO PRODUCE WAR FEATURES

Bernstein Sees Need for Pictures To Further War Effort Among Neutrals

England, Russia and China may call upon American film producers to make feature pictures specifically designed to further the war effort of the United Nations in neutral countries, it was indicated by Sidney L. Bernstein, film advisor to the British Ministry of Information, in New York on Monday.

Mr. Bernstein declined to discuss the specific nature of his forthcoming discussions with producers, during his contemplated visit to Hollywood in August, but he said all the United Nations needed an interchange of pictures based on the lives of people in the individual countries. These, he pointed out, also could be directed to neutral nations, and he indicated that the American film industry was best equipped to do "that kind of job."

Reiterating the importance of "realistic films" about the war, a plea which he made during his address last Thursday to the luncheon jointly sponsored by the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers and the War Activities Committee, Britain's film adviser said this week, "When it comes to making pictures about the war, I feel there is a very serious responsibility."

He named three "important films" being made in England now and designed for the home and world market. They are: "We Search and Strike," a picture about England's coastal action, produced by Crown Film Unit; "A-1 Priority," which is about Anglo-American lend-lease cooperation; "I Was a Fireman," about England's volunteer firemen, and another film about the American soldiers stationed in Northern Ireland.

U. S. Films Crowd Nazis Off Neutral Screens

At the AMPA-WAC luncheon last week, Mr. Bernstein reported that England was attempting to crowd Nazi films off the screens of the few remaining neutral countries by distributing non-propaganda films from Hollywood "with the compliments of the British Government." He emphasized, however, that the British people did not get enough American motion pictures which show how the ordinary American lives. "We get a steady stream of glamour boys and girls, and of spies, of crooks and millionaires, but do these films have residue value? Do they show the brave, energetic, pioneering spirit of America now rising proudly and joining us in the fight? We don't think so," he said.

He declared that "to prosecute the war with greater energy, it is essential for us to appreciate not only one another, but our ways of living in wartime." He made a plea for "pictures that give an honest interpretation of the war. Phony war romances and dramas haven't their place in this war," he said, "for it is not a phony war."

Mr. Bernstein highly commended such American films and those responsible for them as "Mrs. Miniver," which he characterized as "one of the best British pictures ever made." He also praised "Eagle Squadron" and "Captains of the Clouds" for their "mirroring of wartime life in the Empire."

While stressing England's need for more "realistic pictures" about the war, Mr. Bernstein also emphasized the need for "escape films," which, he said, "we need badly. People want to laugh. They want to forget their worries and fears. They want to get away from the war sometimes. So there is room for both realistic films and for comedies, romances, for thrills and musicals. In wartime," he said, "people should have the best, not the worst, of the arts."

Reporting on the progress of England's film industry during the two-and-one-half years of war, Mr. Bernstein pointed out the various war factors which affected both the commercial and Government film production. He also reported that theatre business in England had increased almost 25 per cent since the outbreak of the war and explained that the reason for this increase was that "the people feel a greater need for relaxation," and added that with other amusements no longer in operation, the motion picture theatre was the only place to find it.

Mr. Bernstein said that Denham, Islington, Ealing and Shepards' Bush were the only four studios which had not been occupied by the Government. He reported that all Government product except service training films were handled by the film division of the Ministry of Information and either produced directly or commissioned to studio companies or short producers. The film program for theatres, he said, includes 52 shorts a year in addition to specials like "Target for Tonight." Additionally, there are 100 shorts made for mobile units which tour factories and rural areas, and newsreels which are shipped all over the world with foreign languages dubbed in.

Britain's film adviser to MOI said distributors handled the feature length films in rotation and all received a "proper percentage of the returns for their work." He reported that 85 per cent of the theatres are able to show propaganda pictures in their programs.

Mobile Units Reach New Audiences

The mobile units, Mr. Bernstein pointed out, have, in many instances, reached people who never had seen a film before. Screenings also are arranged in factories for the benefit of workers on all shifts, he said.

The three units under MOI's film division, according to Mr. Bernstein, namely, Crown Film Unit, the Army Film Unit and the more recently formed R.A.F. Film Unit, are quartered in the Pinewood Studios. Each of these units is a distinct and separate entity, inspired by a different purpose and aiming toward a different target. All, however, work towards the same general objective, the propagation of the national war purpose, and all pool their technical and material resources.

Mr. Bernstein was introduced to the AMPA-WAC audience last Thursday by George J. Schaefer, former president of RKO Radio Pictures and chairman of War Activities Committee's national coordinating committee. Mr. Schaefer declared that the value of the motion picture screen as a medium for propaganda was inestimable and added that this value would continue to increase as the United Nations merged their efforts to keep their respective publics informed and inspired on the war effort.

Mayer Reports on Exhibitor Cooperation

Lou Pollock, new president of AMPA, presented Mr. Schaefer and also introduced Arthur Mayer, executive assistant to Francis S. Harmon, coordinator of WAC, to the more than 250 film industry executives who gathered at the Hotel Edison to pay tribute to Mr. Bernstein.

Mr. Mayer reported on the "fine spirit" of America's exhibitors who, he said, are regarding their pledges to WAC as "a solemn contract," and added, "what they are doing to win the war is not regarded as a mere duty, but as a privilege." Mr. Mayer further reported on the numerous activities of WAC and commended both distributors and exhibitors alike for their part in the war effort. "The industry," he said, "is a solid front."

5,000,000 VIEW NON-THEATRICALS

The non-theatrical film unit of the film division of England's Ministry of Information, for which Sidney L. Bernstein is advisor, gave 30,000 shows in the past year which more than 5,000,000 people attended, "and the trade never suffered loss of business even though exhibitors were a bit apprehensive about this form of competition." Mr. Bernstein revealed the extent of the non-theatrical program at last week's joint luncheon at the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers and the War Activities Committee, at the Hotel Edison, New York.

He explained that the 30,000 showings were given to factory and farm workers in remote areas through the mobile film units which carry a 16 mm. projector, a generator and screen. In addition, Mr. Bernstein said, the MOI mobilized practically every 16 mm. projector in England—1,200 of them—and used them in libraries, institutes and factories. The bureau supplies films from its own Central Library and issues 1,600 reels per week.

RATHVON, DEPINET, KOERNER HEAD RKO; SMITH RESIGNS

Odlum Representative and Sales Chief Placed in Charge of Company

Executive changes this week were numerous and in high places mainly in RKO.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum received a new president—N. Peter Rathvon, a "Wall Street man."

RKO Radio Pictures received a new president—Ned Depinet, long its sales chief.

The RKO studio head—Charles Koerner—was elected vice-president; and Andy Smith, Jr., sales manager, resigned, to become Eastern sales manager of 20th Century-Fox.

Meanwhile, from Hollywood came a report that RKO and its unpredictable producer, Orson Welles, had ended their romance. And further RKO studio changes occurred.

The Rathvon and Depinet appointments came Thursday, June 25th, at a meeting, in the New York home office, of RKO's new board of directors.

Mr. Rathvon succeeds George J. Schaefer, who headed the picture company also.

The new direction of RKO was said in New York to have close connection with new financing plans. To be closed formally this week or next, was a deal for a loan of approximately $3,000,000 from the Manufacturers Trust Company; a deal which will be presented to stockholders soon.

Rathvon Long in Company Management

Mr. Rathvon, elected unanimously, is no newcomer to RKO, despite his financial background. He has been in its management for several years as chairman of the executive committee and as a director. For many years previous, he had been associated with Floyd Odlum, head of the Atlas Corporation, RKO's major shareholder.

He was born in Denver April 26, 1891. He has been a representative of mining interests in China and is familiar with certain terrains of the Far and Near East, Europe, and Russia. He is president of Rathvon and Company, investment brokers.

Mr. Depinet has been in the film industry for 35 of his 52 years. After sales posts with Universal, First National, and Warners, he joined RKO Pathe in 1931, as vice-president. He continued as that, and in the sales capacity, in RKO Radio Pictures. He is also vice-president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum.

Mr. Koerner came to the RKO studio some months ago from captaincy of the circuit, having been succeeded there by Edward Alperson. He followed Joseph Breen at the studio, and his arrival was indicative of the new moves which reached the culmination last week.

Andy Smith, Jr., who resigned as sales manager, was appointed that by Mr. Depinet in 1940. Previously, he had been Eastern and Canadian sales manager. He came to RKO from United Artists, where he had been sales manager under George Schaefer, vice-president in charge of domestic and Canadian sales. When Mr. Schaefer went to RKO, Mr. Smith shortly followed him.

In addition to the Rathvon, Depinet, and Koerner elections, all other RKO officers were reelected. They are: Richard C. Patterson, Jr., chairman of the board; Gordon Youngman, vice-president and general counsel; Leon Goldberg, treasurer; J. Miller Walker, secretary; Garrett Van Wagner, comptroller; Robert H. Dann, Kenneth B. Umbreit and William F. Whitman, assistant secretaries, and W. H. Clark, O. R. McMahon and Harold Newcomb, assistant treasurers.

The $3,000,000 loan expected by RKO for working capital, it was reported in New York, would be guaranteed by the Atlas Corporation, which, it was added, would pledge its common stock holdings in the theatre company. It was reported the Radio Corporation of America, and the Rockefeller interests, the other two major RKO shareholders, refused to participate in the loan arrangements.

Personnel Shifted At RKO Studio

Sid Rogell resumed charge of RKO studio operations Monday. He had been in that position from 1936 until last year, when he resigned. William Holman, who succeeded him at the time, remains as his assistant.

Reginald Armour has resigned. He was representative of George Schaefer and he subsequently assumed control of physical operations.

New Warner Booker

Warners has promoted Harry Aranove to the Albany booking department, replacing Wendel Frederick, now in the Navy. Ray Smith, salesman, is a newcomer, from the Boston exchange.

MGM records 20 Year Workers

MGM this week took stock of its distribution personnel, and found that the following, in the three months between April 1st and June 30th, had completed 20 or more years of service with the company.

In April, 1942, Edna Frank, Chicago, completed 21 years; Elsie Bowman, Chicago, 22 years; and Louis Amacher, Portland, 23 years.

In May, 1942, Edward K. O'Shea, home office, 22 years; Walter E. Banford, Chicago, 24 years; Theo Irene Hasbrook, Portland, 24 years; Thomas Parkin, Salt Lake City, 22 years; Clayton T. Lynch, Los Angeles, 20 years.

In June, 1942, Edward W. Green, Kansas City, 22 years; C. James Briant, New Orleans, 27 years; Olive Bond, Kansas City, 22 years; Charles Vetrover, Chicago, 22 years; John J. Bowen, New York, 23 years; William Hopkins, Philadelphia, 22 years; Henry A. Friedel, Denver, 27 years; Edward Kushner, Washington, 24 years; May Cassedy, Denver, 23 years; Elizabeth Connors Dervin, Boston, 22 years; Charles F. Repac, Boston, 22 years; Sarah Weiner, Boston, 22 years and, Henry Wolper, Boston, 22 years.

Shea Circuit Changes Made

The Shea circuit has made several personnel changes. They include: Daniel Gilhula, manager of the Palace and Bula, Ashtabula, Ohio, to Jamestown, N. Y., as manager of the Shea and Roosevelt; Robert Russell, manager of the Shea at Geneva, Ohio, to Ashtabula; James Salmans, manager of the Park, Westfield, Mass., to manager of the Shea, Geneva; Andrew Grainger, assistant manager, Ashtabula to Park, Westfield; Sanford Rowlands, assistant at Bradford, Pa., to Ashtabula, as assistant; Fred Lahrmer, assistant manager, Jamestown, N. Y., to assistant manager, Colonial, Akron, Ohio.

'WAC Won't Ask WPB's Aid'

The War Activities Committee will not request special consideration from the War Production Board on tires until the rubber problem is solved, the first WAC local committee meeting in Pittsburgh was told Tuesday by Harry Brandt, New York circuit owner and WAC field executive.

A total of $204,964 was raised in three drives for the U.S.O., March of Dimes, and Army and Navy Emergency Relief, the meeting heard. The area covered was western Pennsylvania.

Mr. Brandt said, "We've got to prove we're an essential industry, to maintain consideration as such by the Government." He deplored non-signature of WAC pledges by 69 of the Pittsburg territory's 612 houses. Even more, he noted, hadn't played defense shorts.

Si Fabian, vice-chairman, WAC theatres division, said theatre owners had two "traditional roles" to maintain—as "showmen with the helping hand, and patriotic Americans."

M. A. Rosenberg, president of National Allied, was chairman of the meeting, which was attended by almost 100.

Among exhibitors were Dr. C. E. Herman, Ben Amdur, William Finkel, William Wheat, Frank Panoplos, Joe Gellman, Joseph Feldman, Harry Feinstein, James Balmer, Marty Burnett, Fred Harrington.

Schaefer Hails Friedl Work In "Northwest"

The campaign in the Minnesota territory, by John Friedl, Minnesota Amusements circuit head, for the sale of War Bonds and Stamps has been so successful it brought praise this week from George J. Schaefer, WAC chairman, who suggested the Friedl campaign be studied as a guide.

The territory covered Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and part of Wisconsin. Every one of the 851 theatres has signed a WAC pledge, and has played every Victory film sent it.

Rodgers Stresses Morale Weapon

Reminding that the industry has two great weapons—funds and morale—William F. Rodgers, vice-president of MGM in charge of sales, Wednesday told a luncheon-meeting of the Motion Picture Associates, New York, that less personal aims and more personal war effort was demanded of the theatre owner as well as the producer and distributor.

William A. Scully, general sales manager for Universal; Fred Schwartz, general manager of Century Circuit, and Sam Rinzler, operator with Louis Frisch of Randforce Theatres, extolled the MPA for its continued charities. Jack Ellis, vice-president, was presiding officer.

Joins Warner Staff

Ernest Hampton has succeeded S. E. McDonald as circuit booker at Warner Bros. exchange in San Francisco. Stanley Lefcourt succeeds Mr. Hampton as bay region booker, with George Tripp assigned to handling booking in the remainder of the state.

Completed Unity Selling Plan Goes to Government Friday

The new selling plan proposed by the United Motion Picture Industry as an amendment to the Consent Decree was completed Wednesday by the legal drafting committee. It was to be submitted to the Department of Justice at Washington at 10:00 A. M. on Friday.

The lawyers met Tuesday to put the final touches on the four-page legal document into which they had cast the blocks-of-twelve formula. Immediately steps were taken by William F. Rodgers, chairman of the committee of the whole, to gather a committee to present the plan to Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, and Robert Wright, head of the motion picture unit of the anti-trust division at the Department of Justice on Friday.

Members of the legal committee expressed hope that the plan would come before Judge Henry W. Goddard in Federal District Court at New York next week for formal inclusion in the decree.

The group named to go to Washington included Mr. Rodgers, Austin Keough, Paramount counsel; Abram F. Myers, Allied counsel and board chairman; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president; Harry Brandt, New York ITOA, and William T. Crockett and Robert Barton, Jr., MPTOA of Virginia representatives.

Although a number of minor changes in the blocks-of-twelve cancellation, identification and other provisions of the plan were reported to have been made, committee members refused to discuss them. The changes are described as amplifying definitions, setting cancellation deadlines, increasing the maximum in a block to thirteen pictures, and providing for single picture sales.

It was understood, however, that Austin Keough, chairman of the group, had recommended that the text be kept confidential until submitted to the Department of Justice and such changes as the Government lawyers might recommend were made. No explanation was given for the decision to keep the proposed decree amendment confidential. Leon Bamberger, executive secretary of UMPI, Wednesday said the plan would probably remain secret until presented to the court.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, in a letter to John C. Flinn, secretary of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, vigorous objectors to the unity plan, dated June 24th, served notice that public policy, as well as the wish of the majority of exhibitors would govern the Government's attitude.

He denied statements in some papers that the department would follow the majority line, declaring "the Department has given assurance to exhibitors, however, that any selling plan which the majority of them approve will receive careful consideration by the Department. They have also been informed that in considering any plan the Department must take notice of its effect upon the other members of the industry and the general public."

Directors Elect Goldenson

Leonard H. Goldenson, with Paramount since 1933, and since 1938 its theatre operations head, was elected a vice-president of Paramount Pictures Thursday, June 25th. The directors' vote was unanimous.

Mr. Goldenson' 1933 connection was reorganization of the New England holdings. He became Y. Frank Freeman's assistant at the New York office in 1937. Mr. Freeman was then director of theatre operations. When he left to assume studio control, which he still has, Mr. Goldenson in 1938 succeeded him.

The meeting last week reelected all other officers, headed by President Barney Balaban. The other officers are: Adolph Zukor, chairman; Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Y. Frank Freeman, Austin C. Keough, Neil F. Agnew, John W. Hicks, Jr., Henry Ginsberg and Goldenson, vice-presidents; Walter B. Cokell, treasurer; Keough, secretary; Fred Mohrhardt, comptroller, and Norman Collyer, Jacob H. Karp and Frank Meyer, assistant secretaries.

A. J. Balaban in N. Y. Roxy

A. J. Balaban has returned to the industry. Founder, with his brothers, of the Balaban and Katz circuit of Chicago and territory, Mr. Balaban this week was named operator of Twentieth Century-Fox's Roxy Theatre, in New York, its principal first run show-window.

The arrangement ends operation of that house by the Fanchon and Marco circuit of St. Louis. Their operating contract expires August 28th. It began in 1932. Previously, they operated the theatre for five years under receivership.

Mr. Balaban's contract is said to be for two years.

Mr. Balaban, inactive in this business for several years, entered it about 30 years ago, purchasing with sister Ida and brother Barney (now Paramount president), a nickelodeon theatre on Kedzie Avenue, Chicago. Previously he and Ida were a piano playing and singing team there.

Followed then the Circle Theatre, built by the Balabans; and Mr. Balaban there presented the Marx Brothers, Charlotte Greenwood, Sophie Tucker, and other now renowned talent.

WPB ORDER SETS PRIORITY FOR THEATRE MAINTENANCE

Supply Dealers Get Forms to Apply for the Release of Repair Materials

The War Production Board on Tuesday acted to make good its promises to keep theatres open. It announced in Washington that distributors of maintenance and repair materials were eligible for priority assistance and prescribed the forms and procedure for their applications. Individual theatres will apply through their dealers.

Form PD-1-X is available in field offices of the WPB or by mail for dealers who buy directly from manufacturers. On it they may file application for assistance in acquiring goods for resale. These will be considered by the distribution branch of the WPB division of industry operations. Preference ratings will be assigned to stipulated quantities of equipment necessary to the continued operation of theatres.

In cases of emergency, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on June 12th, and in Better Theatres on June 27th, theatre men and equipment dealers may apply to the 13 regional WPB offices for quick interim relief to prevent a shutdown. Form PD-1-X must be filed subsequently.

Essential Materials Supplied Quickly

By channeling priority requests through established dealers, WPB officials pointed out, "theatre owners will be able to obtain essential materials from their usual sources of supply without the necessity of filing applications themselves."

A supplier who does not customarily purchase directly from a manufacturer but places his orders through normal wholesale channels, as well as the wholesaler from whom he buys, also may make application for priority assistance.

Reduction in raw stock consumption meanwhile was still under consideration. Distributors' committees returned to New York and Hollywood following meetings with the WPB in Washington last week to work out further measures to curb film use voluntarily.

Although the committees were reported agreed that in the last analysis savings would have to be effected by the action of each producer, the sessions discussed general limitations of print orders, fewer "B" pictures, and short subjects, and the shortening of titles, trailers, and fewer takes. Wednesday, at a meeting at the MPPDA office in New York, heads of the major companies named a subcommittee to draft a new report for the WPB, with statistical information on contingent steps taken to reduce raw stock and an overall estimate of eventual savings.

WPB Freezes All Film Scrap Prices

Prices for film scrap, positive and negative, were frozen by the Office of Price Administration this week in its maximum prices regulation No. 171, dated June 26, 1942. The ceiling applies immediately to all sales in excess of 50 pounds of washed or unwashed film or five gallons or more of dissolved film.

A basic price of 9.5 cents per pound for unwashed nitro cellulose film is established by the order. It is based on the price prevailing during the basic period of October 1st to 15th, 1941. It is one-half cent above the average for 1941 but 1.5 per cent under the general maximum permitted by the price regulation.

Differentials are provided for washed and unwashed film, negative and positive stock. Prices for solution are scaled according to the concentration.

OPA Wednesday set October 1, 1941 prices as the ceiling on carbons, photographic equipment and certain electrical and radio equipment.

The WPB this week was also reported examining the use of hydro-quinone coal tar derivatives used in laboratory processes. It is understood that it is considering a business pooling arrangement, or other measure to insure full time operation of laboratories.

Newsreels are studying a plan to save thousands of feet from their bi-weekly releases by eliminating opening and closing titles. Under the plan, which has been tested in New York by Universal and Pathe for several weeks, theatres would retain a stock title to be spliced on each week's newsreels.

Film Carrier Mileage Cut 25%

The curtailment of transportation squeezed harder on the film industry this week as the Defense Transportation Board moved to place regulations for a reduction of 25 per cent in the mileage of film carriers and other industry truckers into effect as soon as possible. Only one stop a day is now being made at theatres by most of the lines and steps are under debate for the pooling of routes and the elimination of duplicate services.

Wednesday distributors representatives and carriers met at New York in the MPPDA office to discuss a general formula for applying the 25 per cent mileage reductions. Harold S. Shertz, counsel for the National Film Carriers Association, was to report on local carrier meetings. Sidney Schrieber and Arthur Dickinson of the MPPDA staff, Edwin W. Aaron and Sidney Braunberg, MGM; G. Knox Haddow, Paramount, and Jack Sichelman, Fox, were among the distributor representatives.

Evidence that these delivery changes might seriously affect exhibition practice in compact as well as widespread areas was seen at New Haven. There the Decker lines served notice of a cut in service to one visit daily and the elimination of Sunday trips. Rosen's service already has banned the Sunday schedules and reduced calls.

Studio transportation managers have reported to the Association of Motion Picture Producers that steps to reduce mileage in the Hollywood area has cut the use of studio vehicles by 35 per cent. This has been effected by barring special trips, working out two-way payloads and consolidating services. Lee Hinson, of Paramount heads the transportation committee.

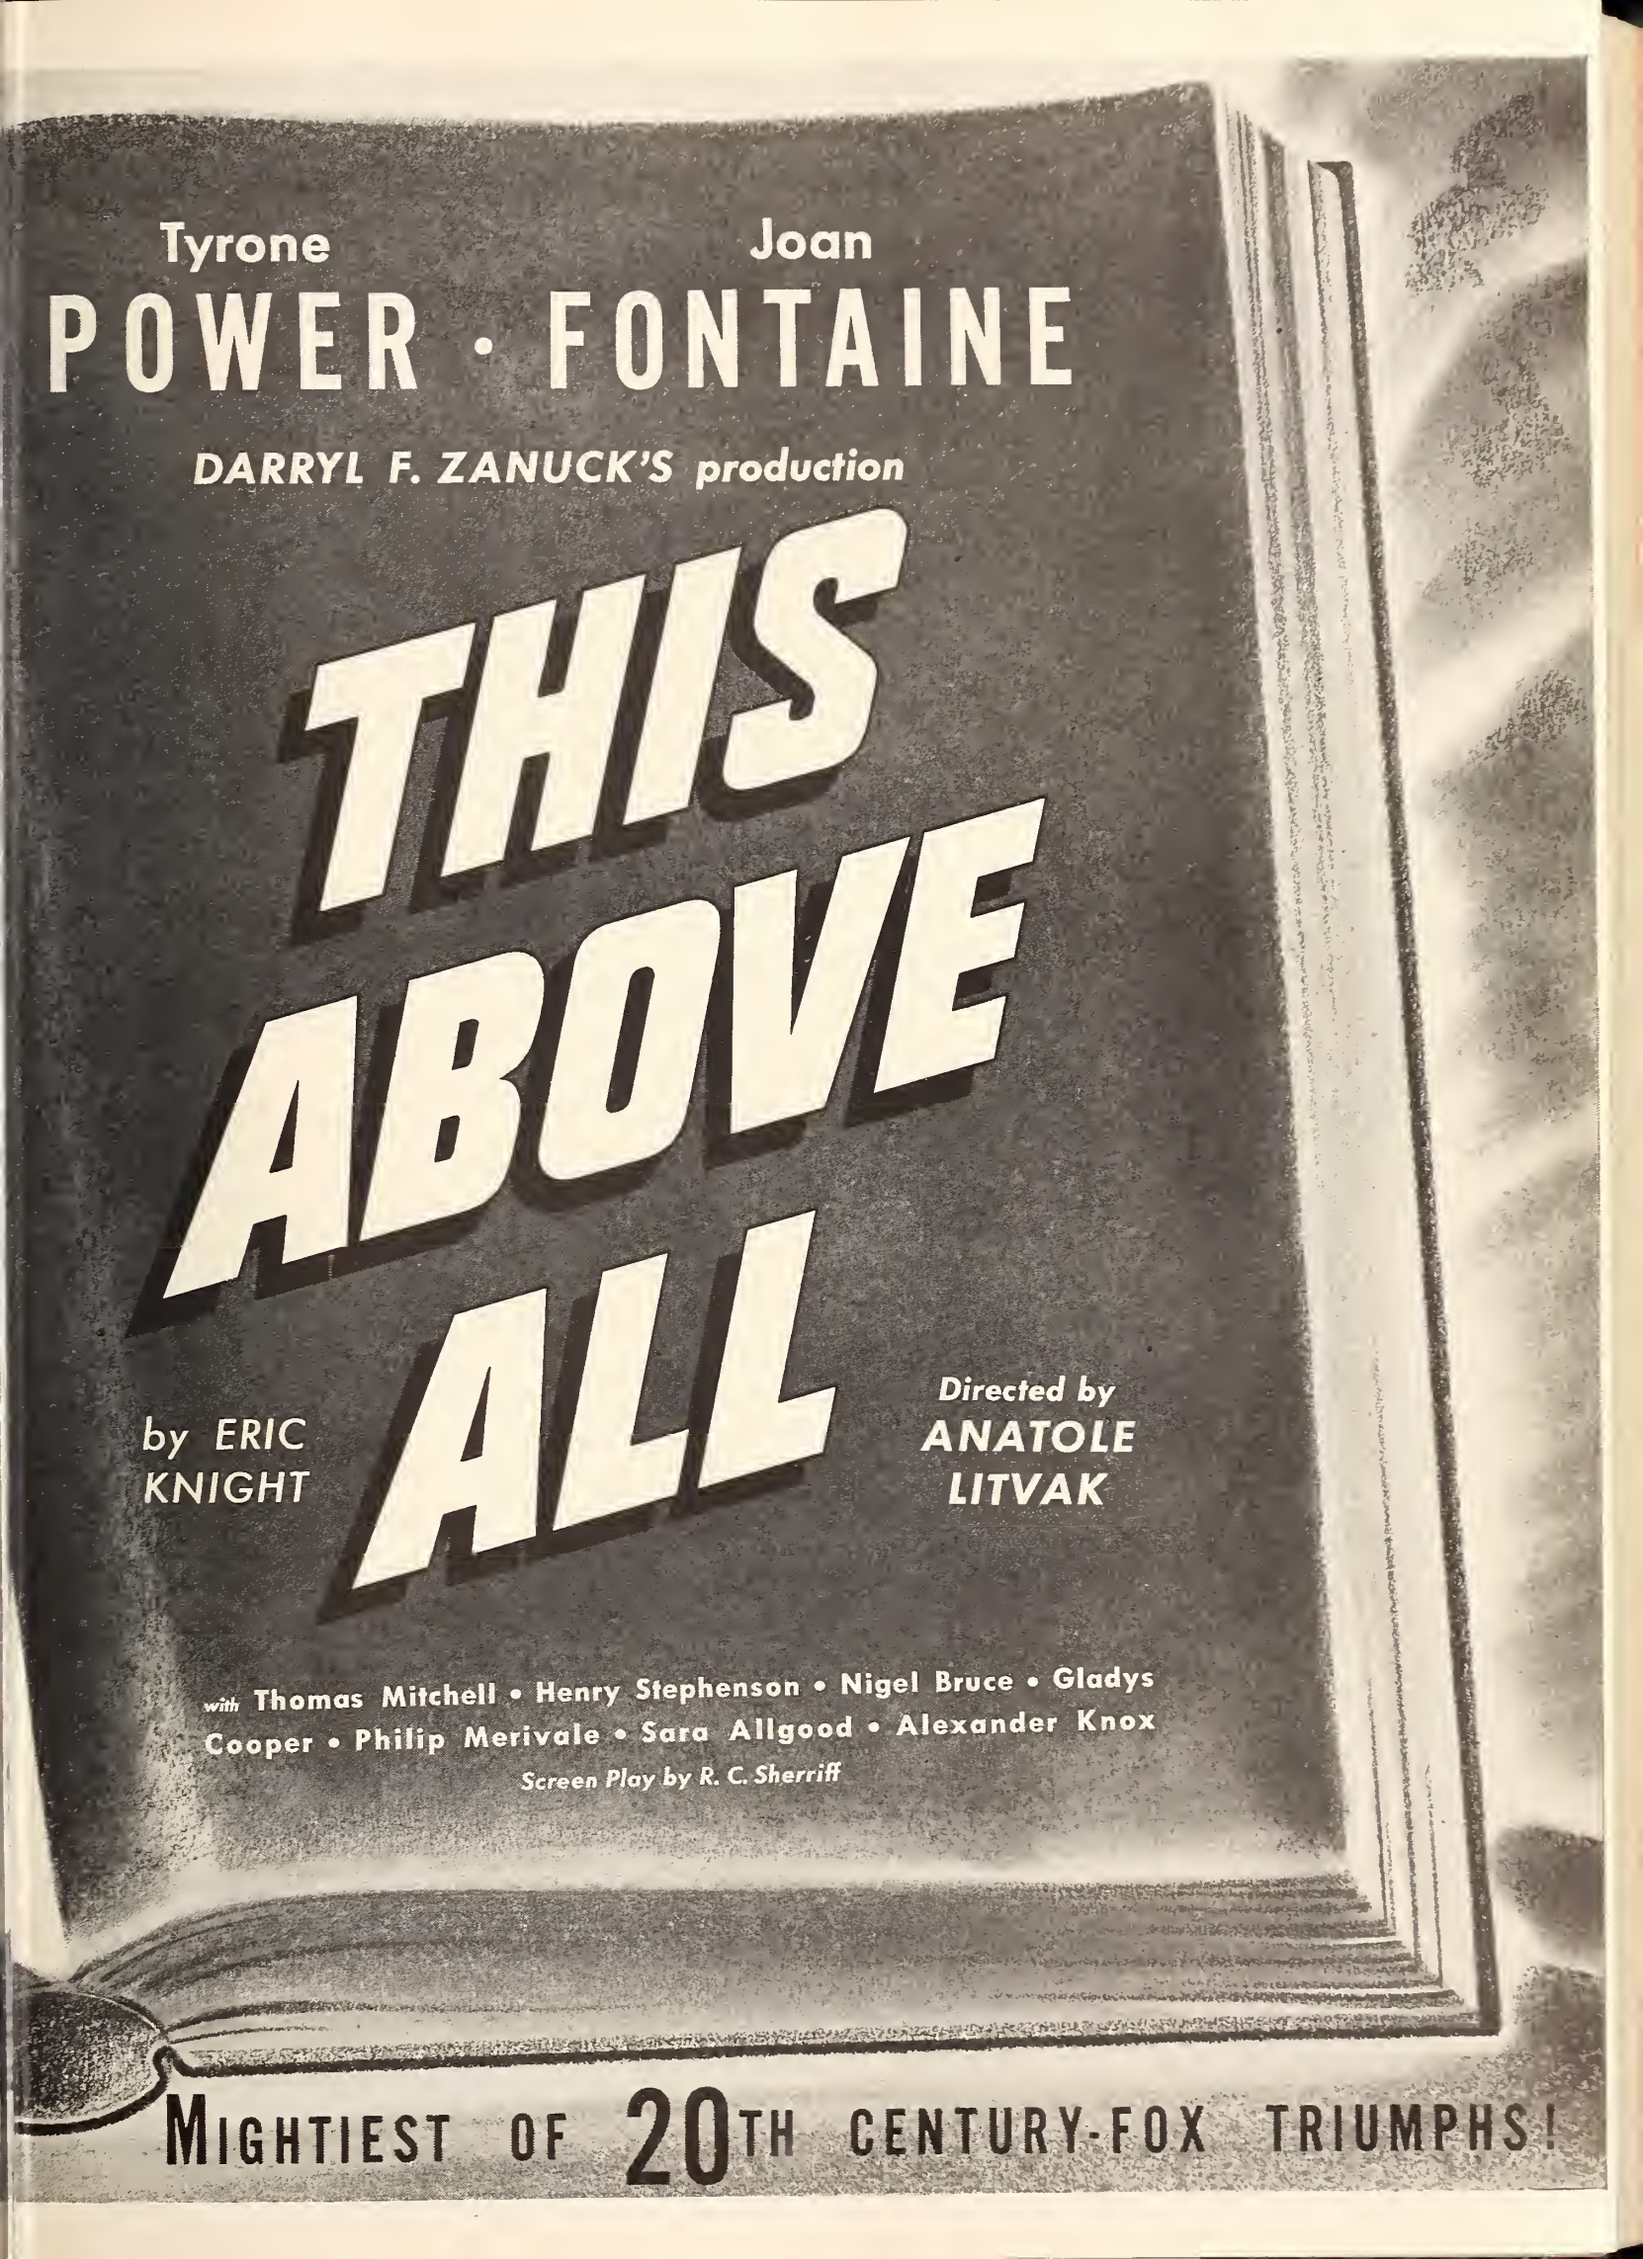
Shipping Priority For South America

New evidence of the importance of motion pictures in the war program was given last week when the Board of Economic Warfare, preparing to put into effect a shipping priority program governing the allocation of space on vessels for exports to the South American republics, gave films the highest rating accorded any of several hundred commodities classified.

With an "A" classification, motion pictures—negatives and positives; features, shorts and newsreels, in both 35 and 16 mm. widths—will take precedence over all but four other of the many commodities rated. Eight-mm. films were given a "B" rating, otherwise most generally reserved for foodstuffs and other necessities. "C" and "D" ratings went to wearing apparel and other less essential commodities. Special air transport ratings apply to newsreels.

Army Forms Title, Story Registry

A "priorities bureau" on titles and Army cooperation on pictures having military themes has been established by Colonel W. Mason Wright, head of the pictorial division of the public relations branch of the War Department. In Hollywood major and independent producers gave Colonel Wright their unanimous approval for the bureau which, he stressed, carries no thought of censorship.



"Purposes of Title-Subject Registration File," he said, "are to make certain that the army is correctly portrayed before audiences of the world; to aid studios by providing a priority list of titles and subjects available and to be of utmost service to the film industry."

Three types of pictures are included; those for which actual army cooperation is requested, such as the use of troops, equipment, airplanes, etc.; those which use backgrounds containing army personnel or material; and those which show actors as officers or soldiers.

MAY ASKS TAXFREE SERVICE TICKETS

Representative Andrew J. May, Kentucky Democrat, introduced a resolution in the House on Monday which would exempt all members of the armed service from payment of federal admission taxes to motion picture theatres or other places of amusement. The resolution provides that all tickets sold to soldiers, sailors and marines, whether at special price or not, shall be exempt from Federal amusement levy.

WAR CUTS SUMMER STOCK SHOWS BY 39 PER CENT

Gas Rationing and Dim-out Cancel Producers' Plans for Stock Companies

The "straw hat" theatre — a perennial source of talent and story material for Hollywood—has been seriosly affected by the war. Transportation difficulties of patrons to summer stock houses, caused by gasoline and tire rationing, is the major wartime factor which has resulted in a 39 per cent drop over last year in the number of summer theatres in operation.

In 1941, there were about 125 straw-hat theatres which maintained one of the best seasons in many years. Forty new plays were tried out, 70 perennials appeared on the boards and some 750 actors and actresses were engaged in summer stock, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of August 2, 1941.

This year, to date, only 48 summer theatres have opened in 12 states, compared to the 125 in 19 states, but observers report that a few more houses on the circuit may open within the next two weeks, if business warrants. Last summer, about 25 theatres constituted serious competition to film houses in and around Boston, but this year only 11 theatres have opened in Massachusetts.

Bumper Crop of New Plays

Indication that the 1942 season would bring a greater crop of new plays is seen in the 23 already scheduled for the boards, compared to the 40 of last year, with many newcomers unannounced, expected to open before the close of the 1942 season.

Summer theatre managers have devised different methods to combat the problem of transportation for their patrons. A few have shifted the location of their houses from the hinterlands to cities and towns. Other managers have adopted a "share-your-car" plan to bring customers to the theatre, and still others have arranged with railroad and bus companies to transport patrons.

A number of straw-hat theatres which were located at seaside resorts, such as the Casino in Newport and others in Connecticut and Massachusetts, have closed down this season because the combination of the transportation problem plus the effect of the dimout on East Coast resort towns was considered too much of a box office deterrent to overcome.

Such perennial favorite theatres on the straw-hat circuit as the Ridgeway Theatre, White Plains, N. Y.; the Playhouse, Martha's Vineyard, Mass.; Artists' Theatre, Provincetown, Mass.; South Shore Players, Cohasset, Mass.; Playhouse, Ogonquit, Maine; Ann Arbor Drama Festival, Ann Arbor, Mich., and the Playhouse, Westport, Conn., have not opened this season, although a few may still announce plans within the next two weeks.

Among the screen players who will be seen on straw-hat boards this summer are: Gloria Swanson, who makes her legitimate stage debut in "Reflected Glory," at the Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y.; Sylvia Sidney, Elissa Landi, Conrad Nagel, Betty Field, Karen Morley, Betty Furness, Michael Whalen, Flora Robson, English stage and screen star; Ruth Chatterton and Ralph Forbes. Gertrude Lawrence, Gracie Fields, Jimmy Savo, Jane Cowl, Fritzi Scheff, Fred Stone and Paul and Grace Hartman are among the stage stars who will appear in summer stock during the season.

New plays which will receive their summer theatre try-outs include:

"Fallen Angels," comedy by Noel Coward, to star Gertrude Lawrence, scheduled for the Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass., August 3rd.

"Jane Eyre," a new dramatization by Helen Jerome, with Sylvia Sidney and Luther Adler, at the Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass., August 10th.

"My Brother's a Hero," by John Farrar, at the Beechwood, Scarborough-on-Hudson, N. Y., which was scheduled to open on Friday night.

"Thought for Food," by Keith Winter, at the Playhouse, New Milford, Conn.

"It's High Time," by David Carey, Cape May Theatre, Cape May, N. J., July 14-18th.

"Three Days to Wait," by Gabriel Walling, Cape May Theatre, Cape May, N. J., July 21-25th.

"Two of You," new play by author unannounced, Cape May Theatre, Cape May, N. J., September 1-5th.

"Pearl Harbor," by Shirland Quin; "Sixth Avenue" by M. C. Bryan, and "Children of Darkness," by Charles Furcolowe, all scheduled to open at the Summer Theatre, Deal.

"Ideal Husbands," comedy by David Cecil Rosentahl, at the Bergen College Barn Theatre, Teaneck, N. J., July 16-18th.

"By Invitation Only," by Elsie Sirota, Playhouse, Boothbay, Maine, July 15-18th.

"He Grew to Grow," by Douglas Manning, Playhouse, Boothbay, Maine, August 5-8th.

"I'd Like to Marry My Wife," by Frank Rossi, Playhouse, Boothbay, Maine, August 26-29th.

"Jazz Age, 11," by Francis Stewart Hall, Playhouse, Ivorytown, Conn., July 7th.

"Don't Wake the Baby," by William Blatt, Playhouse, New Milford, Conn., July 15-18th.

"Birds Without Wings," Elizabeth Miele, Playhouse, New Milford, Conn., July 29-August 1st.

"STRAW-HAT" MOVES TO FILM THEATRE

The gasoline and tire shortage, among other wartime factors affecting this season's summer stock theatre business, prompted Virginia L. E. Franke, of New York, to lease a motion picture theatre for this season's operation.

Miss Franke, who has operated the Skaneateles summer theatre, near Syracuse, leased the Strand in Syracuse, now independently-operated, but formerly in the RKO-Schine pool. The Strand was scheduled to open on Tuesday with summer stock attractions for the season.

BUDGET FOR INTER-AMERICAN FILMS CUT TO $2,704,000

Rockefeller 'Cultural Relations' Committee Had Requested $5,250,000, '42-'43

Continuance of the motion picture activities of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs was assured Monday when Congress in a last minute rush to meet the July 1st fiscal year deadline voted finances for several Government agencies. This included approval of a $28,638,000 fund for the Inter-American commercial and cultural relations program directed by Nelson A. Rockefeller.

A fund of $2,704,000 was earmarked for the "cultural interchange" of films with Latin American republics, and other activities of the motion picture division. The figure represented a slash of more than half in requests for funds to continue and expand the film activities launched by John Hay Whitney. Francis Alstock, formerly Mr. Whitney's aide, is now director of the film program.

The film appropriation was an increase of almost one million dollars, however, in the budget which the unit set up for its first year of operations. For 1942-43 Mr. Alstock and M. R. Whitney had sought more than $5,250,000 in appearances before the Budget Bureau this spring.

Their requests to the Budget Bureau had anticipated a large scale expansion of the Inter-American film programs. Plans in process of formulation at the New York, Washington and Hollywood offices of the film section called for increased production of non-theatrical documentary films; Government participation in regular commercial production in Hollywood and Latin America of theatrical shorts and features with a good neighbor message; and a fostering hand to aid native South American producers.

Also contemplated was an extensive 16 mm distribution system for the United States to circulate films about South America, and other Government screen productions.

Slash Aid to South American Producers

These projects, it appears from the scope of the budget approved by Congress, will be curtailed considerably from what was planned.

Estimates of the motion picture division for 1942-43 include $1,000,000 to be spent in cooperation with the industry; $600,000 on special features for hemisphere-wide distribution, $100,000 for co-production with other American governments; $200,000 for production of non-theatrical films; $100,000 for distribution of non-theatricals, $400,000 for prints, reels and containers, $150,000 for editing, processing and distribution, and $100,000 for newsreel coverage of inter-American news.

The budget for the Motion Picture Society for the Americas, Hollywood office of the Coordinator, was increased to $54,000. The official appropriation for the west coast films office, headed by David Hopkins, was $36,000 last year, according to a report submitted last month to the Senate Committee Investigating Non-Essential Expenditures.

The $400,000 allotment for prints, reels and containers for the films sent southward was the same as the estimate submitted to the Senators but distribution expenses were pared to $100,000 from an estimated $150,000 and the $50,000 estimated as the minimum cost of U. S. non-theatrical distribution was not mentioned in the appropriation.

The allocation of $150,000 for editing, processing and distribution presumably covers the Coordinator's contract with the film library of the Museum of Modern Art, in New York. The Museum received approximately $125,000 last year for its services in editing and shipping pictures for the coordinator.

The budget for co-production with other American governments was hit most heavily. At one time this category included a request for a million dollars to aid in the establishment of a Mexican semi-governmental film industry. The newsreel activities of the office, headed by Jack Connolly, received an increase to $100,000 for the filming and shipping of news material of special interest to South American audiences. Newsreel appropriations this year were about $15,000.

While the total of $28,638,000 given the coordinator was less than Mr. Rockefeller is understood to have asked of the Bureau of the Budget it was the entire amount approved by the latter office and by the House appropriations committee. The Representatives in reporting the measure declared:

"The coordinator's office has been and is rendering, in conjunction with the experienced and talented assistance and advice of the Department of State, a distinguished service toward securing solidarity of the Americas."

$3,600,000 For Radio

The radio division, headed by Don Francisco, received a budget of $3,600,000. It will expend $1,500,000 for local broadcasts in other American republics; $50,000 for development of local broadcasts, $650,000 for point-to-point and short-wave broadcasts; $100,000 for program scripts, $500,000 for transcribed programs, $60,000 for printing schedules of United States short-wave broadcasts, $40,000 for advertising such broadcasts, $600,000 for radio equipment and $100,000 for mobile units.

The coordinator is given an item of $500,000 for "confidential projects," regarding which no disclosure was made.

In the same measure Congress gave the Office of Censorship $26,500,000, and the Federal Communications Commission was given $2,149,876 for its national defense operations.

First Disney South American Tour Films Completed

The first of the pictures which Walt Disney produced from material gathered during his research tour of Latin America last year has been completed.

Mr. Disney announced in Hollywood that the first picture completed by the staff of musicians and artists which accompanied him on his South American trip would be on its way to RKO exchanges in South America this week. It is a musical production, in color, of feature length.

The release combines four cartoon subjects based on the music and atmosphere of Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia and Peru linked with photographic highlights filmed on 16 mm by Mr. Disney during the studio group's tour. A Brazilian version, in Portuguese, will be released under the title, "Alo Amigos," while in the Argentine and other countries a Spanish sound-track version, titled "Saludos", will be shown.

Mr. Disney introduces a new character, distinctly South American, in the Brazilian cartoon, "Aquarela do Brasil," which is part of the production. He is Jose Carioca, a bright feathered parrot drawn from the Latin American nation's folklore. He will share honors with Donald Duck in the reel, which takes its name from the musical success "Water-color of Brazil" ("Aquarela do Brasil") by the Brazilian composer Ary Barrosa.

"Pedro," the Chilean episode, is the story of a little airplane who carries the mail over the Andes. The Argentine pampas are the setting for "El Gaucho Goofy," in which the Disney character learns about cattle punching south of the equator. Donald Duck appears as a tourist in "Lake Titicaca" against Bolivian and Peruvian settings. Spanish and Inca Indian music are used.

Theatre Bond Sales 10 to 15 Millions

Drive Headquarters Starts Tabulation of Results for the First Month

National headquarters for the industry's War Bond and Stamp drive announced on Monday in New York that between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 was estimated to be the amount raised by 15,000 theatres throughout the country for the first month of the campaign. The drive headquarters is now preparing to tabulate reports from all participating theatres for the period from May 30th to June 30th. According to campaign directors, the nation's showmen aim to sell $250,000,000 a year in wartime securities.

A total of $600,000 was purchased during the last four weeks by film patrons attending Loew's theatres, it was announced. Of that amount, $260,640 was in stamps. In 74 New York houses of the circuit, bond and stamp sales totaled $320,612. In some 40 other cities in which Loew's theatres operate, the total was $280,000.

Hollywood Buying $100,000 Weekly

War Bond sales in Hollywood are now averaging $100,000 a week, it is reported by the Motion Picture Committee for Hollywood. The figure is said to be twice that anticipated by the committee, whose job it is to stimulate the sale of war bonds and stamps among all studio employees.

Film theatres of Southern California have sold wartime securities in the amount of $2,043,815, from March 1st to June 13th, according to David Bershon, chairman of the Southern California theatre division of the War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department. Mr. Bershon reported this week that $1,010,000, was realized on bond and stamp sales last month with the opening of the Fremont Theatre in San Luis Obispo.

A total of $150,000 in war bonds was expected from the premiere of "Mrs. Miniver" at the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines on Wednesday night. MGM contributed the picture and the Tri-States Theatre Corp. the house for the benefit show which launched a one-month campaign to sell bonds and stamps. The drive is being sponsored by the Des Moines Retailers War Activities Committee. The bonds were placed on sale last week and the early purchasers were to receive a ticket to the opening with each bond bought, the best seats going to purchasers of bonds in the higher denominations.

Harmon Guest at Seattle Dinner

To stimulate war bond sales in the state of Washington, Seattle exhibitors held a special dinner last Thursday night to honor Francis S. Harmon, executive coordinator of War Activities Committee, and Rev. J. Warren Hastings. Film leaders in the state attended.

Lana Turner, MGM star, is credited with selling $324,000 worth of war bonds and stamps during her two-day stay in Seattle recently, where she appeared at numerous civic entertainments and before war industry employes. Both Johnny Sheffield, MGM's "Tarzan, Jr.," and Veronica Lake, Paramount star, were in Seattle selling bonds last week.

TREASURY STRESSES INDUSTRY SALES

A graphic display designed to show the effort which the film industry is utilizing in the sale of War Bonds and Stamps will be placed in the Treasury Department, it was learned in New York this week, following arrangements completed by Carlton Duffus, industry liaison in the Treasury Department, and Monroe Greenthal, publicity chairman of War Activities Committee.

A 12-foot outline map of the United States, will be hung near Secretary Morgenthau's office and will show photographs of rallies, lobby stunts, parades, newspaper clippings, editorials, etc. Reports of actual sales of bonds and stamps in theatres for the month of June also will be posted on the Treasury Department bulletin board.

Si Fabian, campaign director, has sent out another appeal to exhibitors for more photographs, clippings and other visual indications of what they are doing in the bond and stamp drive. This material should be sent to Oscar A. Doob, editor of the Showmen at War, the publication which War Activities Committee will soon issue, at 1540 Broadway, New York.

Law General Manager Of Associated

Harry Law has been appointed general manager of Associated Theatres, Toronto, Ontario. Mr. Law has had a long career in the industry. He started in with the Dominion Film Exchange, later going to General Film Exchange where he remained for six years. He then joined Universal and served under Clair Hague as manager of the Toronto exchange for 10 years. After serving as assistant general manager at Associated Theatres, Mr. Law moved over to Warners as Ontario sales representative. Before returning to Associated Theatres, he had been with Republic.

RKO Holds Nichols Contract

Dudley Nichols has signed a long-term contract as a producer-director for RKO, effective January 1st, the studio disclosed this week. Mr. Nichols is now producing an untitled picture in collaboration with Jean Renoir under a package deal with RKO.

Boston Unites Relief Agencies in One Office

Boston exhibitors welcomed the organization last week of United Nations Relief, Inc., coordinating all relief agencies into one central office in Boston, including British War Relief, United China Relief, Russian Relief and Greek Relief. Theatremen favor this coordination because it means their patrons will be solicited fewer times for funds and their theatres will not be asked so often to participate in events sponsored by the different relief agencies operating in the same city.

United Nations Relief plans two large amusement events for this summer and early in the autumn, and another for next winter.

The American Red Cross will benefit from the film production of "Time of Your Life," rights to which have been donated by playwright William Saroyan and the Theatre Guild which staged the show in New York a few seasons ago. American Artists, Inc., a non-profit corporation, has appointed Robert C. Sherwood to produce the picture. Five screen stars will donote their services for the film as will its director. Union people, technicians and actors playing small parts will be paid for working on the Saroyan opus which is expected to start production in October. Release is planned for next March to coincide with the annual drive of the Red Cross.

It is expected that the production normally would cost from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000 and that the profits which will be turned over to the Red Cross will be at least $1,000,000.

Army-Navy Drive Nets $1,900,000

A total of $1,900,000 was collected throughout the country's film theatres for Army and Navy Emergency Relief, according to the latest report issued by the campaign headquarters in New York on Monday. A check for $278,191, representing collections in 462 Warner theatres was sent last week by Joseph Bernhard, Warner vice-president, to Si Fabian, treasurer of the Army-Navy Relief committee. Additional remittances received this week at national headquarters included: $3,931 from Standard Theatres Co., Milwaukee; $16,039 from the Fox Wisconsin Circuit, Milwaukee; $13,116 Brandt Theatres, New York; $22,500, Hamrick-Evergreen Theatres, Seattle.

Theatres in Indiana collected a total of $40,895, according to Kenneth Collins, co-chairman of that state's theatre division. Forty houses in Marion County contributed $7,036, and a total of 259 of a possible 360 theatres reported contributions.

In New York, last Thursday, it was announced that Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, withdrew as chairman of the special events committee of the Navy Relief Society with the completion of the major drive for funds for the organization. Mr. Griffis estimated that at least $2,500,000 would be realized from the various events which were held on behalf of the society.

He supervised the Hollywood Victory Caravan, which grossed $675,000, and he also planned the major and minor league baseball schedules which, it is estimated, will add $200,000 to NRS funds. Mr. Griffis sponsored the Katharine Cornell revival of "Candida," which raised $100,000, and he was a participant in the film theatres' campaign collections for Army and Navy Emergency Relief.

EXHIBITORS, LIKE OTHERS, IN MIDST OF DIMOUT DEBATES

Army Hints East Coast Order May Be Extended to 70 Miles Inland

Civil officials and army officers still differed this week over the extent of actual and desired dimouts on both coasts; and exhibitors, as usual, cooperated to the greatest extent, losing in the numerous raid and blackout tests, and in dimming their marquees so that they are useless as advertisements.

Meanwhile, exhibitors continued serving their communities by aiding the rubber salvage drive, even as they had previously aided the collections of aluminum and scrap paper.

The dimout on the east coast, extending ten miles inland, may be expanded to 70, it was rumored, following a press conference last week in Trenton, New Jersey, given by acting governor I. Grant Scott. He said the Army was considering the step.

Meanwhile, exhibitors on both coasts are taking cheer from drastic army regulations against persons on beaches after dark. These regulations are immediately impelled by the shelling of the Washington coastline two weeks ago by a Japanese submarine, and by the landing, in Florida and on Long Island, of German saboteurs, from a German submarine.

It is felt the regulations are one more deterrent to the normal competitors of the atres in the summer: beaches, and their accompanying amusement resorts.

Broadway May Prove "Tourist Mecca"

The automobile, gasoline, and tire rationing, as well as other difficulties in travel, are already being felt in New York's Broadway sector, which this summer is expected to be the haven of far more tourists than ever; and of a vast number of New York inhabitants who have nowhere else to go or who cannot travel.

The city of Cleveland last week experienced its first blackout, from 10:10 to 10:15 p.m. There was no report of business adversely affected.

Boston, where theatres are definitely feeling the effects of a drastic dimout, may undergo a thorough darkening of all street lights for the duration, it was reported this week. Downtown theatres are reported apprehensive that some may be forced to close. It was said last week that their business had been cut 50 per cent by blackouts. Harry Browning is handling theatre interests and arrangements during blackouts.

The "dawn to dusk" blackout in Richmond, Virginia," has not affected business noticeably.

The partial blackout in Philadelphia and 30 Eastern Pennsylvania counties last week affected attendance only mildly. Theatres advertised in newspapers that they would be open as usual.

In Baltimore, William K. Saxton, city manager for Loew's circuit, was freed in Central Police Court, last week, on a charge that lights were permitted in the lobby of the Century Theatre during a recent test blackout. After two wardens testified seeing the lights after the blackout began, the magistrate noted there was no proof the lights were visible from the outside.

All theatre employees in San Francisco who have completed first aid and air raid courses, have received gas masks.

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, underwent its first daylight air raid test last Friday from 11:07 to 11:28 A.M. There was little theatre participation because of the early time; and grosses were unaffected. Lobbies were shelters.

As a result of the Army taking over the Ambassador Hotel in Atlantic City, with at least seven other beachfront hotels under consideration for the housing of army air cadets to be stationed at the resort, the new regulations for summer visitors set up by the Coast Guard provide for what amounts to a 1:30 A.M. curfew, which will rule out all midnight shows for the movie houses here for the duration. Boardwalk strollers are warned, among other things, that they would be subject to questioning if seen on the walk after 1:30 A.M.

Sidney Lust last week answered the President's call for scrap rubber by having his Maryland Theatres stage special "rubber matinees" with admission allowed for a piece of scrap. The results, shown in part above, reached better than five tons. The theatres in the circuit are now official scrap rubber stations.

Theatres Aid Rubber Salvage Campaigns

Free safety and rubber salvage shows were arranged at several Boston theatres of the M & P circuit by District Manager Harry I. Wasserman this week in cooperation with the safety programs of Mayor Maurice J. Tobin and Police Commissioner Joseph P. Tumulty. Programs including motion pictures and safety talks by Safety Officer Walter Owens of the Boston Police Department were held at the Oriental Theatre in Mattapan and the Fairmount Theatre in Hyde Park Monday, the Morton and Codman Square Theatres in Dorchester Tuesday and the Strand and Fields Corner Theatres in Dorchester Wednesday. Admission to these special morning shows was free to all with children.

Rubber shows were also held in Salem and New Bedford, Mass., and Newport, R. I., June 27. Manager Art D'Aveller of E. M. Loew's Strand Theatre, New Bedford, sold the rubber and turned the money over to the USO. Manager Gerald Wagner of Loew's Paramount, Newport, has an Army band to feature his civic rubber jamboree. Manager Joseph Morency of the New Plaza Theatre, Salem, put thep rice of admission at a pound of rubber.

Warner's Stage "Rubber Matinee"

The biggest no-cash show ever experienced by the Warners' Stanley Theatre, Camden, New Jersey, was staged Thursday, June 25th, by the house to aid the rubber salvage drive. Some 2,700 boys and girls brought more than a ton of rubber articles for free admittance to the special morning show. It was the first "rubber matinee" in the area and was arranged by Joseph Murdoch, manager. Similar shows were staged the following week at Warners' Lyric Theatre, same city, and the circuit's Stanley Theatre, Atlantic City.

A special show was held at the Capitol Theatre, Somerville, Massachusetts, by John Concannon, manager, as aid to the collection. Five pounds of scrap rubber was the admission price. The total collected was over 3,500 pounds.

Wisconsin and upper Michigan theatres are helping, making prices of admission bags and baskets of rubber scrap. Working on the committee in charge of the drive are H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager, Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corp., chairman; Harry Perlewitz, business manager, ITPA of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan; Alfred Kvool, Warner Theatres, and Arthur Schmitz of RKO.

'Swing Shift' Shows staged in Mid-West

The RKO Grand theatre in Columbus, Ohio, on Thursday inaugurated a policy of "Victory Shift Shows," from 2 A.M. to 5 A.M., on Thursdays and Fridays of each week for the benefit of the late shift workers in Columbus defense plants. This is the first theatre in central Ohio to adopt such a policy.

Gasoline rationing in the Miami area has benefited subsequent run houses, while hurting downtown theatres. The Wometco circuit's neighborhood theatres have installed bicycle racks in parking lots. They are used in daytime by youngsters; in the evening, by adults.

Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, houses report "theatre parties" gaining favor.

In Hartford, capital of Connecticut, state employment officials predict that state war plants will need 30,000 workers within six months. Theatres already are finding difficulty in securing help, even female.

Meanwhile, all over the East, gasoline rationing itself became the least of the worries of the theatre owner dependent upon car trade. A gasoline "famine" occurred; wholesalers cut deliveries to gasoline stations; holders of gas cards were unable to use them.

Awaited was the new rationing system, to become effective July 22nd. But there was no guarantee that gasoline would be available, even with the issuance of coupon books, the new system.

The industry's activities, changes, and reactions during the war were outlined to Oregon and Washington exhibitors at a meeting in Portland last week.

Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president and chairman of the USO Amusements, Arts and Sports Committee, announced in New York over the week-end the personnel of various committees for USO's war fund campaign.

Schwartz and Irving Lesser as co-chairmen.

The following chairmen also have been appointed in the Motion Pictures Division: Accessories and National Screen, Herman Robbins; Advertising Agencies, Myer Lesser; Columbia Pictures, Louis Barbano; Fan Magazines, Howard Dietz; Film Libraries, Independent Distributors, Industrial Films, Projection Service Companies, and 16 millimeter companies, R. Schwartz of the motion picture committee for USO announced the appointments on Monday, following a meeting at War Activities headquarters in New York.

A total of $2,950,000 has been raised to date by the New York-USO campaign, according to a report by Henry C. Brunie, campaign director. The New York quota is set at $4,450,000.

LOEW'S HONORS "WAR MOTHERS"

Honor to mothers of men in the service is being paid by Loew's New York theatres. Each local house once each week invites a group of mothers, following the show, to a supper and presentation of gifts. Patrons enter the names of eligible women in lobby registration books.

Massachusetts Circuit Makes Personnel Shifts

Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., has made a number of managerial changes in the territory. James M. Jerauld, manager of the Garden theatre, Greenfield, has been named manager of the Pittsfield Western Massachusetts house that was badly damaged by fire earlier in the year and is scheduled to be reopened July 8th.

Claude Frederick will succeed at the Greenfield. Vincent Aldert, assistant manager at the Calvin in Northampton, succeeds Mr. Fredericks as manager of the Paramount in Brattleboro. Joseph Raymond becomes manager of the Arcade in Springfield, where he will succeed George Laby, who has gone to the Palace in Pittsfield, replacing Norman Prager, who resigned to become manager of the Kentucky in Lexington, Ky. Edward M. Dowling, manager of the Capitol in Pittsfield until the fire, has rejoined the company and is now swinging the circuit replacing managers on vacation.

Mississippi Theatres To Open on Sundays

The Grand and Ritz theatres in Natchez, Miss., plan to present Sunday shows hereafter. The Star theatre, independently owned by Charles Morel, started Sunday shows a month ago in response to requests of civic organizations and no effort has been made to invoke Mississippi blue laws to stop operations.

In announcing the Grand and Ritz would present Sunday shows in addition to the Star, James Patterson, president of the Kiwanis Club, said: "Our civic organization has been considering this matter as a civic necessity and the willingness of the theatre owners to offer us films on Sunday should be accepted by the public with appreciation."

20th-Fox Chiefs To View 12 New Films

Twelve productions now being edited or rerecorded at the Twentieth Century-Fox Beverly Hills studio will be ready for screening when Spyros P. Skouras, president; Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of world-wide sales, and Hal Horne, advertising and publicity director, reach the coast. The home office executives were to leave New York Thursday morning. Laudy Lawrence, director of foreign distribution, also was to make the trip.

In addition to the pictures now completed, four features will be shooting and at least five started in the period of the studio conferences with Darryl F. Zanuck, and other production heads. This is said to be the first season that the studio has been so far ahead on product.

After screening the completed pictures, Mr. Connors will announce the releases that are to start off the 1942-43 selling season. Plans for either regional sales meetings or home office conferences with district and branch managers on the new product also will be announced.

The 12 completed productions are: "The Black Swan," "Orchestra Wives," "Footlight Serenade," "Thunder Birds," "The Pied Piper," "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe," "A-Haunting We Will Go," "Twelve Men in a Box," "Little Tokyo, U. S. A.," "Careful Soft Shoulders," "Berlin Correspondent" and "Tales of Manhattan."

The following four features are before the cameras: "Iceland," "Girl Trouble," "China Girl" and "Man in the Trunk." Five out of the seven following features ready for shooting are expected to start within the next two weeks: "Manila Calling," "Springtime in the Rockies," "Ten Dollar Raise," "That Other Woman," "Ox-Bow Incident," "Buried Alive" and "Meanest Man in the World."

Realignment of 20th-Fox sales territories from three divisions to two was disclosed at mid-week with the announcement that A. W. Smith, Jr., was named Eastern sales manager. William C. Gehring remains as Western sales manager; William Sussman, previously Eastern division manager, has been assigned to special duties at the home office, and William Kupper continues as executive assistant to Mr. Connors.

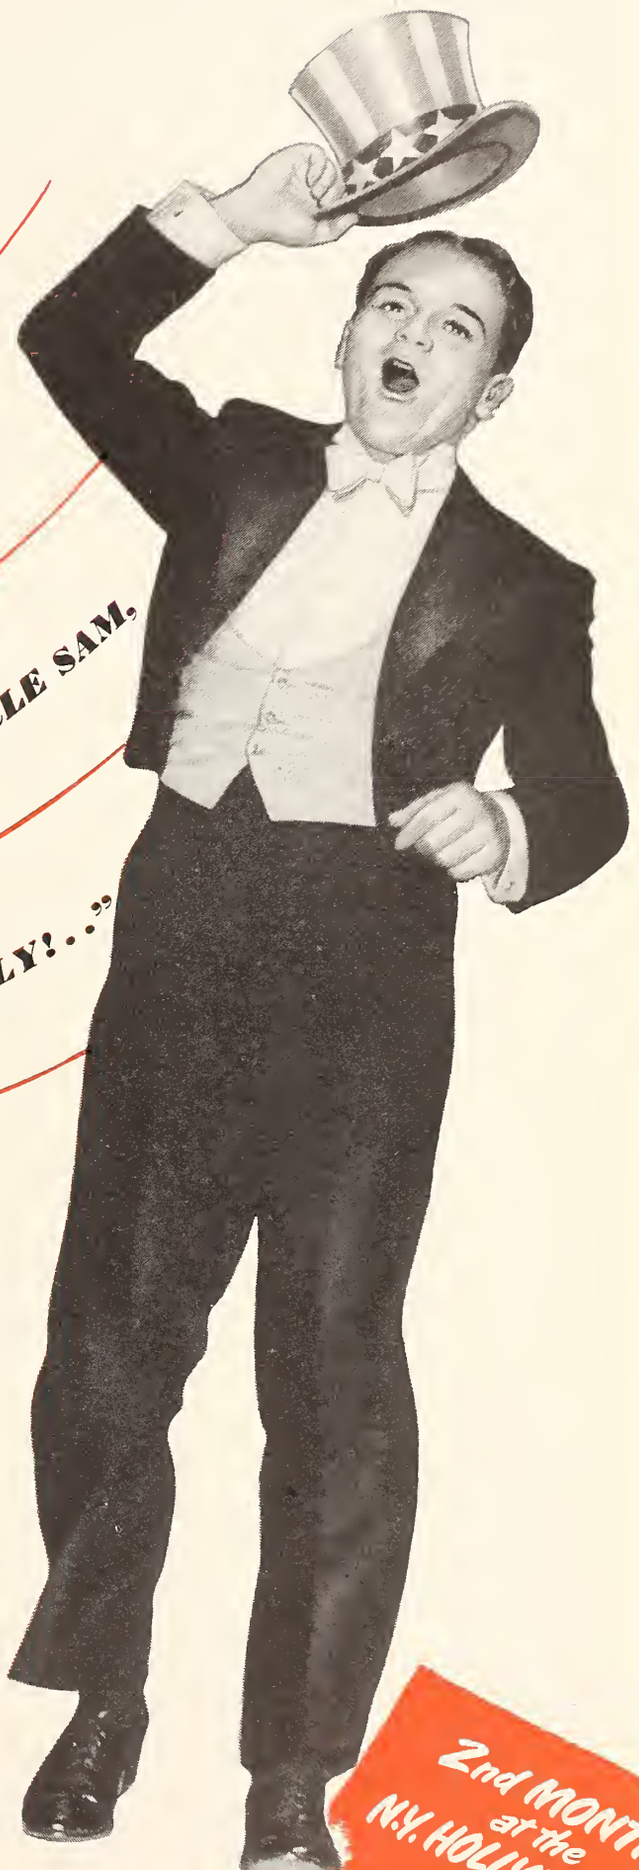
Warner Meeting Postponed

Meeting of Warner Brothers district managers, originally scheduled for July 2-3 at the home office, has been postponed to July 9-10, Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, said this week in New York on his return from a two week cross-country tour.

Mr. Kalmenson will preside at the meeting. Joseph Bernhard, vice-president and general manager, will address the gathering. Other home office executives attending will include Roy Haines, Arthur Sachson, A. W. Schwalberg, Norman H. Moray and Mort Blumenstock.

Conferences of United Artists owners and executives were to be held on the coast this week following the arrival there of Edward C. Raftery, president, and Gradwell Sears and Arthur Kelly, who left New York early in the week.

RKO Convention Set for July 27th



Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures, on Tuesday announced that the company would have a meeting of the sales force starting July 27th at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City. The delegates will include all district managers, branch managers, salesmen and home office representatives.

Theatres Awarded Defense Emblems

Exhibitors adjudged to be cooperating 100% with the Amusement Industries Committee of Los Angeles are posting in the lobbies or foyers, in plain view of the cash customers, Emblems of Excellence issued them this week for this purpose.

Posting of the emblems is no expression of vanity. It is a measure of civil defense, serving the function of notifying the public of the precautions for its safety taken by the Theatre Defense Bureau, prime unit in the A.I.C., and thus acquainting the population at large, as advised by the Los Angeles Defence Council, with the general availability of dependable refuge in war emergency.

The Emblem is in blue and red against white, 10 inches wide by slightly less long, and reads, under an eagle insignia emblazoned "Four Your Safety," as follows:

This Certifies that (blank) Theatre is Fully Organized and Equipped for the War Emergency in Compliance with All Safety Regulations of the Amusement Industries Committee in conjunction with the Los Angeles Defense Council and the Theatre Defense Bureau.

Signatures of the chairman and director of the authenticating organizations follow the above. Circles bounding it on four sides document endorsement by the police and fire departments and the presence on the premises of an air raid warden and a complete, trained first aid staff.

Exhibitors displaying the Emblem have acquired right to do so by complying with requirements of five organizations, apart from their own. These are the Committee on Red Cross Training, the War Activities Committee on Films, the Industry Committee for Sale of War Bonds and Stamps, the municipal departments of fire and police. They must also have pledged complete cooperation in the showing of all Victory films.

The "Bell" Rings

Long in preparation and subject of much discussion both as book and as a property for filming, Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" went before the cameras as highlight of a week which saw start of 14 features, raising the production level to 54.

In the cast, with more to be added in the course of a shooting period estimated at 120 days, are Gary Cooper, Zorina, Akim Tamiroff, Katina Paxinou, Mikhail Rasunny, Joseph Calleia, Eduardo Ciannelli, Fortunio Bonanova, Victor Varconi, Eric Feldany, Leo Bulgakoff, Feodor Chaliapin, Jr., Vladimir Sokoloff, Frank Puglio, Jose Tortosa, Lilo Yarson, Alex Granach, Duncan Rinaldo, Leonid Snegoff, Jean Del Val and Martin Garralaga, a test for any showman's marquee.

Sam Wood is engineering the project as producer and director.

Hopkins Quoted On Film Value

It's being considered policy hereabouts at this time to carry on without publicity such consultations and conferrings as accompany, in war time, the planning and production of pictures rated useful or the reverse in ways apart from the commercial, but a communication credited to David Hopkins, Motion Picture Society for the Americas representative here, has been quoted for publication by Universal.

The statement released to the press quotes Mr. Hopkins as writing to Robert Fellowes, scheduled to produce "Pittsburgh," a Marlene Dietrich-Randolph Scott-John Wayne vehicle described as "based upon the importance of coal tar products in the war effort," in these words:

"Films which depict the industrial strength of the United States and the conversion of that strength to war-time production are invaluable in our efforts to consolidate the Americas into one unified force for democracy. They give the people of the other Americas assurance of our ability to defend the western hemisphere and to win the war."

Marshall Assigned to 'StarSpangledRhythm'

George Marshall's assignment to direct Paramount's "Star Spangled Rhythm" is counted about the stiffest test of skill, patience and tact passed out since the studio produced "If I Had a Million," which chore was distributed among a half dozen or more directors.

Handling two stars in a picture is rated normal, three a bit of a problem, four a triumph in diplomacy and more than that number a miracle. There are something like 20 stars in this number, up to now and with additions not improbable.

Director Marshall's experience includes direction of such pictures as "The Goldwyn Follies," "The Ghost Breakers," "Hold That Co-Ed," "Destry Rides Again," "Love Under Fire," "Nancy Steele Is Missing," "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," "Texas," "The Valley of the Sun," "When the Daltons Rode," "Pot O'Gold" and "Valley of the Sun," a variety of undertakings which the experts accept as evidence of ability to take the present assignment in stride.

BRITISH PROPAGANDA FILMS STIR DISTRIBUTION FIGHT

Exhibitors Blame Distribution Setup for Missed Showings in Some Houses

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

As the war takes progressive shape and its machinery becomes more urgent in its pace, British exhibitors, as any other body of the community, are finding the process of adjustment progressively complex. Each week new obstacles arise to easy progress and whilst many problems prove increasingly soluble, others become more difficult.

Among the later riddles which the exhibitor has been called upon to consider are those of propaganda, of fuel rationing, and, not least of all, of quota film supply. On all of these fronts, currently, C.E.A. minds have been called to consideration, on each further exploratory action is in full process.

Propaganda has for the greater part of the war been an activity in which the British exhibitor has been a ready and valuable ally. The screening, for some hundred odd weeks, gratuitously and with goodwill, in every program, of a five minute M.O.I. propaganda short, has been not least of the services rendered. It has brought Government publicity to a weekly audience of 24,000,000 at least.

Now war conditions themselves have thrown a monkey wrench into the machinery, to the discomfiture of the M.O.I. and the embarrassment of the exhibitors.

Not all exhibitors, says the M.O.I.'s Film Division chief, Jack Beddington, are observing the agreement to screen the five minuters in every program. A survey of some 393 picture houses produced the alarming revelation that only 199 of them were doing so. At least 143, said Beddington, had no excuse.

No Organization Of Distribution

To this challenging upper-cut from the M.O.I. fist, however, British exhibitors have a reply. It is that nobody is to blame so much as the M.O.I. itself—even though the war condition generally may have provoked the state of affairs. Some exhibitors, frankly and without demur, have alibied themselves on the grounds that they have not time, that programs have been too long. Others, however, have criticized the distribution arrangements, chided the M.O.I. for its lack of organization in this regard, claimed they cannot show the films if they have not been passed on from their previous runs.

Out of this situation three factors have emerged. Most notable is the likelihood that the five minute idea may in the future be set aside in place of one wherein the M.O.I., instead of passing out these weekly miniatures, would give the picture houses every month a two reeler which would be shown on the same gratuitous basis. There are exhibitor objections, but there is, too, much exhibitor, notably much circuit, support for the idea. It is probably not disfavored in the M.O.I. itself.

Such films could, it is claimed, be nearer the accepted standards, do the Ministry's propaganda work as effectively as the five minute reels which to a great extent are redundant, inasmuch as the war is adequately covered in newsreels and elsewhere. The whole situation is due for discussion between M.O.I. and C.E.A. officers.

Meanwhile the exhibitor is being enjoined by his Association strictly to observe the agreement and screen the five minute films, and thus to retain the industry's prestige as a valuable national service. So, too, will the Films Division be asked to investigate these complaints of distribution disorder and do something appropriate about it.

Supervision Hinted by MOI

A two reeler a month would probably cut the M.O.I.'s screen time by 50 per cent. But it would also save considerable raw stock footage.

Brendan Bracken in the Commons not very long ago expressed his satisfaction with the way exhibitors were helping the M.O.I. on a voluntary basis, but reserved the right to take other action if they did not toe the line. Mr. Beddington's complaint likewise contained a veiled hint that the voluntary system might not be impeccable. The hints are not lost on the C.E.A. leaders—their ultimate decisions will be colored by the knowledge.

A more material worry facing the British picture house at present in the matter of fuel and lighting. It is not unlikely that if any form of fuel rationing is brought in cinemas, along with other places of entertainment, will be rationed on the basis of previous consumption figures. Meanwhile picture houses are not able to purchase more than a ton of coal at one time, without a special local permit from the authorities. Storage for Winter purposes thus is increasingly difficult.

Meanwhile picture houses being called upon to cut their usage of interior lighting, will talk with the Board of Trade shortly on how this can be done. The C.E.A. has its own ideas and its practical proposals including the following:

(1) Cutting out all proscenium lighting.

(2) Reducing the lighting of auditoriums and vestibules, partly by the replacement of cornice lamps by pendants.

(3) Reducing lighting during cleaning hours.

(4) Confining vacuum cleaning to the auditorium.

They disapprove of any cut in the projection light, or in power used for theatre ventilation.

The rationing of chocolates and sweetmeats affects picture houses in Britain, where patrons who want to spend a shilling or two on a packet of candy or a bar of chocolate will have to pass over the appropriate coupons. The C.E.A. have pointed out the impracticability, or, at best, difficulty of such transactions in the darkened auditorium, suggested it will just lead patrons to avoid trouble by buying their candies elsewhere.

Consider Night Shows For War Workers

In lighter vein has come the news that the Ministry of Labor, whose activities have so embarrassingly drained the cinemas of essential staff, are now suggesting that picture houses might make arrangements for special performances for the benefit of night shift workers. The reply of the C.E.A. has been simple if sardonic—that until the labor situation is eased instead of aggravated, they see no way of extending playing time beyond the present normal hours.

Not least of all the headaches from which the British exhibitor, in this third year of war, is presently a victim is that brought about by product shortage, particularly the supply of British films vis a vis the Quota Act. The figures of Quota registrations this last year give some indication why there should be doubts among exhibitors whether it will be possible within the present quota year—ending for exhibitors on October 31st—to meet the statutory obligations.

Fillipo del Guidice, who last week was made managing director of Two Cities Film Company, next week will announce considerable expansion of his company's activities. It is reported a major financial deal has been arranged for a large production program with leading stars, studio options and stories, which will enable the firm to reach the world market. Additions to Two Cities board of directors also are expected.

352 BRITISH THEATRES CLOSE SINCE WAR

Since the outbreak of war the number of British picture houses closing down for various reasons has varied. At June 1st this year out of a total of 5,037 cinemas in the United Kingdom, only 352 remained out of operation.

Reasons for closure were:

Damage by enemy action	123
Cinemas in enemy hands (Channel Isles)	7
Bad business	150
Redundant and unlikely to open until after the war	18
Requisitioned by Government	34
Damaged by fire	16
Collapse through heavy snowfall	1
Closed for structural alterations which cannot be carried out during war	3

Company Heads Cleared on Bioff Payments

To an intently listening courtroom of industry lawyers and Paramount officials N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Carroll G. Walter last Friday read, for 50 minutes, a voluminous opinion which disposed of charges of misconduct and illegality in the payment of $100,000 to Willie Bioff and George E. Browne by Paramount directors and officers and dismissed the suit with costs and on the merits.

Consideration of every point raised by the dissenting stockholders led the court to state, in effect, that the payments were a form of extortion and not bribery; that the officers making the payments and more particularly Austin C. Keough had no other sensible recourse; and finally that the victims of extortion were committing no crime in meeting the demands of unscrupulous men.

Early this week, Alfred J. Talley, attorney for the stockholders, announced that he would prosecute an appeal to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Mr. Talley, who also represents stockholders suing Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox Corp. in parallel suits, said he would move for the trial of these actions without first waiting for an appellant ruling on the Paramount case.

Keogh Cleared of Bribe-Giving

An inkling of how the court would decide the case was given early in the opinion when the court, in outling the facts surrounding the payments, accepted the version given by Mr. Keough in his testimony. Striking then at the heart of the dispute, Justice Walter said: "Upon all the facts I have no hesitancy or difficulty in finding and deciding that Paramount, or, more specifically, Keough, was not the giver of a bribe but a submitter to extortion.

"The essence of bribery is the voluntary giving of something of value to influence the performance of official duty," the court continued. "Here, the giving of money was not voluntary and was not given to influence the performance of official duty. There is not the slightest evidence that this duly appointed representative of a labor organization was, or even pretended to be, under any legal duty to cause a strike."

Submission to Extortion "No Crime"

The stockholders had vigorously contended that the payment of extortion was in itself a crime but Justice Walter thought not. "Succumbing to xtortion is not a crime," he said.

Along the same vein but on the question of public policy, Justice Walter said: "To say that to permit corporation officers to use corporate funds to buy off racketeers is contrary to public policy because likely to produce or increase racketeering is appealing to one's feelings of moral principles. but as applied to this case it involves the fallacious assumption that business corporations owe a duty to the public to prevent racketeering at their own expense. I do not think it can be said that public policy requires that corporate officers be thus required to serve two masters. The law always has treated the submitter to illegal extortion as a victim rather than as a wrongdoer or an outrager of public policy."

The court next inquired whether it was practicable for the Paramount officials to have done other than meet the Browne-Bioff demands. Paramount might have sought a civil injunction to ward off the threatened strike, Justice Walter said, but this remedy was slow and uncertain and did not meet the "urgency of the situation."

"So, too, the possibility of entrapping Bioff through passing marked bills by prearrangement with the district attorney," the opinion continued, "not improperly impressed Keough as perhaps being itself an incendiary bomb which would start the conflagration he sought to avoid, not because of any lack of effective cooperation on the part of any District Attorney but because successful entrapment might have brought revenge and retaliation in measure abundant and drastic."

In later ratifying the payments made by Mr. Keough, the board of directors conclusively made his actions theirs, Justice Walter declared. Mr. Keough had acted alone but in "good faith," the opinion said. "In yielding to Bioff's demands and making the payments, he acted upon the belief, honestly and in good faith entertained by him, that in so doing he was promoting the interests of the corporation he was serving, and by saving it from financial losses far in excess of $100,000 and perhaps from actual bankruptcy. The facts and circumstances at the time known to him afforded a reasonable basis for that belief."

Mills Resigns ASCAP Post

E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, resigned on Monday, effective July 1st, following a meeting of the board of directors held in the Society's New York offices last Thursday. It is understood that Mr. Mills shortly will accept a post with the Government. His $35,000-a-year position, in which he had direct charge of ASCAP's foreign relations and held authority in a consulting capacity, will be discontinued, it was learned. It is understood that Ascap will settle a year's salary on his contract.

Mr. Mill's resignation is another move in the reorganization of ASCAP which followed its 10-month war against the radio networks last year. In April of this year, Gene Buck, former president of the society, was defeated for re-election and was succeeded by Deems Taylor. At the same time, the board of directors voted complete executive authority in John G. Paine, general manager.

With Society for 15 Years

Mr. Mills was associated with ASCAP for more than fifteen years and was its general manager until two years ago when Mr. Paine was appointed to that position. It is reported that he tendered his resignation following failure of the board to clarify his status in the administrative set-up of the society.

Prior to his association with ASCAP, Mr. Mills was with the Inter-State Amusement Company for three years; the Mutual Film Corp., one year, and president of the Radio Music Company for two years. Before that, he was engaged in various theatrical enterprises.

ASCAP's board of directors last Thursday ordered payment of the regular quarterly dividend to its membership, which is estimated will be between $1,000,000 and $1,100,000, when the society's books are closed for the month of June. An ASCAP official indicated on Monday that the 1942 dividend payments probably will amount to $4,000,000 by the end of the year.

It is understood that one of the matters discussed at the board meeting was the reclassification system of the membership. A meeting of member representatives probably will be called within a week to work out a new system of payment which would be more "equitable" to ASCAP'S "little fellows." The plan, it is said, is a combination of the best features of the proposals submitted to the writers' group which has been working on the problem.

Meanwhile, it was learned in New York on Monday that the society might face litigation involving alleged violation of the Government's consent decree, if it continues to refuse permission to its writer-members to grant gratuitous performance rights to radio. According to the decree, entered March, 1941, ASCAP must permit its members to license radio without performing rights' fees. If not, the Department of Justice may start contempt proceedings in the federal courts and ask ASCAP to correct alleged violations or suffer whatever penalties the court might dictate.

On Monday, an ASCAP spokesman declared that the organization intended "to abide by every provision of the decree" and to observe whatever interpretation Thurman Arnold's office placed on the conditions of the decree.

ADMISSION PRICES AND "MRS. MINIVER"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces the early availability of "Mrs. Miniver," a picture conceded by many to be one of the greatest in the history of our industry.

Some exhibitors have advocated its presentation at advanced admission prices. The merit of the picture surely deserves this recognition.

Nevertheless, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer desires this film to be played to the greatest number of people in the shortest possible space of time.

This picture really belongs to the people.

For this reason we have decided to offer "Mrs. Miniver" to our customers without any provision for increased admission prices to the public.

Liaison Aides Appointed by Committee

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America's Eastern Public Relations Committee, comprising the advertising and publicity directors of the major companies, this week announced that 22 men employed in publicity and advertising work in key cities throughout the country had accepted invitations to serve as liaison men in the field for the committee. About 15 additional field representatives are to be designated.

Those who have accepted are: Frank Henson, Loew's, Akron; Charles Smakwitz, Warners, Albany; E. E. Whitaker, Fox Theatre, Atlanta; Charles B. Taylor, Shea's, Buffalo; Walter Kessler, Loew's, Canton, O.; W. K. Hollander, B. & K., Chicago; E. V. Dinerman, RKO, Cincinnati; Ed J. Control To End Star Symbols

The use of stars or other reviewers' symbols in New York is expected to end with the close of the run of "The Gold Rush," at the Globe theatre this week, at which time a new policy will be inaugurated by distributors giving them the right to approve the manner in which their films are advertised to the public.

The former voluntary agreement of major company advertising and publicity directors to refrain from use of the star symbols in their advertising has been replaced by the new policy of distributor control of the advertising through the exhibition contracts, it was reported. Heretofore, this advertising supervisory right has not been enforced by the distributors, which has permitted the Globe to continue to use the four-star advertising even though the picture advertised is distributed by United Artists, which has subscribed to the ban.

In the future, it was learned, the practice will be to include in the exhibition contract the right to approve or disapprove the advertising copy which the theatre will use during the picture's run. It is assumed in advertising quarters that no copy employing the reviewers' symbols will be approved.

Advertising directors take the position that the use of such symbols is against the best interests of the industry, in that it brands the bulk of product which does not receive the maximum appraisal as inferior.

Editors Polled on News Preference

Motion picture, magazine and radio editors are being queried by Twentieth Century-Fox regarding their editorial preferences in motion picture press releases and special service feature material, in a poll now being conducted by Dick Condon of Hal Horne's 20th Century-Fox advertising and publicity department.

On Wilkes-Barre Board

John Galvin, manager of the Irving theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and John Kenworthy, of Local 325, IATSE have been named to the city's motion picture Examining Board.

Columbia To Reissue "Lost Horizon"

Columbia will reissue "Lost Horizon," under the title of "Lost Horizon of Shangri La." The picture, produced and directed by Frank Capra, and starring Ronald Colman, is based on the novel by James Hilton. Both book and picture have as their principal location the mythical lamasery of Shangri La, in the Himalayan Mountains.

New advertising, publicity and exploitation material is being prepared, in which the importance of Shangri La in the title and action of the story will be stressed.

SEC Lists More Salaries

Bing Crosby received $300,000 from Paramount Pictures last year to rank among the highest paid persons in the United States, according to a report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mr. Crosby augmented his picture income with $100,640 from Decca records and an undisclosed amount from his radio work. His earnings put him second behind Louis B. Mayer, Loew's production head, who was paid $704,426.

Other Paramount salaries listed included Fred MacMurray, $299,333, and Bob Hope, $294,166. Paramount also paid George C. de Sylva $69,945 as a share of gross receipts.

Soviet Picture Has Premiere

"This Is the Enemy!" (formerly known as "Counter-Attack") was to have its American premiere at the Stanley theatre, New York, Friday. Bearing the sub-title, "Episodes in the Peoples' War Against Hitler," the film portrays the resistance of the civilian population in Poland, Yugoslavia, and occupied Russian territories to the Nazi invaders.

It is the first Soviet film on which two major studios, Lenfilm of Leningrad, and Mosfilm of Moscow, have collaborated. Six Soviet directors participated in its production.

Modern Art Museum Adds Extra Show

The Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art instead of showing one motion picture program at 4 P. M. daily has inaugurated two showings daily with the first at 3 P. M. and the second at 5:30 P. M., including Saturdays and Sundays.

Equal Representation

Will H. Hays, MPPDA president, and Charles Francis Coe, vice-president and general counsel, are inaugurating a new schedule under which each will spend approximately half of each year in New York and the other half in Hollywood.

Mr. Hays left for the Coast this week and will remain there until Labor Day. On his return to New York, Mr. Coe will go to the coast and spend the following several months there.

Friedgood, Davis Join Fox

Hal Horne, director of advertising and exploitation for 20th Century-Fox, has added Morton Friedgood and Ellen Davis to the home office publicity staff. Mr. Friedgood is from the United Artists press department.

Two Join Buying Unit

The Fox theatre, Duncannon, Pa., and the West Shore, New Cumberland, have joined the Affiliated Theatres booking and buying service in Philadelphia.

'IA' Classifies Workers in Exchanges

Clerical workers in exchanges belong in its "B" locals, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees maintained this week. At present workers in those exchanges signed by the IA locals are in the "back rooms," inspectors, shippers, and the like.

The only obstacle which the Alliance may face is that clerical workers are also claimed by the American Federation of Labor's Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers, and Assistants union, and by the C. I. O..'s United Office and Professional Workers of America.

The AFL office workers' union has a foothold in the St. Louis exchanges of Paramount and United Artists, but in New York IATSE circles, it was said this week, the jurisdiction there would be cleared after conferences between the office workers' local 17707, and the IATSE Local B-1.

The CIO union has office workers in the distributor home offices, New York; but has no official representation in the exchanges there, yet.

In that city, the RKO circuit publicists last week voted, 14-0, under National Labor Relations Board auspices, to join the Screen Publicists Guild, which has become affiliated with the UOPWA, as Local 114.

Its charter, granted last week, gives it jurisdiction over "all motion picture publicists, theatre publicists, radio publicists, and all others in similar and related categories in Greater New York and vicinity." It thus is the CIO's third film industry union, in the east, the others being the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, and the Screen Readers Guild.

Postpone Meeting On Amalgamation

In New York, the meeting to amalgamate Local 306 of the IATSE, and the country's strongest projectionists' union; and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, independent Progress has been postponed to July 13th. The unions have been rivals 10 years.

Local 1, stagehands, of New York, is conferring with theatres for renewal of contracts which expired January 31st. Terms of those contracts have been observed since then.

The clerical workers of National Screen Service, New York, trailer manufacturers, will vote next Tuesday on acceptance of local 109 as their bargaining agent.

The CIO is reported attempting to organize 16 mm. projectionists. Intimations of this come from Springfield, Massachusetts, where the national union is said to have granted a charter of Local 320, "non-theatrical operators." The IA local in that city is 186.

The CIO SOPEG Local 113, theatre managers, elected the following officers in Newark: George Kelly, president; Marty Ingram, vice-president; Louis Stein, recording secretary; Harold Belgard, corresponding secretary; Gene Genthon, treasurer; Albert Finkel, sergeant-at-arms; Nat Garber, Jack Levy, Jack Hagerty, trustees; Morton Bratter, Edward Batlan, Charles Bechtold, executive board. The men are Warners employees.

The American Federation of Musicians' ban against making of records and electrical transcriptions after July 31st does not affect studios or theatres, a spokesman for James Petrillo, president, said in New York Monday.

CANADIAN CENSOR LAUDS INDUSTRY FOR WAR EFFORT

Ontario Board Praises Industry for "Living Up to War Responsibilities"

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

More of praise than criticism is to be found in the long-delayed report of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors for the government year ending March 31st.

Apart from noting favorable increases for the year, the Board stepped out of character to commend the motion picture industry, for its war effort, it said, measured up to wartime responsibilities insofar as providing entertainment and the furtherance of the cause of the United Nations was concerned.

The year was marked by an outstanding development in the production of films for national purposes by the Federal Government but the Ontario Censor Board suggested that "success which has attended its efforts should not be marred by any attempt whatsoever to make use of this valuable asset to serve the personal or political interests of any individual or party." The policy of the Ontario censors has long been opposed to any move which would attempt to pervert the screen to the promotion of private or political interests.

Cites Industry Cooperation

Pointing to the increase in 16 mm. films, the Ontario Board offered praise to the Canadian industry for its war co-operation, declaring that much of the increased use of narrow films was due to the providing of entertainment in many camps of the armed forces by the Motion Picture Committee for the Troops in Training. Members of the army, navy and air forces are provided with screen entertainment concurrently with the general public and the industry's committee cooperates with the Y.M.C.A., Salvation Army, Knights of Columbus and Canadian Legion, through which some 60 camps have film shows for which no admission is charged enlisted men. For its part, the censor board had adopted the policy of waiving all censorship fees on films for this purpose.

The newsreels are praised for keeping the public informed rapidly on world-wide events, the task of this branch of the business having become more arduous because of the spread of the conflict to all parts of the world. The Board reported: "The newsreel and the motion picture have been a bond of contact between families in this Dominion and their fighting fathers and sons. In spite of the burdens imposed upon them, the newsreel services of the motion picture have found their way clear to chronicle weekly events of national significance."

The termination of the Ontario Government training school for projectionists, which was opened more than a year ago to insure high standard of qualification, was announced in the following paragraph: "During the fiscal year under review, the Department conducted a school for the training of motion picture projectionists. The number of enrollments and the results obtained were very gratifying but due to the fact that the majority of young men are now engaged in factories producing war supplies or have enlisted for military service, it is proposed to suspend operation of the school for the duration."

The report revealed that the number of licensed theatres in Ontario had increased by 17 to 417 at March 31st and it was said that the number would probably have been much larger had the Federal Government not restricted theatre construction to conserve materials. Alterations, some of a major nature, were completed under the board's supervision in approximately 25 theatres.

Board Examined 2,084 Films

During the year the number of 35 mm. film subjects submitted for examination increased to 2,084, as compared with a total of 1,938 in the 1940-41 period. Three features, two British and one American, were rejected by the board, these being the first to have been permanently condemned in three years. The identities of the rejected features were not disclosed, beyond the point that the banned U. S. picture was of the gangster type "and could not be regarded in its existing state as a topic of entertainment value under wartime conditions."

Relations between Canada and Vichy France were touched upon lightly in the report by the statement that the one French feature which had been examined and approved "was made before the outbreak of war and was definitely untainted by propaganda." The board approved three Polish features which had been made in Great Britain for the Free Polish Government while seven Russian pictures had been passed in recent months.

Of the 2,084 films of all kinds screened by the board during the 12 months, 84 were from the United Kingdom, 18 were produced in Canada and 1,967 were from the United States, thus showing the domination of the Canadian screen by Hollywood. In pre-war years, the number of features from France had run as high as the 200 mark in the 12 months and these were screened largely in French-Canadian localities but the latest report of the board shows a dwindling of French-language films to a lonely one—and this had been produced before the outbreak of hostilities.

The board ordered 858 deletions all told during the past fiscal year, of which 577 were in feature-length films and 109 in newsreels. Among the many films from the United States there were only 87 which were altered but among the 84 films from Great Britain there were 16 which were altered by the board. This meant that approximately one in each five of the British pictures required censorship in material form.

ONTARIO CENSORS PRAISE RUSSIANS

All Soviet Russian pictures were banned in Ontario until a year ago but the Provincial Board of Censors, in its annual report just published, said:

"The Board now permits the exhibition of films produced in Russia under the auspices of the U.S.S.R. Technically, these features are an advance upon those produced before the outbreak of war and also, it may be said, they are fine examples of wartime entertainment, free from anything of a politically offensive nature. The Board has been exacting when its authority was sought for the exhibition of foreign-language films and only when it has been shown that such are to be used for war purposes and of definite value in this respect, has it permitted their exhibition."

Exhibitors Fight Carnival Shows

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. Johns, N. B.

Exhibitors in Halifax, N. S., have entered vigorous objection to carnival operations. It is contended that one tent show was granted a license to show four days on the local Common, owned by the city and for use of the citizenry for sports and play. The carnival showed on the city property for four weeks.

The theatre owners and managers also lodged protest on the ground that the carnivals used lights. For about a year, air raid precaution regulations insisted on permanent extinguishing of all outside theatre lights and the exhibitors have obeyed the command without question, thus losing a potent advertising medium. But the carnival used a thousand or so unprotected lights, many of them dozens of feet above the ground, and of powerful wattage, shining full force every night of the four weeks.

At Fredericton, N. B., Glen Libby, owner-manager of a carnival, was haled into the local police court, on a gaming charge. His show had been at Fredericton for four weeks, and the police had closed up money games on several occasions. Finally, when these reopened, he was ordered into court.

Despite predictions in the spring, there has been no dominion or provincial legislation against carnivals. Nor has any city or town government placed a ban recently.

The United Church Conference, at Sackville, N. B., condemned bingo, lotteries, fortune wheels, door and gate prizes. It was decided to call the attention to organizations using these for revenue that they were illegal.

Screen Play, Production and Direction by ORSON WELLES

MATIC SENSATION FROM AZING NEW HIT-MAKER!

Orson Welles' second personally directed and produced picture is a highly important production — as startling, dramatic and revolutionary in many ways as his "Citizen Kane", which was acclaimed by critical groups as The Best Picture of 1941.

"The Magnificent Ambersons" is considered to be the best novel ever written by Booth Tarkington, having won the Pulitzer Prize. The story is down to earth. The scene, a middle-western city, with its rich man's house that is the town's show place — but also a house with a skeleton in the closet. The fascinating characters step out on the screen as vivid human beings who love, hate, envy—are kind or cruel, according to their natures.

Red Book, in selecting it as The Picture Of The Month, says " 'The Magnificent Ambersons' has heart, and in it are people one can deeply care for...it is Welles' best."

"The Magnificent Ambersons" has been pre-sold over many months. Its publicity penetration is one of the highest on record. It has been nationally advertised in full pages in all the leading magazines. It will be a fine box-office success as well as a picture that will be praised to the skies by every critic who sees it.

"Miniver" Still Breaking Music Hall Records

"Mrs. Miniver," MGM's film about war-time England, continues to break all records at Radio City Music Hall, New York, and began its fifth week at that theatre on Thursday. According to G. S. Eyssell, managing director, the picture becomes the sixth feature in the Music Hall's history to play so long a run and it is expected to at least equal the all-time record of six weeks now shared by three films, "The Philadelphia Story," "Rebecca" and "Woman of the Year."

In the four weeks, "Mrs. Miniver," starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, has been seen by 6,221,007 persons which the Music Hall reports is "a greater attendance than has ever been recorded for a motion picture in a similar period," and grossed more than $431,000 for that period.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM, announced in New York on Monday that there will be no increase in admission prices for "Mrs. Miniver," for the first 15 test engagements starting July 1st or subsequent dates. Mr. Schenck said, "Some exhibitors have advocated its presentation at advanced prices. The merit of the picture surely deserves this recognition. Nevertheless, MGM desires this film to be played to the greatest number of people in the shortest possible space of time. This picture," he said, "really belongs to the people. For this reason we have decided to offer 'Mrs. Miniver' to our customers without any provision for increased admission prices to the public."

"Yankee Doodle" In Fourth Week

Other holdover reports for the week are as follows:

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros., which ended its fourth week at the Hollywood, New York, last Friday with an estimated $28-000, and began its sixth this Friday.

"Juke Girl," Warner Bros.: at the Strand, New York; held over a second week.

"Beyond the Blue Horizon," Paramount: held a second week at the Paramount, New York, where it drew an estimated $60,000 for its first week.

"This Above All," Twentieth Century-Fox: finished its seventh week at the Astor, New York, with an estimated $12,000, and began its eighth week on Tuesday.

"The Magnificent Dope," Twentieth Century-Fox; held a second week at the Roxy, New York, where it drew an estimated $26,200 for last Thursday through Sunday.

"The Gold Rush," United Artists: completed its 10th week at the Globe, New York, Friday night, and took in an estimated $5,800 last Saturday and Sunday.

Twentieth Century-Fox reports that in the 15 test engagements of "This Above All," the picture has been established as among the top three grossing pictures released by the company this season. A number of day and date engagements are now being set up for the national release on July 24th, Fox announced this week. The film exceeded the previous high gross of "A Yank in the RAF" by 17 per cent at the Majestic in Providence, and also equalled the "Yank" receipts at the Wisconsin in Milwaukee.

The second annual Pan-American sales drive has been started by the 20th Century-Fox foreign department. Twelve Central and South American branches are participating.

"Squadron" and "United" Open

Two films made their debuts in New York this week. Universal's "Eagle Squadron," the Walter Wanger production, opened at the Globe Theatre on Thursday night, and "United We Stand," the 20th Century-Fox feature depicting the historical events of the last 25 years, bowed at the Palace Theatre the same night, prior to a "United We Stand Rally" in Times Square.

Last Thursday night, Warner Bros. held two special screenings in Washington for "Wings for the Eagle," one at the National Theatre for press and radio representatives, and the other in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior for Army, Navy, Air Force and other Government officials.

The premiere of "Eagle Squadron" was attended by a score of British and American military leaders, including Major General Follett Bradley, commander of the First Air Force; Major Alexander de Seversky, noted aviator and author of "Victory Through Air Power"; Sir Ronald Campbell, of the British Embassy; Commander John Grant; Major C. B. Omerod of the British Ministry of Information and Sir Samuel Savage.

Patterson, Jr., chairman of the War Savings Staff for New York State, was expected to deliver the keynote address at the rally for "United We Stand," which took place Thursday in Times Square at 5:00 P. M. A special contingent of girls to sell War Bonds was on hand. Representatives from the following societies participated: American Friends of Norway, American-French War Relief, American Friends of Belgium, American Friends of Greece, American Friends of Jugoslavia, American Friends of Czechoslovakia, Danish-American Committee for War Savings, United China Relief, Scottish Federation of Societies, Poland Forever and Russian War Relief.

"Flying Fortress" Opens in London

Last week in London, the Warner Theatre and the Empire, an MGM house, shared the world premiere of "The Flying Fortress," produced by Warner's in England. Both theatres are presenting a simultaneous run of the feature according to a deal arranged by Max Wilder of Warners and Sam Eckman of MGM. The premiere, immediately following the 1,000-bomber British air raids over Cologne and Essen, was expected to create wide interest among London's theatre-goers.

Republic's "Flying Tigers," for which shooting was concluded last week in Hollywood, probably will make its debut in Washington, although the company has not yet announced a premiere date or place. Herbert J. Yates was in Washington over the week-end, however, and is reported to have conferred with representatives of the Chinese Government.

RKO reports that 100,000 reserved seats, priced at $1.10 each, were put on sale last week for the premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Pride of the Yankees," which will be held simultaneously in 40 RKO New York theatres and the Astor Theatre on July 15th. Following this one night's showing, the film, starring Gary Cooper in the role of Lou Gehrig, released by RKO, will continue at the Astor on a reserved seat basis for an indefinite run.

AAA Cases Down For Six-Month Period

Only 66 Cases Filed in First Half of Second Year's Operations

A total of 66 arbitration cases was filed by exhibitors during the first six months of the second year of operation of the motion picture arbitration system administered by the American Arbitration Association. It is a substantial decrease from the rate of complaints for the same period a year ago.

The 66 cases represent an average of only 11 cases a month for the period from February 1, 1942 to June 30th. The arbitration system commenced operations on February 1st, 1941. Its scope was extended on September 1st last to include specific run complaints, but there have been only eight actions under this section.

During the initial six months of arbitration a total of 86 cases was filed at the field tribunals. This represented an average of 14.3 cases per month.

Clearance continued to lead as the principal cause of action during the third six month period with 53 of the 66 cases based on Section VIII. There were four some run, of Section VI demands, six for specific run (Section X) and three combination cases.

The ratio was slightly higher in favor of clearance cases than during the first six months of 1941 arbitration when 61 clearance cases, 24 some run and one withholding prints demands were filed.

Atlanta, Charlotte, Denver, Memphis, Milwaukee, New Haven, Omaha, Pittsburgh, Portland Seattle and Washington have received no complaints during the past six months. New York continued to lead as the most active tribunal with 11 actions since February 1st, or slightly less than two per month.

Board Rules On Affiliates

The right of distributors to protect their affiliate theatres with special clearances was further amplified by the Appeal Board Tuesday in their 28th decision. The judges ruling on an appeal for the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., by John and Grace Koczak, upheld a Philadelphia arbitrator's dismissal of their complaint that the 28-day clearance behind Wilmington imposed by MGM defeated a previous award granting some run to the Earle.

The Koczaks, in the 16th Philadelphia complaint, had asked an arbitrator to implement their some run victory over MGM in the second Philadelphia case by reducing the 28-day clearance behind Loew's first run Aldine in Wilmington to the 10 days granted by other distributors.

The Appeal Board, citing its Dickinson and Dipson decisions (Nos. 27 and 24), ruled that under Section XVII of the decree a distributor might grant its affiliates such clearance as it deemed proper. "It is true that the clearance of 28 days (behind the Aldine) is considerably longer than that imposed upon complainant's theatre by other distributors," the board said, but found that MGM granted no lesser margin to any other theatre in the Wilmington area. Costs were charged against the complainants.

St. Louis

Louis M. Sosna, operator of the Sosna theatre, Mexico, Mo., won one count and lost three in a decision by Ethan A. Shepley, arbitrator, on his some run complaint. Mr. Shepley dismissed the action against RKO, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox but directed Warner Brothers to offer a run. It was the eighth St. Louis case.

The case was Mr. Sosna's third some run action. His first was withdrawn. He won a second, the tribunal's fourth, when the Appeal Board reversed a local arbitrator and directed Loew's to offer a run.

Benjamin Tepper, Mr. Sosna's attorney, revealed Monday that the latest award would be appealed, asking that the decision be reversed insofar as it affected Fox, RKO and Paramount. The arbitrator found that they had offered Mr. Sosna reasonable runs. At issue in the Sosna cases has been a five-cent matinee admission price charged by his third run house. Costs were assessed one fourth against Warners, the balance against the complainant.

Hearings in the 11th St. Louis case, clearance complaint of Victor Thein for his Palm theatre, St. Louis was postponed to July 8th by Judge Thomas C. Henning the arbitrator.

Chicago

The Oriental theatre case, Chicago's 6th, has been postponed again, this time until July 15th, by request of the parties who want more time to continue negotiations in search of a settlement outside of the arbitration board. This case has been on file almost a year and has undergone a series of postponements following the first hearings several months ago.

Benjamin Wham has been named arbitrator for the Palace Theatre, Gary, Indiana case, which has been set for August 11. Declarations of intervention have been filed in the case by the Vogue Amusement Company, Inland Amusement Company and the Whiting Amusement Company, all Indiana-Illinois Theatre circuit subsidiaries, operating the Vogue in East Chicago; Indiana, Indiana Harbor, and Hoosier theatres, Whiting, Indiana.

The Freeport Theatre, Freeport, Ill., case was resumed and testimony completed on June 22nd. Arbitrator Arthur Goldberg has given both parties until July 7 to file briefs.

Indianapolis

Manny Marcus, operator of the Ritz theatre, Indianapolis filed the sixth case in that city on June 26th when he started a clearance action against all five distributors and the Uptown theatre, a Zaring circuit house, which, he asserts enjoys an unreasonable margin over the Ritz. He did not specify the present clearance or what adjustment is sought.

Albany

Smalley Theatres, Inc., renewed its attack against clearances held by the Schine circuit with three more clearance demands at Albany on Monday. The cases, Nos. 5, 6 and 7, were filed against All Five by William C. Smalley, president, through Leonard Rosenthal, attorney. The circuit has a similar action, Albany case No. 3, for its Sidney, N. Y., theatre pending before Judge Joseph Rosch, arbitrator.

The complaint, in order, attacks the 14-day margin held by the Schine Palace and Oneonta theatre, Oneonta, N. Y., over Smalley's Coopertown; the 30 days of the Schine Hippodrome and Gloversville theatres, Gloversville over Smalley's Johnstown; and the 30 days of the Schine Palace and Oneonta in Oneonta over the Smalley theatre in Delhi, N. Y.

Buffalo

An appeal has been filed by an intervenor from the award in Buffalo's 12th case, in which M. M. Konczakowski won a clearance reduction from seven to three days for his Regent theatre, in Buffalo. Basil Brothers, who intervened for their Apollo and New Ariel theatres filed the appeal. Louis B. Dorr, arbitrator granted the clearance cut in respect to the New Ariel. The Apollo clearance was settled by stipulation. The appeal was filed on Friday.

Cleveland

Cleveland's fourth case, specific run action for the Highland theatre in Akron filed by the Liberty Operating Company will be heard on July 8th. Leonard H. Davis, a lawyer, is the arbitrator.

Fly Sees Television, FM Post-War Aids

Television and the FM system of broadcasting may be "important factors" in expanding radio to stave off post war depression, Federal Communications Commission chairman James L. Fly told the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, in testimony Tuesday about the Sanders bill to reorganize the commission.

Mr. Fly questioned the wisdom of issuing licenses now, adding that development of the new medium would continue regardless of licenses.

He also defended vigorously the FCC network regulations, and assailed the Sanders bill proposed study of the regulations. The study is out of time, and will interfere with the FCC war duties, he said. He also outlined each facet of the regulations, and their reasons, stressing maintenance of freedom of radio to as many as possible.

Of the investigation into ownership of radio stations by newspapers, he remarked that should such ownership "gravitate into the hands of churches, schools, or motion picture companies", there would be similar investigation.

He added that just prior to the war, the FCC was considering investigation of clear channels; but was unable to make it because it lacked engineers.

Stanley Company Calls in Bonds

The Stanley Company of America has called for redemption August 1st all outstanding. first mortgage six per cent fee and leasehold sinking fund bonds of the Stanley-Rowland-Clark Corporation, a subsidiary. The Stanley Company is a subsidiary of Warner Brothers. It will pay 101 for the bonds, plus interest. November 30, 1940, $1,400,000 of this issue was outstanding. The bonds are due August 1, 1946.

Honor Kalmine

The recreation center of Camp O'Connell, Pennsylvania, has been dedicated Kalmine Hall, honoring the Warner circuit's assistant general manager, Harry Kalmine. Mr. Kalmine participated last week in opening of the camp, which he founded through the Pittsburgh Variety Club.

Hudson In Defense Post

Earl C. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres, has been named a civilian defense group coordinator by the city's Office of Civilian Defense. He has charge of theatres, auditoriums, and dance halls there.

U. S. Censors revise Radio War Rules

Censorship rules for broadcasters were revised, clarified and expanded last week by the Office of Censorship, but few new responsibilities were imposed upon the stations.

Probably the most significant addition to the regulations—incorporated at the request of the industry itself—calls upon broadcasters to be "alert" to prevent the transmission of subversive information through the use of commercial continuities, and holds that "the continuity editor should regard his responsibility as equal to that of the news editor."

Included in the revision are the specific requests which have been made by the censorship from time to time since the code was originally issued last January 15th.

Among the new suggestions are several covering the presentation of weather information and news and definite requirements to be observed prior to, during and after a possible enemy attack, with a new clause prohibiting broadcasters outside the attacked area from mentioning the action unless express authorization for radio is given by the War Department in Washington.

Check on Foreign Language Scripts

The section covering request programs has been clarified and the precautions to be exercised by foreign language broadcasters have been expanded at their own request.

The new foreign language provision, which Byron Price, director of censorship, said was less stringent than the code adopted by the foreign language broadcasters themselves, requires submission to stations of complete scripts with an English translation and an "on the air" check to prevent deviations.

The changes in the code were submitted to a representative group of broadcasters and their representatives before final adoption, Mr. Price said. Among those consulted were William B. Dolph, general manager of Station WOL; Carleton Smith, general manager of WRC, and K. H. Berkeley, general manager of WMAL, Washington; Kenneth Yourd, Washington, representing the Columbia Broadcasting System; Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, and C. E. Arney, Jr., his assistant; John Shepard III, president of the Yankee Network and chairman of the Broadcasters Victory Council; O. L. Taylor, secretary of the council; Victor Sholis, representing the clear channel stations; Philip Loucks, representing the frequency modulation stations, and Paul Spearman, representing Network Affiliates, Inc.

Senate Confirms Fly Nomination

The United States Senate on Monday confirmed the nomination of James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, for a seven-year term on the FCC.

On Wednesday, Congressman Youngdahl of Minnesota, urged Mr. Fly to postpone the network regulations until after the war. His suggestion followed the statement by Mr. Fly at the Sanders bill hearings that 90 per cent of the FCC's work now related to the war.

At his weekly press conference Monday, Mr. Fly said the War Production Board had accepted "in principle" the suggestion of the War Communications Board for the pooling of broadcast station repair and maintenance parts. He indicated that the necessary order would be forthcoming in the near future. Mr. Fly declared that 73 per cent of the stations would be forced off the air by the end of the year without an assured supply of such essential parts.

Chairman Fly also reported an increase of more than 50 per cent in long distance telephone calls during the last 18 months and said that the country faced "some undesirable alternatives" unless it voluntarily cut down on the use of telephones. Asked to comment on the "alternatives," he said he hesitated to "speculate," but they might entail banning certain classes of business which use telephones extensively, or shifting some types of business to certain hours, or instituting a system of priorities.

Since January, 1941, toll calls on the longer distances increased 78 per cent, he said; in the Norfolk area, 245 per cent; Washington area, 165 per cent. During May, he added, 15 per cent of toll calls were delayed by busy circuits.

ARMY FILM RENTALS $6,000,000 A YEAR

The Army Motion Picture Service, operating 700 film theatres in camps, estimates that by the end of the year, it will have paid out film rentals in excess of $6,000,000 for 1942. For the past 20 years, the Service has been a self-sustaining unit of the Army, requiring no federal appropriation and operating entirely on paid admissions. R. B. Murray is general manager and from his Washington office, directs his own staff of film buyers, exploiteers and exhibitors.

Favorite film attractions of men in the armed forces during the month of May, according to the Service, were "Ship Ahoy," "Tortilla Flat," and "Rio Rita," all MGM films; "My Favorite Blonde," Paramount; "Kings Row," Warner Bros., and "My Gal Sal," 20th Century-Fox.

The House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday approved exemption of Army and Navy post theatres from admission taxes, provided profits from the shows were donated to service relief funds. Passage of the bill affects all 700 Army theatres.

Warners Buy Rights to "Mission to Moscow"

Purchase of the screen rights to "Mission to Moscow," the book by Joseph E. Davies, former U. S. Ambassador to Russia, has been announced by Warner Bros. In the announcement, Mr. Davies disclosed that he was "making available for the first time my personal diaries, memoranda and other private information which were not included in the volume."

Although the sale price was not divulged, Mr. Davies said in Washington that he was told he was receiving the highest price ever paid in the history of the industry for film rights to a book of this kind. Mr. Davies also revealed that he plans to devote the profits to a public cause, the character of which he is not yet prepared to announce.

Robert Buckner will produce the film for Warners.

Schine reports Theatre Disposal is Proceeding

The Schine circuit, in selling back its theatres acquired from independent exhibitors, in accordance with the two-year "standstill" settlement of the Government anti-trust suit against it, will deal "only with bona fide independent exhibitors." The statement was in a report filed with the Buffalo Federal Court last week. The report remarked numerous communications from brokers, and stressed the necessity of investigating the reliability of the customer.

It also added that the former operator of the Strand, Cumberland, Maryland, did not wish to reacquire his theatre. Of the State and Appalachia, in Appalachia, Virginia; the Viv, Corbin, Kentucky; the Cla-Zel and Lyric, Bowling Green, Ohio, it was said there are no new developments.

The Palace, Clifton Springs; Webster, Rochester; Paramount, Glens Falls, have been re-bought by former owners. All are in New York.

The Federal order requires that those not bid for by former owners be offered to independent exhibitors generally.

Expect Crescent Denouement Soon

The Federal Court decision in the anti-trust suit by the Government against the Crescent circuit, affiliates, and United Artists and Universal, will be given shortly in Nashville by Federal Judge Elmer Davies, it was said in that city Monday. Trial lasted through last summer and autumn and Judge Davies has since had the testimony under consideration. At the close of the trial, Columbia was dropped as a defendant.

64 Shorts Set for Paramount

Seven series of short subjects will make up the 52 new releases in Paramount's shorts program, and will be augmented by 12 Superman cartoon adventures, in color. The announcement was made in New York Tuesday by Oscar Morgan, Paramount's short subjects sales manager.

He added that Paramount News would again release 104 issues.

There will be 12 Popeye cartoons, in the 52 shorts projected; six Puppetoons; six "Speaking of Animals"; six Popular Science; six Unusual Occupations; six Paramount Headliners; ten Grantland Rice Sportlights.

The company will also promote the Quiz Kids to features, following their current employment in shorts. Several stories are being examined.

Mr. Morgan said emphasis would be on "quality feature shorts" and he adds the company would "continue national exploitation of its feature shorts on the same scale that resulted in unprecedented attention in every publicity channel."

NON-FICTION WAR BOOKS LEAD PUBLISHING FIELD

Changes Come to Another Hollywood Story Source, Publishers Report

The book mart, one of Hollywood's principal sources of story material, has begun to feel the influences of war, threatening a serious shortage of diversified supply from this field for screen product. War is No. 1 on story lists, agree publishers, authors' agents and heads of story departments of the major distributors. And scores of writers are either in military service, about to be called or engaged in war-time activities.

A glance at current "best seller" lists shows war and current events books at the top and gaining over popular fiction best sellers. Non-fiction books, such as "The Last Time I Saw Paris," by Elliot Paul; "Victory Through Air Power," by Major A. P. de Seversky; "Flight to Arras," by Antoine de Saint-Expury"; "Mission to Moscow," by Joseph E. Davis, former U. S. Ambassador to Russia, have an edge on popularity and sales over the first five of the fiction best sellers: "The Moon Is Down," John Steinbeck; Rachel Field's "And Now Tomorrow"; "Islandia," Austin Tappan Wright; Hanz Werfel's "Song of Bernadette"; "Until Daybreak," Louis Bromfield, and "Kings Row" by Henry Bellmann.

Film Puts Book On Best-Seller List

The latter book, incidentally, reached the best-selling list only since Warner Bros.' film, based on the novel, was released. Prior to that, according to Simon and Shuster, publishers, the Bellamann novel recorded good sales, but had not been a best seller.

Book publishers, booksellers, libraries and others who constantly check the public's taste in literature, assert that non-fiction books are in greater demand today than ever before. W. W. Norton, publisher, interviewed in his New York office recently, said there was no "trend toward escapist" books and declared that non-fiction—the personal history type of book, the "Berlin Diary" approach and other literary efforts centered on the war, its causes and effects —had completely captured the interest of the American reading public. "Fiction sales are off," he said, "and non-fiction sales are increasing by leaps and bounds, in all parts of the country."

In spite of increased production costs since the war, Mr. Norton pointed out, publishers have maintained their prices and there are no indications, for the present, that there will be any advance on books for the autumn.

Simon and Shuster asserted that increases in non-fiction sales for the first six months of the war were running parallel to those in England during the comparable months of Britain's entry in the fight against the Axis.

A few publishers whose firms concentrate on fiction only, while admitting the rapid rise of non-fiction product, simultaneously point out that the trend "won't last," that before long, the public will turn to "escapist lierature" on a grand scale.

The evident shortage of fiction material, however, is the cause of great concern among story department chiefs of film producing companies. William Dozier, head of Paramount's West Coast story department, who visited New York recently, said "Hollywood, for the first time, will be forced to rely on its own resources for screen matrial. Studios," he said, "will have to develop to a greater extent than ever before, their own scenario departments, and will have to give greater encouragement to lesser-known writers."

"Hollywood Must Cultivate Resources"

William Fadiman, of MGM, agreed with Mr. Dozier. "Hollywood must now turn in upon itself and cultivate its own resources in providing material for the screen," he added. Leda Bauer, RKO's story chief, asserted that producers probably would "turn to more costume stories, films about the American Revolution, the Civil War or other historic periods in our own history."

Miss Bauer believes that "any really good story, and I don't care what it is, who wrote it, nor what the background is, whether it be a play, a book or a movie, will still be successful." Miss Bauer expressed the opinion that there's "always been a shortage of good material," and that the war had simply heightened the situation.

The principal stumbling block for American authors, film story heads agree, is the fact that novelists and playwrights as well, "find themselves unable to write about anything which is not directly concerned with the war." A spokesman for Brandt & Brandt, the playwright-novelist agents, pointed out recently that "authors don't want to write 'escapist' plays, nor do they want to write war plays. There doesn't seem much else to write about. Therefore, for the present, they are not writing anything."

Broadway to Feature More Comedies, Mysteries

Play agents report that Broadway managers will produce more comedy and mystery-melodramas for the coming season, with less emphasis on war and anti-Fascist themes likely to appear on the boards. Whether or not this trend will carry over to the screen, film story chiefs declare it still is "too early to tell. At the moment, Hollywood is scheduling a number of war pictures for next season, "with the usual amount of melodramas, comedies and other 'escapist' product mixed in," as one company spokesman said.

Survey of the material currently being published in Redbook, Good Housekeeping, American Magazine, Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion and McCall, reveals that a little more than half of the stories have war or allied subject backgrounds, indicating that in this field, too, Hollywood faces a shortage of straight fiction, a large part of which, before the war, was material for the screen.

Within recent months, many of the "popular" magazines, principally the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, Ladies' Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion and McCall magazine, increased their prices, the first two publications from 5 to 10 cents a copy, and the latter three from 10 to 15 cents. In all cases the increase was effected because of the rise in paper and publication costs.

Confiscate Sex Film In Camden Theatre

"Elysia," controversial "sex" film, which had been showing at the Star Theatre, Camden, N. J., was confiscated last Thursday by City Prosecutor Firman Michel. Confiscation of the film was made after a private showing on charges of alleged violations of sections of the state crimes act governing the exhibition of lewd or indecent pictures.

Since the theatre operated only in the evenings, the prosecutor, accompanied by county detective heads, appeared at the theatre shortly after noon. With them they had a private motion picture machine operator. John Rose, manager of the house, was informed a private showing was to be made following complaints that "Elysia" was not the type of picture for public display.

"Pretty rank" was the description given the picture by the prosecutor, who said that the confiscated film will be submitted to the grand jury. However, Mr. Rose was not taken into custody nor was the theatre closed. Mr. Michel granted the manager an opportunity to obtain a new picture, provided no future display be made of films of the type seized.

The confiscation of "Elysia" does not in any way affect the policy of the house, and Mr. Rose hurredly booked in a twin bill with "Marijuana Madness" and "Tomorrow's Children." The Elm Theatre in Camden also features the so-called "sex" pictures, currently offering "One Night of Bliss."

Organize Play Backing Group

Angels, Inc., an organization of business men, which an announcement says, is designed to "place the business of backing shows by laymen on a solid foundation," now has five members, each subscribing $50,000. According to the plan the membership will be increased to 20.

Among the five is Emmanuel M. Cohan, of the brokerage firm of Hirsch, Lilienthal and Company, who mapped out the arrangement and is acting as coordinator. Names of the others are being withheld for the present. The business administration of the syndicate will be handled by a group of five or six men in the theatrical field, it was said.

SCREWBALL COMEDY RACES DOWN THE AUDIENCE TRACK A SUMMER-TIME WINNER.

This screwball comedy races down the audience track a Summer-time winner. Concocted by Eugene Thackrey, Frank Cockrell and Otho Lovering, the for-laughing-purposes-only screenplay has exactly the right touch, witness the fact that the projection room audience of reviewers and critics responded to the situatons and lines with everything from chuckles to guffaws.

Irene Dunne, as talented a comedienne as you'll find, makes the role of a zany heiress-gone-broke the medium for sustained fun, and there's admirable support from Patric Knowles as an earnest young psychiatrist, Ralph Bellamy who satirizes an Arizona he-man, Queenie Vassar as Cactus Kate, Miss Dunne's eccentric grandmother, and Eugene Pallette as the troubled executor of the estate dissipated by Miss Dunne.

Gregory La Cava, in the dual guise of producer and director, has turned in a highly competent job. The pace is rapid

Hornblow Hits Stage; Plans Russian Saga

Motion pictures offer an example of superb teamwork, in contrast to the legitimate theatre, the product of which is almost uniformly bad, according to Arthur Hornblow, producer of many pictures, lately with Paramount, and now under a five year contract with MGM. Mr. Hornblow was in New York several weeks, and saw every play.

"In motion pictures, we have a perfectly functioning setup—producer, director, writer," he said. "Corresponding functions on the stage have been abandoned by producers, directors and playwrights," he declared.

Mr. Hornblow is currently preparing "Song of the Red Army," his first picture for MGM, and one for which plans for "Quo Vadis" have been temporarily put aside; although last week he signed S. M. Behrman to do final continuity on the famous religious story, which is to be in color.

"Song of the Red Army" will definitely be a "big" picture, for which no budget limitation has been set, he said.

"It will be a vigorous picture, full of bravura," he said; "it will be that because its subject lends to that treatment. What could be more colorful than the story of the heroic defense of Russia by its peasants, and by the Cossacks in the Ukraine?"

Of possible Government supervision of the Russian-theme film, Mr. Hornblow answered there had been none and no indication of any. He asserted, however, he would welcome any Government questioning, intimating in addition, that the film in his hands would have the most careful handling because he personally was thoroughly impressed by the stamina and task of the Russian people.

He sees no immediate trouble in filming it from the priorities viewpoint.

"I see no problems now," he said. "If some arise, we will solve them. If we have to make pictures without sets, we'll make them that way. Maybe they'll be better."

Mr. Hornblow will also make a comedy this year but he has not chosen the story. His contract does not specify the number of pictures he is to make, he said.

Work Begun on Army Lounge

The Motion Picture Trade Press Publishers' Committee, with the cooperation of film companies and others, has begun the extensive furnishing of the roof-top sundeck at the former Paramount Studio at Astoria, Long Island, which is designed to be a lounge for the approximately 400 service men now serving the U. S. Signal Corps' Photographic Center there. Many of the service men at the center were formerly technicians in the industry.

The sundeck is the first of three recreational projects which the committee plans for the service men. A recreation room, to be decorated and furnished under the supervision of John Eberson, theatre architect, and Harold Rodner, of Warners, and a library to which 2,500 volumes will be contributed by the local industry, are to follow.

Members of the committee are: Martin Quigley, Abel Green, Maurice Kann, Jay Emmanuel, Charles Lewis and Jack Alicoate.

Geraghty Appointed to Coast Censor Board

Tom Geraghty, screen writer and producer, was appointed a member on Monday of the Los Angeles motion picture review board of the United States Office of Censorship. His appointment was announced by Watterson R. Rothacker, chairman of the west coast censor board. He assumes his duties on July 6th.

Mr. Geraghty, who is 59, is a native of Rushville, Ind., and has been writing for the screen since early in the silent picture era. He is the author of more than 100 screenplays and original stories and has been an associate producer, and producer, as well as filling other studio executive posts.

Estill Named Salesman

Robert Estill, booker at the Seattle Paramount exchange, has been promoted to the sales staff.

Newsreel Houses Increase Ads

Public interest in the prosecution of the war against the Axis is increasing the use of paid newspaper advertisements by newsreel theatres. Two of the larger newsreel house circuits in New York, the Embassy and Trans-Lux, which have placed ads sporadically in New York newspapers prior to the war, since Pearl Harbor, are "giving more attention to ad space," according to spokesmen for both companies.

Since the war, newsreel theatres in other cities, principally Newark, Chicago, San Francisco, Cleveland and Detroit, also have increased their use of advertising in metropolitan papers to publicize showings of important newsreel breaks concerning the war.

Last Wednesday, simultaneously with the issue by all newsreel companies of the pictures on the Midway air and sea battle, the Embassy and Trans-Lux advertised the films in New York papers.

Other outstanding war events, including the first films of the attack on Pearl Harbor; General MacArthur's arrival in Australia; the sinking of the Lexington; the AEF's arrival in Northern Ireland, and later in Australia; "Jimmy" Doolittle's story of his air attack, and the "New York at War" parade, all were publicized by the newsreel theatres as being shown at their respective houses.

Company spokesmen for both Embassy and Trans-Lux declared on Monday that if news breaks warranted it, they would take as many as two ads a week in New York newspapers. They agreed that the capture by the FBI, of eight Nazi saboteurs, if released by officials to all newsreel firms, would be of sufficient interest to the public to warrant the advertising of showings in theatres.

Both Embassy and Trans-Lux officials agreed that, since the war, the number of people who requested theatre programs mailed to their homes "had been on the increase," indicating that particularly, in New York, the public is learning to go to the local newsreel theatre for full coverage of war news in pictures.

News Broadcasts in Theatre

News broadcasts from leased wires of the United Press will be presented daily to patrons of the Criterion Theatre in Oklahoma City, according to announcement this week that the theatre had completed special arrangements with KTOK for the spots. Theatres Switch to Newsreels

Two Denver theatres, the Senate, owned by Sam Feinstein and John Anderson, and the Rialto, a Fox house, have shifted to newsreels and short subjects programs with admissions at 25 cents. Telenews Theatres will furnish the newsreels to the Senate, which will draw heavily upon local events. The Rialto will use releases of all major newsreel companies.

Award to 'News of Day'

Columbia

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier—A very timely picture, hut the puhlic seemed to be a little hesitant about attending. Well directed and different. You'll like it. Played June 7-8.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. General patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Glenn Ford—Although we played this picture rather late, we have no regrets. Business excellent.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

THEY ALL KISSED THE BRIDE: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—This comment is heing written a day after the engagement and therefore its accuracy of statement is contestahle, since the film is anything hut unforgettahle. In fact, one might say that greatest attribute of the production is that it is not quite so had the taste lingers. Columbia, as has long heen foreseen having styled itself the father of farce, "The Comedy Company" . . . having pointed incessantly to "The Awful Truth" and a number of Capra's as evidence, now is resting weightily on its previously earned laurels. The result: "They All Kissed the Bride," Columhia's latest "wit-hit" bears about as much resemhlance to a first rate comedy-farce as a Hollywood-Hitchcock film does to the "39 Steps." The title "They All Kissed the Bride" has nothing whatever to do with the picture; and the picture has nothing whatever to do with anything. It is replete with a lot of unnecessary, and occasionally almost loathsome, osculation. And it presents a variety of talk and incident bordering on vulgarity and well over the line in its dual implications and ponderous sensuality.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

THEY ALL KISSED THE BRIDE: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—Swell show, hut no draw at the hox office. Will please all if you can get them in. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 14-16.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—This picture drags. Could be improved by cutting out the first 45 minutes. It's the same old story. They are trying to put on a show and finally do, in the last half of the last reel. This is sorta like a western; you know what the story is as soon as it starts. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—Ray Peacock. Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Mary Howard—Not so hot hut drew western fans and beautiful color saved the day. Played June 5-6.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Still the top series of family pictures. Donna Reed didn't hurt the cast one hit, either. Drew a little ahove average husiness. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neh. Small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR SCANDAL: Walter Pidgeon, Rosalind Russell—Title poor. Picture worse. Business nothing. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre. Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt, Darryl Hickman—This chap, Darryl Hickman, deserves equal hilling with the stars in this picture. He's a swell kid and should go far. The picture is well made with a swell story and fine cast. Young is always good, but why don't they give Marsha Hunt some hetter roles? Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neh. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—A gangster picture which failed to draw average husiness. Too old when I played it. Running time, 107 minutes. Played June 10-11.—E. M. Frieburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MARRIED BACHELOR: Ruth Hussey, Robert Young—Just fair and not strong enough to pull enough husiness to hreak even. Played June 10-11.—A. C. Edwards. Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, John Garfield—Here is a swell picture. Got to hand it to MGM; they sure know how to put the finishing touches to a picture. Almost every one liked it, and I thought it a swell piece of acting on everyone's part; even the dogs turned in a fine performance. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. A. Labarthe, Grant Theatre, Pond Creek, Okla. General patronage.

Paramount

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—A swell musical comedy which should draw and please anywhere. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 17-18.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—If this picture doesn't click anywhere—well, I wouldn't know the answers in entertainment. It's really packed full of comedy. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

LADY HAS PLANS, THE: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland—Not good, not had. Few laughs. Present situation much changed since this story was made. Hurts it some. Played June 1-2.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Boh Hope, Madeleine Carroll—Swell picture and good business. Keep up that good work, Paramount; we small towns need good pictures. Running time. 78 minutes.—W. A. Laharthe, Grant Theatre, Pond Creek, Okla. General patronage.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: William Holden, Ellen Drew—Remarkahle is truly the word for the box office tally on this one. I have to slip through the hack lots and up alleys to get to the post office since I showed this picture. Some of my patrons have suggested that I get a gun and give up show business. I would like to pass the same suggestion down the line. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 16.—C. B. Carter, Clemson & Co-Ed Theatres, Brevard, N. C. Small town and tourist patronage.

Republic

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Fay McKenzie, Don Barry—You can leave it to Republic to make a good picture without box office stars. All they need is the occasion and a title. We had to put out the SRO sign for the first time in months. Played June 9.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. General patronage.

SIERRA SUE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Autry not doing the husiness he used to do; needs something—better cast and stories.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

STARDUST ON THE SAGE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Another good western from Gene Autry. Running time. 65 minutes. Played June 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre. Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barhara Stanwyck Business poor to middling. A remarkably dull picture with supporting roles executed (meaning to be decapitated) hy a group of old men who are forced by their cinema salaries and contracts to play the roles of somewhat senile and licentious professor-morons. These poor characters peek around doors and over bannisters to peer at Miss Stanwyck's unadorned legs. And, for the hetter part of the film, the professor's pseudo-whimsicalities are lost on a jumbled sound track—which is perhaps just as well. Cooper is the usual Cooper.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck—Business fair and no kicks. Many laughs, hut picture was definitely not adapted to Cooper's real ahility. Played June 7-8.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

CALL OUT THE MARINES: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—Good comedy which pleased. This is not a big picture, but did average business. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE AT SEA: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Good little comedy which brought out many laughs on Family Night. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CONFIRM OR DENY: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett—Very poor at box office. Newspaper stories have never stirred up much excitement here. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 3-4.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

GREAT GUNS: Laurel and Hardy—A very good comedy of their type. Crowded house for two days; so can't complain. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 29-30.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—This is not one of the greatest pictures of all time. It may not even be up to other Welsh coal mining films in some respects ("The Stars Look Down"). Nevertheless, if the somewhat thin plot, as well as its failure to get on the screen in two hours the full and magnificently written Llewellyn novel, can he overlooked, "How Green Was My Valley" is powerful, moving, and beautiful cinema fare. Its grim reality, both in the action and the sets, suggests the potentiality of American production when authority and direction is given to proper persons and actors are selected for their ahility rather than their appearances. The direction in this film is faithful, skillful, and little short of superb. The whole cast acquits itself admirably. And the result is, any shortcomings in story matter notwithstdanding, "How Green Is My Valley" is one of the few fine motion pictures which can and should be played in every theatre, everywhere.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—One of the greatest pictures we've shown. Excellent production and hig box office. Played June 8-9.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

I WAKE UP SCREAMING: Getty Grable, Victor Mature—A rather silly title and we did very little husiness on this picture. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 27-28.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

I WAKE UP SCREAMING: Betty Grahle, Victor Mature—Here is a real good detective mystery, well produced, that did not do business. Can't figure it out.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

REMARKABLE MR. KIPPS: Michael Redgrave, Diana Wynyard—The poorest show we've ever run. Played on our 10-cent nights and had them walk out hy three's and four's until I began to think there wouldn't be anyone left to run. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 12-15.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—Douhled this with "Passage From Hong Kong" and did capacity business. Running time, 57 minutes. Played May 15-16.—Ray Peacock. Onalaska Theatre. Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

RINGS ON HER FINGERS: Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney—Good picture and good husiness. No complaints. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 7-8.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI: Maureen O'Hara, John Payne—Here is a darn nice picture with about everything, including excellent color. The great majority of folks thought it was good and a worthwhile crowd turned out for it. Nothing original about the story, but there is plenty of action and comedy in it, so who cares? Played June 11-12.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WHO IS HOPE SCHUYLER: Sheila Ryan, Joseph Allen, Jr.—Just a program picture which slipped by on Pal Night. Running time, 57 minutes. Played June 9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BROOKLYN ORCHID: William Bendix, Joe Sawyer—A Hal Roach streamliner comedy with a lot of laughs, suitable for double billing.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

SUNDOWN: Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot—This picture failed us miserably, but I still say it's a wonderful picture.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Universal

SABOTEUR: Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane—Obviously some Hollywood cellulord is blowing cigar smoke across Hitchcock's efforts in this country. In England, this renowned, rotund director produced melodramatic films unexcelled in the history of the screen. Having come to Hollywood, it now appears that he is being instructed to do them all over again, adapting them for what the West Coast moguls consider "the American mentality." Occasionally there is suspense in "Saboteur." But the picture often drags, and the acting is well below par. In my opinion, the film is highly-overrated; may do only fair business, particularly in Independent Theatres.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

MUMMY'S HAND, THE: Dick Foran, Peggy Moran, Wallace Ford—Plenty of thrills. Did extra business. Horror shows popular nowadays.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

ALWAYS IN MY HEART: Gloria Warren, Kay Francis, Walter Huston—Here is a swell picture from Warners, who know how to make good pictures that click in small towns. Give this one preferred playing time; it won't let you down.—W. A. Labarthe, Grant Theatre, Pond Creek, Okla. General patronage.

IN THIS OUR LIFE: Bette Davis, Olivia De Havilland—Very good. Pleased all. Will draw only Bette Davis fans. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 31-June 2.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

KINGS ROW: Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings—The kind of picture that makes you glad you are in the show business. Boost it to the limit for it's tops. Running time, 113 minutes. Played June 7-9.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

MALE ANIMAL, THE: Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland—There is nothing wrong with this picture. It's real entertainment, but for some reason they wouldn't come to see it. Jack Carson's one act of hunting the pitcher is worth the price of admission. Played June 14-16.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Tex. General patronage.

STEEL AGAINST THE SKY: Lloyd Nolan, Alexis Smith—Not even strong enough for double billing. Played June 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

WILD BILL HICKOK RIDES: Constance Bennett, Bruce Cabot—Usual Friday-Saturday business fell far below average. Very disappointing. Played June 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

FERRY PILOT: War Documentary.—Most timely and instructive.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Columbia

LOVABLE TROUBLE: All Star Comedies—Andy Clyde still good for many laughs.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 2—Play this one. Ask your booker for it. It brings back a lot of past stars.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

MAIN STREET ON THE MARCH: Two Reel Specials—Very good of its kind, but too long. Eight or 10 minutes would be plenty. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

ROBOT WRECKS: Our Gang Comedies—An average "Our Gang" which will rank low in entertainment value. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill work patronage.

SOARING STARS: Miniatures—Entertaining reel about movie stars who pilot and ride in airplanes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRANGE TESTAMENT: Passing Parade—Good. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

Paramount

ELECTRIC EARTHQUAKE: Superman Cartoons—Some more of the stuff which pleased the kids and the elders sat through.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO

ARMY MASCOT, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Here's a good number in Disney color cartoons. Pluto chewing tobacco certainly can get the laughs.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

JUNGLE CAVALCADE: Frank Buck production—See review on "The Story of the Vatican," RKO Radio.—W. R Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

STORY OF THE VATICAN, THE: March of Time—"Story of the Vatican" just a bunch of old shots from March of Time. Terrible in spots where March of Time played two years ago, because they remember. Played this with "Jungle Cavacade," which saved the day on this double bill program. Men patrons really go for Frank Buck's pictures. Played June 12-13.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

TRICKY BUSINESS: Terrytoons—Good black and white cartoon—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Victory Films

ANY BONDS TODAY: Official U. S. Victory Films—Bugs Bunny sings the song as a plug to sell stamps and bonds. It is good, but disappointing to Bugs Bunny fans, who expect it to be a regular cartoon when it only last two minutes. Best idea is to tack it on to the end of a regular Bugs Bunny release. That's what I would do.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

BOMBER: Official U. S. Victory Films—Played this rather late, but it is still an excellent reel showing how a bomber is put together. It created more interest than many other shorts. Play it if you haven't done so already.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Vitaphone

DRAFT HORSE, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOBBY HORSE LAFFS: Looney Tune Cartoons—Good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NOTES TO YOU: Looney Tunes Cartoons—A fair cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

PACIFIC FRONTIERS: Broadway Brevities—Good two-reeler in color showing Wake Island, Guam and other Pacific islands which are now very much in the war news. It is timely and it pleased.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RICHARD HIMBER AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Band—A lot of class, but lacked punch in his band.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

ROBINSON CRUSOE, JR.: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Pretty good.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

SPANISH FIESTA: Technicolor Specials—The Monte Carlo Russian Ballet in a two-reel dance show in Technicolor. Not suitable for small towns, but will please in A houses in big town.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THERE AIN'T NO SUCH ANIMAL: Hollywood Novelties—Good one-reeler showing strange and seldom seen animals.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WACKY WABBIT, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very good color cartoon.—E. F. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHITE SAILS: Hollywood Novelties—Rather good. Running time, 9 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

Get Wage Increase

Drivers for three companies which deliver motion pictures out of Des Moines, the Film Transportation Company, the Inland Express and the Iowa Film Company, have received a 10 per cent raise under a new contract between the companies and Local 90 of the truck drivers' union. The contract, which runs until June 8, 1943, also gives the drivers a week's vacation with pay. The increase in wages is to be given in war savings stamps. The trucks operated by the companies are to carry stickers inviting traveling soldiers, sailors and marines to ride.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

AMBASSADORS OF GOOD WILL

The theatre manager, whether employed by a circuit or a proprietor in his own right, must by the very nature of his business be a hail-fellow-well-met. Making friends must come naturally to him. Sometimes his friends will be people who never attend a show.

Of late, there have been several examples of where this friendship has definitely been of value to the theatre. Several theatremen, circuit as well as independent, have called upon prominent businessmen, officials and politicians of their communities to travel to the exchange center to appear as witnesses in arbitration cases. The more friendships the theatreman has made, the greater his chances for obtaining the right witnesses when needed.

The writer well recalls that during the NRA days, when he was conducting a small-town theatre, he found need to call upon several businessmen of the community to testify in his behalf. Their responses to attorneys' questions were enthusiastically favorable; yet the fact remains that they had never been in the theatre, to the writer's knowledge. These were businessmen whose establishments took the major portion of their time. But, in any event, they were willing to take the time to testify in the theatreman's behalf, even though they never attended the theatre.

There have been a few instances where rivals in an arbitration action were rounding up witnesses much as boys choose sides for a baseball game. Which team the witness played on depended largely on how good an ambassador its captain was.

PICTURES & WAR STAMPS

There is a definite relation in reaction between the type of picture on the screen and the sale of War Stamps and Bonds, Loew theatre managers report. Theatres playing films depicting Nazi aggression show a larger gross at the War Bond window.

Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State on Broadway, says, "Since the opening of 'Saboteur' our War Bond and Stamp booth is jammed with customers. Pictures depicting the enemy for the rascals they are seem to make our audiences' blood boil and they make a bee-line for the War Bond and Stamp booth the moment the film is over."

Manager Edward Burke of Loew's Paradise, first run Bronx house, says, "Our audience is composed of a cross-section of the city. They come from all over—uptown, downtown, east and west. They all react the same way when they see war films. They go out to the War Bond and Stamp booth and buy stamps and bonds with every dollar they've got in their pockets.

The manager of Loew's 175th Street Theatre, Archie Adlman, says, "We have a pretty good cross-section of nationalities in this area and, so far, we're getting a better response from the foreign-born element than from the American. These people, many of them refugees, experienced the hardships and cruelties of Nazism and they don't have to be asked to buy bonds and stamps. Pictures like 'Saboteur' and 'Nazi Agent' are a reminder of what they left behind."

SOMETHING NEW

Credit Columbia's exploitation department with something new in advertising and exploitation. It's a combination idea with a contest embodied in a newspaper ad and just made to order for those situations where the newspapers will not assist the exhibitor by running contests. The first picture on which the idea has been used is "They All Kissed the Bride" but Columbia says future press books may also contain exploitads.

INDUSTRY SPIRIT

There is a certain cameraderie among showmen which exists whether they are at the moment practising the art or not. A letter from Henry Le Clair, formerly with the Fox Intermountain Circuit in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and now with the 858th Signal Service Co., Luke Field, Phoenix, Ariz., says, "I enjoyed a most cordial visit with Mr. Harry Nace of Publix-Rickards-Nace, Inc. This type of thing seems to be a keynote among exhibitors of the U. S. Everywhere I have gone, I have found the same cordiality expressed among the fraternity of the show world."

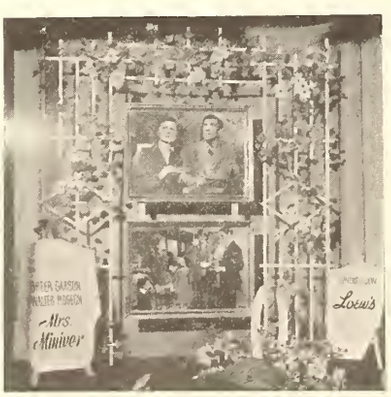
UP-TO-THE-MINUTE IDEAS

Live-wire Showmen take Advantage of every Selling opportunity

Here's how Sam Gilman, manager of Loew's, Harrisburg, Penna., took advantage of the crowds which always watch the maintenance men change the marquee. The "sidewalk superintendents" got quite a kick out of the doin's. Sam says the men purposely took a long time changing the sign that night.

Lattice work at the base of his Bond booth gave a festive appearance to Jim Huddleston's lobby display at the Kingsland Theatre, in St .Louis.



This beautiful display for "Ships With Wings" was arranged by Tom Cleary at the Palace Theatre, Montreal.

William Freise, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, La Crosse, Wis., put this sign in front of his theatre. The button basket got lots of attention.

Lester Pollock put this display in a window as an advance for "Mrs. Miniver" at Loew's, in Rochester.

"This Above All" Gets Assistance of War Groups

Early openings of "This Above All" around the country find theatremen cooperating with defense organizations to good effect. In Wichita, Kansas, Manager Al McClure at the Miller Theatre put on an intensive campaign, promoting the American Women's Voluntary Society to adopt the picture as their own. Press and radio gave coverage to a special screening for the AWVS, the members of which pledged themselves to conduct a telephonic campaign on behalf of the picture.

A War Bond tieup resulted in special booths placarded with: "This Above All—Buy War Bonds and Stamps." AWVS volunteers manned the booths. Full page co-op ads were promoted from the local merchants with banner head featuring the title. Bookmarks were used in a citywide distribution and the advance lobby display featured a 24-sheet with black velvet background.

In Norfolk, Va., Pierre Boulogne at the Norva Theatre received official recognition by the Red Cross and Associated Women's War Committee of the picture as representing their role in the war. The opening night fanfare included the presence of official representatives from nine feminine war organizations, British consul, British war heroes and merchant marine heroes. Boulogne posted half-sheet posters in air raid warden and fire auxiliary headquarters, used special radio interview programs of celebrities at the opening and concentrated on car card advertising on all transport lines.

The Milwaukee date included a day-and-date engagement of the picture at the Wisconsin and Palace Theatres, handled by Managers Roy Pierce and J. R. Rosenfield. Press and editorial screenings were coordinated with showings for heads of the WAAC recruiting and all leaders of civilian war effort.

Defense workers were reached by "This Above All" war bond tieups in the plants, the Chicago Sun featured a serialization of the picture and here too transport lines and stations were placarded.

G. F. Butterfield at the Lincoln Theatre in Lincoln, Neb., launched his campaign with the special gift of autographed copies of the novel to war heroes' mothers, the stunt winning wide space and comment in the local dailies. Department stores devoted extensive window space to book tieups, special heralds were distributed to all office workers throughout the city and the cooperation of the local War Bond Committee won a complete tiein on all their radio advertising and extra 24-sheet coverage.

Haney's "Horsemen" Front

To put across his message on "40 Thousand Horsemen," Leo Haney at the Bucklen, in Elkhart, Ind., covered the entire front of one of his circuit's closed theatres with cutouts of the main characters in the picture together with clippings from the local papers on General MacArthur's exploits in Australia with the caption tied in to the timeliness of the picture.

Selling Points ON THE NEW PRODUCT

TEN GENTLEMEN FROM WEST POINT (Twentieth Century-Fox): This is a period picture, but little accent need be placed on this phase; emphasis can be put on the romance and military atmosphere. For example, with regard to the romance, the fact that in the picture Maureen O'Hara is the "Sweetheart of the Corps" can be used as a lever upon which to hang a contest to name the sweetheart of some nearby camp, perhaps of the servicemen from your town or of a local military school. There are West Point graduates in every city and town in the country—probably most of them are now serving with the armed forces—but it would be a good idea to invite as many as possible to the opening. There's a line, "Clothes make a gentleman", in the picture which should make easy a tieup with a haberdasher. The press book suggests some quiz material. The Roxy in New York planted an Inquiring Photographer stunt before the opening there which can be used elsewhere. There is also available a five-day newspaper contest.

BEYOND THE BLUE HORIZON (Paramount): Dorothy Lamour in a sarong is the Number One selling slant. The fact that the picture is in Technicolor can be put over effectively by judicious use of color in fronts, lobbies and other displays. One way to put over the return of the sarong is to have a life-size figure of Dorothy Lamour in the lobby covered by a sarong and so placed with relation to an electric fan that animation results. Tieups can be obtained with music stores on the old but still popular song. There's a coloring contest for the kids that will help put over the Technicolor and also the sarong. A girl appropriately dressed and carrying or leading a monkey would be a good ballyhoo, especially if the monkey is well trained enough to hand out heralds.

Shannon Distributes Father's Day Wire

Through a tieup with Postal Telegraph, Chuck Shannon at the Cambria, in Johnstown, Pa., ahead of Father's Day promoted the distribution of miniature wires which were mailed to his patrons. The copy on the wire read: "Dear Friend: You will thank us for reminding you that Sunday is 'Father's Day.' Why not send him a 'Father's Day' greeting via Postal and then bring him to the Cambria for a grand entertainment treat to see 'Her Cardboard Lover.'"

Campbell Celebrates Anniversary

To celebrate anniversary week at the Capitol Theatre, in Brampton, Ontario, Jack Campbell promoted a full page of congratulatory ads for his local merchant. The page was particularly effective since the words "Salutations, Congratulations and Best Wishes" were printed in red. Campbell further promoted a huge birthday cake which he planted in his lobby and distributed to patrons.

Boyd's "Invaders" Tabloid

To sell "The Invaders" at the Suffolk Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., Clifford Boyd had tabloid papers printed up and distributed about town by a man in a paratroop uniform. The front page carried scene stills and picture copy, as did the inside spread, the back page given over to cooperating merchant's ad which entirely defrayed the cost of printing and distribution.

Elder Lands Displays On "Ship Ahoy" Date

Numerous window displays were promoted by Bill Elder in advance and during his run of "Ship Ahoy" at Loew's Theatre, in Indianapolis. One, planted in the music department of one of the best department stores, featured a color 40 by 60 blowup of Skelton, Eleanor Powell, Tommy Dorsey and the gang. The store also plugged the sale of Dorsey records. Chain drugstore stressed the sale of a "Ship Ahoy" sundae through the use of streamers on the mirrors and windows, while numerous merchants came through with co-op ads, each of which carried art and picture title.

Smith Gives MacArthur Photos

Clyde Smith at the Paramount in Hot Springs, Ark. landed newspaper stories on his giveaway of tinted photos of General MacArthur. Each patron attending his show between the hours of five and seven were presented with a tinted portrait of the General. The pictures were given in connection with the showing of "Remember Pearl Harbor."

Hill's "York" Front

For his opening of "Sergeant York" at the Fox Gillioz Theatre, in Springfield, Mo., Roy Hill built an entire false front which was done in red, white and blue. Life size cutout heads of Gary Cooper were also planted and outlined in white neon.

RUBBER MATINEES

Kids Bring Scrap to Theatres in Lieu of Admissions

War showmanship has come to the fore again in campaigns submitted by Round Tablers. A large part of their efforts has been devoted to the sale of War Stamps and Bonds but with the President's request for scrap rubber, showmen, enterprising as ever, were right on the job with rubber matinees.

The City Newsreel Theatre, in New York City, has installed a rubber "conservatorium" in the lobby of the theatre. Patrons are requested to deposit their discarded overshoes, raincoats, old hot water bottles, etc.

Further patriotic interest is evinced by the announcement that all patrons attending the afternoon performances between the hours of four to five will be admitted with any standard item of discarded rubber, plus tax, as the sole price of a ticket.

Lions Club Sponsors War Stamp Show

To open his campaign for the sale of Bonds and Stamps at the Clemson Theatre, in Brevard, N. C., C. B. Carter promoted from a distributor, free show consisting of a feature, plus a cartoon and sport reel. Carter's next step was to contact the local Lions Club, which sponsored the free show at his house, admission being one or more war stamps.

Stewart Gillespie of the Marks Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, reports that the records are piling up fast as a result of this stunt. The kids are not breaking any records nowadays, either.

Bill Elder promoted one of those air raider machines so that with each purchase of a 25 cent stamp the customer had a chance to knock down a Jap airplane. Bill's booth at Loew's, in Indianapolis, can also be seen in the picture.

front. The local ministers gave the show a plug from their pulpits and the local daily came through with publicity on the event. The local paper also printed gratis the cards that were distributed announcing the show.

As a cooperative effort of all local theatres, Harry Botwick at the State Theatre in Portland, Maine, forwards a tear sheet from the daily showing a co-op ad run recently. Banner-line across the top read: "Keeping Faith with Your Uncle Sam." Directly below was a cut of the President, and his quotes: "The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens." This was followed by other institutional copy plugging the sale of bonds and stamps at the theatres, together with a list of each theatre in Portland and the vicinity.

Jane Withers Personal Aids Bond Sale

J. G. Felder, city manager of Warners', in Steubenville, Ohio, was fortunate in securing the services of Jane Withers, who was making a personal appearance at the circuit's Capitol theatre. The starlet headed a bond rally held in front of the theatre, which was featured by a parade of the American Legion, presentation of the colors and Allegiance to the Flag.

Reporting on the activities of the five Harrisburg, Pa., downtown theatres, Sam Gilman, at Loew's Theatre, tells of a rally staged in the Courthouse Plaza before a large crowd. The celebration was featured by the appearance of Russ Morgan and his orchestra, appearing in one of the Loew theatres. During the rally, the ushers from the various theatres carried banners reading: "War Bonds and Stamps can now be sold at Blank Theatre." One of the "come ons" used to start the sale of stamps rolling was the offer of a theatre ticket to one of the houses to the first 100 persons who purchased a packet of stamps.

For the past month, John Makemson at the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, has been carrying copy on bond and stamp sales in all newspaper ads and his heralds, which he used weekly, reminding patrons that they could take part of their change at the box office in stamps. Announcements were also made at local clubs to the effect that stamps could be purchased at the theatre, and whenever possible the line, "Buy War Stamps Here" is carried on the marquee.

Radio Contest For Bond Slogan

Since there is no radio station in Norwich, Conn., Joe Boyle at Loew's Broadway, has succeeded in knocking off a half hour radio program in New London for six consecutive days. The program contains movie chatter with plenty of plugs for the theatre and prizes were awarded to listeners sending in the best radio announcements for the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. A box in the lobby next to the War Stamp display was made available for the letters.

Taking advantage of the visit of Johnny Sheffield and his "Buy a Tank for a Yank" national tour, Jack Matlack at the Craterian in Medford, Ore., promoted a short and

HAS NEW METHOD TO CALL AIR WARDENS

Frank Bickerstaff reports this week development of a signal system for calling air raid wardens and other civilian defense workers from theatres without disturbing audiences. This is an interesting problem and one which caused the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, recently in convention in Atlantic City, some concern.

Frank has worked out with civilian defense officials in Athens, Ga., where he is city manager for Lucas & Jenkins, three different signal lights: Yellow light means "Alert, report for duty"; blue light means "Caution, report for duty", and red light means "Air raid alarm, bombers will be over Athens in five minutes".

The signals are given by means of candles inside of lanterns with glass slides of several colors. Lanterns are placed at the corners of the stage. No one outside of the civilian defense organization knows the meaning of the signals. As for doctors, Frank explains that they sit in a special section and that his entire staff knows all the doctors.

This War Stamp and Bond booth was erected at the Elmora Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., by H. MacCormack, manager of the house.

snappy parade to usher the young star into town. Posted on both sides of a large truck were 24-sheets selling the event. Plenty of newspaper publicity was gained and helped the theatre campaign to get off to a flying start.

Sheffield made personal appearances at seven stamp booths around the city and personal appearances at two of the theatres, giving the theatres a plug by telling the fans they could buy their stamps and bonds in any Medford theatre.

Jack has also erected in the lobby a barometer to mark the sales of War Stamps and Bonds. This is painted right on a large mirror. As sales rise, Jack has the red mark on the barometer extended an appropriate distance ceilingward. The newspaper considered this enough of an attraction to carry a considerable article about it and also mentioning that the theatres acted as agents for the sale of bonds through an arrangement with the bank.

Edwards Issues Jap Hunting License

A Jap Hunting License was the stunt inaugurated by Tom Edwards at the Ozark Theatre, in Eldon, Mo. The left hand corner of the miniature license bears a thumb nail cut of a Jap with copy: "No Closed Season. No Bag Limit. This permit is transferable." The upper right hand corner features space for a ten cent defense stamp. The copy in the center of the card reads: "Jap Hunting License No. U. S. 7643521. Fee, ten cents. No Federal Tax. Open Season Declared December 7, 1941. Good for Duration. Sold by Ozark Theatre, Eldon, Mo." Space is also supplied at the bottom for the signature of the hunter.

First theatre in the country to report issuing a $10,000 bond is the Stanley in Atlantic City, of which Dave Kaplan is manager. Owner of the Old Bookbinders in Philadelphia made the purchase.

Jimmy Dorsey, noted maestro of jive, recently played an engagement at the Earle Theatre in Philadelphia, of which Bill Israel is manager. Jimmy broke all records and as a result all of Bill's staff got War Bonds or Stamps. A photo of Jimmy handing out the prizes made the papers.

H. W. Reisinger, manager of Loew's Theatre, Evansville, Ind., promoted Lillian Crawford and her accordion band to play in the lobby of the theatre to boost Bond and Stamp sales. Ed Klinger's column in the Press gave space to announcement of the fact.

In tribute to the Armed forces of today, Ed Harris at the Fox Glendale, in Glendale, Cal., presented a Decoration Day program which included "Wings of Steel"; "Swing it Soldier"; "Playmates" and Memorial Day services.

The two features, headed by familiar radio personalities paved the way to merchandise them as a radio unit, which Harris says looked good in his advertising. Two local boys on leave, who had recently been injured in a navy encounter with the Japs were introduced from the stage, as were veterans from the last war and prominent citizens.

By inviting the newscarriers to his special "I Am an American" Day show, Harris was assured of excellent breaks in the daily.

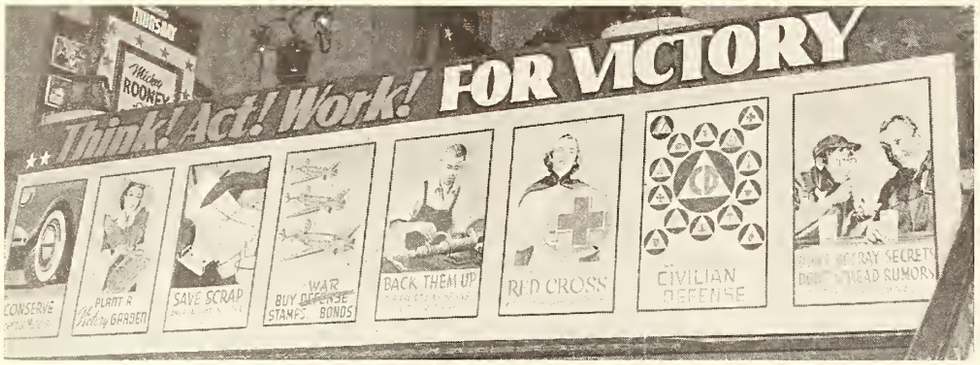
Making the American Legion a sponsor of the event, they secured over 20 young men who had just reached their majority, acclaiming them full fledged Americans on the theatre stage. The Legion Color Guard presented the Flag ceremonies, all joining in the Allegiance to the Flag, followed by the audience singing the Star Spangled Banner. Edward Arnold, chairman of the Pacific coast "American Day" sent a wire congratulating Harris on his efforts to boost Americanism. This was read from the stage.

Special Tribute to Boys Joining Service

Special tribute was also paid to the guests of honor, 10 boys, who on reaching their 21st birthday joined the Army and Navy, the latter taking over the Victory Booth in the lobby, which resulted in the sale of $300 worth of Bonds and Stamps.

In advance of his showing of MOT's "America's New Army" at the Bucyrus, in Bucyrus, Ohio, Sam Fitzsimmons promoted an army "peep" from a nearby camp and placed it on display in his lobby. Photos of Fitz receiving the "peep" from the sergeant in charge were taken and together with scene stills from the picture were spotted in strategic windows, libraries, etc., about town.

Active in war work is George Cronin at the Strand, in Portland, Maine, the theatreman using his lobby to put over his ideas.



Here's a display that helps sell War Bonds and Stamps for M. H. Parker at the Strand Theatre, Erie, Penna.

One of the slants featured is his booth for patrons to deposit books for men in the armed forces. A one-sheet easel offers instructions to patrons for "Air Raid precaution," and a five foot cutout easel of Uncle Sam tied to the sale of Bonds and Stamps is also conspicuous. All silver foil is being collected, Cronin even urging his patrons to bring the red strip of cellophane found on cigarette packages to his theatre.

Warner theatres in the Philadelphia zone are all going for rubber matinees; some of them have held shows as early as 9:30 in the morning. Those which have already reported on rubber matinees are the Capital, Lancaster; Strand, York; State, Hanover; Majestic, Gettysburg, Lion, Red Lion, Seltzer, Palmyra; Stanley, Chester; Warner, West Chester; Ambler, Ambler and Grove, Williow Grove, all in Pennsylvania. The Warner in Wilmington, Del., also had a rubber matinee. Tons and tons of the precious scrap were turned in as a result. All proceeds will be donated to charity. Special pictures were obtained for these shows and they were held at odd hours, when regular performances were not scheduled.

James Poro, manager of the East Islip Theatre, East Islip, L. I., staged one of the first rubber matinees to be reported to the Round Table. Three tons of rubber were collected from 650 kids. Jim reports his Sunday evening business unaffected—on the contrary, it was better, with goodwill in large quantities to boot.

Francis Falkinburg used this series of war posters in the lobby of the Alabama Theatre in Birmingham. It should certainly keep the public war minded and prompt them to buy War Bonds and Stamps at the theatre.

Mention of the band's personal appearance was also plugged on all cooperating radio programs as well as the theatre's daily broadcast from the theatre. One of the dailies ran a three-column classified ad contest, 20 names were scattered throughout the ad columns, those identifying themselves at the newspaper office were given a guest ticket to the stage show.

Numerous windows were promoted by Moule ahead and during the run of the picture, while excellent cooperation was secured from the Victory Loan Committee, since the Round Tabler is Chairman of the Theatres publicity committee.

Cryptogram Contest Featured by Comer

A contest for cryptogram fans and slogan writers was promoted by Herman Comer, manager of Warners' Capitol Theatre, Philadelphia, in conjunction with the Philadelphia Daily News for "Remember Pearl Harbor." Stickers were promoted absolutely gratis and carried picture title and playdates.

Promotions Aid 'Ten Gentlemen'

To usher in his engagement of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" at the Loew's Poli, in Hartford, Conn., Lou Cohen placed a large rock in front of his theatre designating it as "the kissing rock originated by the Ten Gentlemen from West Point." Attractive debs volunteered to sell bonds on the spot and to kiss each gentleman purchasing a twenty-five-dollar bond.

Don Shane at the Capitol, in Sioux City, moored a 16-foot Goodyear blimp to the roof of his theatre with a title streamer. The slant attracted plenty of attention and word-of-mouth comment.

McDonald Gives "Dumbo" Well Rounded Campaign

Harry MacDonald of the Warner Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., in co-operation put on an elaborate campaign for "Dumbo" highlighted by merchant, record and radio tieins. Station WEMP used two special transcriptions prior to the engagement while the Victor distributors arranged for cards and displays in 30 record stores in Milwaukee. Merchant promotion included a window and special sale at Gimbel's.

To attract his juvenile trade to the date on "The Bugle Sounds," Lige Brien at the Belmar, Pittsburgh planted a camouflage contest in his local paper which features a two column outline of a tank. Guest tickets were awarded to those submitting the best coloring jobs.

Brien also arranged for the Seth Hawkins club in his territory to have the kid members parade to the theatre opening matinee, carrying signs with picture title and playdates.

Charninsky's "Blonde Comet"

As an attractor, Louie Charninsky at the Capitol in Dallas for "Blonde Comet" promoted the use of a racer which was planted on the walk in front of his theatre appropriately lettered. In addition, Louie set an easel alongside which contained photos of various auto races which had taken place in Dallas, each so designated.

Carey's Front Page Sign

Teaser Street Bally Sells "Gold Rush" for Feldman

Three members of Dick Feldman's house staff at the Paramount, in Syracuse, were used as part of his street ballyhoo ahead of "The Gold Rush." The first lad, dressed in cowboy fashion, wore a back banner reading, "I'm looking for the Indian who is looking for Charlie Chaplin in the Gold Rush, who comes to the Paramount theatre Wednesday." The second man, in Indian regalia, had copy, "I'm looking for Charlie Chaplin in the Gold Rush, which starts Wednesday at the Paramount." Last, but not least, was a bally man dressed in Chaplin attire; on his back the copy read: "I'm Charlie Chaplin, in The Gold Rush."

For further attention another lad carried a life size cutout of Chaplin with appropriate copy around the downtown section, in department stores, five and dimes and buses. Also used by Dick was the Crack-A-Jack cocktail gag, consisting of an usher dressed as the comedian serving plain water in exchange for the purchase of a ten cent war stamp.

"Invaders" Footprints Helps Sell Picture

Reported as causing much word-of-mouth comment was the teaser stunt use dby Roy P. Prytz ahead of "The Invaders" at the Granada Theatre, in Duluth. Oversized footprints with copy: "Coming!" The Invaders," were put down on the curb, and across the sidewalk directly to the front of his theatre, as advance teaser stunt.

Dale Henderson's editorial in the Herald Tribune on the picture was blown up and used for lobby display purposes and special art and stories were landed in the local papers.

Friedwald's "York" Parade

Conversing with officials of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for his opening on "Sergeant York" at the Milwaukee Theatre, in Milwaukee, Ed Friedwald arranged for a parade from Post headquarters to the theatre, a distance of about a mile. Held on the night of opening, the parade consisted of Post members and ladies' auxilary, drum and bugle corps and the county firing squad. Led by Gold Star Mothers, the aggregation on arrival at the theatre waited while the bugle corps played a few selections and the squad fired a volley as a salute to Alvin York.

Girl Dances in Foyer

What proved to be a distinct stopper for Bill Harwell before he left the Ohio, in Mansfield, for Portsmouth was a girl dressed in a grass skirt, etc., who distributed heralds from his foyer to help exploit the date of "Song of the Islands".

Newsies Tied to "Roxy Hart"

Newsboys selling their papers on the downtown streets of Modesto, Cal., wore backbanners carrying stills from "Roxy Hart" as part of Bob Collins' advance exploitation for the date at the State Theatre.

"EXPLOITIZING"

This combination exploitation and advertising idea originated in the Columbia press book department. It is a new way of putting over a contest in a newspaper which does not lean toward this sort of cooperation.

Atmospheric Lobby Aids Makemson on "Blackout"

For one week in advance of "Pacific Blackout" at the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, John Makemson had his boxoffice, all except the front panel, blacked out with black cardboard on which was lettered blackout copy. The lobby doors were covered with black crepe paper and on these were water color letters.

The foyer display featured two large shells and a cutout bomb with a card reading: "It has happened here—this is the same type of shell that was fired at our West Coast by a Japanese submarine." A card was also placed on the local police booth with copy: "Do your part for National Defense, consult the Van Wert office of Civilian Defense, then see" etc. Special letters were also mailed to all air raid wardens and others holding important positions with the Civilian Defense.

Stearn's "Larceny" Display

For his show of "Larceny, Inc." and "Blondie's Blessed Event," Harry D. Stearn at the Manring, in Middlesboro, Ky. made up a lobby display of guns, handcuffs, etc., which were borrowed from a local secondhand store at no cost. These were mounted on a large board in the lobby with appropriate copy on the picture. A cutout streamer on "Blondie" was used in the outside lobby and Stearn secured space in the window of a local furniture store which featured baby carriages tied directly to the picture.

Brenner's "Clouds" Setpiece

What proved to create a great deal of interest reports Milton Brenner at the Embassy Theatre, in Orange, N. J., was the Wright Cyclone motor promoted in conjunction with the showing of "Captains of the Clouds." Planted in his lobby was a card with scene still and copy topped by American flags.

Fitz and Teschner Welcome Canzoneri

For the personal appearance at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury and Loew Poli Bijou, in New Haven, Ed Fitzpatrick and T. Teschner respectively report the highlights of their campaigns. The former tied in with all local dailies for cooperation, the sports editors on each interviewing the champ, who was billed as the "gentleman champion." On the evening of his opening day, the ex-pugilist was the guest star on the local news program, which mentioned times of his appearance on stage. In addition, posters plugging Canzoneri's appearance were planted a week in advance in recreation centers, amateur fight stadiums, bowling alleys, etc.

Teschner for his date used six men with sandwich boards to tour the downtown area with copy selling the personal. Announcements were made at the local Arena just before one of the big fights, while pictures of the winner together with the ex-fighter were planted in the local papers. Here too, radio sports announcers interviewed him with due plugs for the theatre.

Baby's Photograhic Contest Finds Favor for McManus

Reported as being highly successful was the Baby's Photograph Contest held during the month of June by Steve McManus at the Bayview Theatre, in Toronto, and tied to a local druggist.

To acquaint folks with the contest, Steve made personal spot announcements from his stage a week ahead of the opening in addition to running special ads in the two local papers. The cooperating merchant donated an entire window to the contest which was changed weekly. The winning photos after being displayed at the theatre for a week were transferred to the store window.

The theatre's program carried a back page ad plugging the stunt with merchant credit line, the druggist sent letters to his customers acquainting them with the tieup and in addition to defraying all costs, the merchant also came through with cash prizes for the winners.

Jolley Hails Fontaine

Mel Jolley at the Columbia in St. Thomas, Ontario, for "Rebecca," stressed Miss Fontaine's winning of an Academy Award in all his newspaper ads, which also featured a cut of the star. Heralds were distributed to patrons leaving the theatre and the surrounding area was covered in a house-to-house canvass. A six-sheet on the side wall of the theatre sold the opening two weeks in advance with full tiein copy.

Boyle's Girl Ballyhoo

Joe Boyle at Loew's Poli Broadway, in Norwich, Conn., for "Rings on Her Fingers" arranged a street ballyhoo of a girl smartly dressed wearing rings on her fingers and anklets with small bells attached. The girl distributed smallcards with appropriate tiein copy pertaining to the picture. Through a tieup with one of the local merchants, Boyle promoted a window display featuring June brides.

USHER TO MANAGER

Careers of Showmen usually begin at the bottom of the Ladder

Carey Started as Usher In Native City of Gettysburg

Jim Carey, like many another successful showman, started as an usher. That was in 1930 in his native city of Gettysburg, Penna. Jim wasn't 17 yet but two weeks after he started he was promoted to doorman at the Majestic Theatre, a Warner Bros.' house. He remained four years as doorman and then was promoted to assistant manager of the Majestic and Strand Theatres. Another year elapsed and he was made manager of the Strand, retaining the assistant managership of the Majestic. In 1939, Jim resigned and went to Milwaukee as assistant manager of the Oriental Theatre. A few months later he joined William Goldman Theatres as extra manager. He served first at the Strand and Hippodrome Theatres in Pottstown, Penna., then as relief manager and last year was appointed to his present post of manager of the Hiway Theatre, York, Penna., not too far away from his own home town of Gettysburg. Jim is married and the father of one child.

"Baby Dumpling" Suit In Hollywood Court

A suit filed this week in Hollywood on behalf of Larry Sims, seven years old, who plays the "Baby Dumpling" role in the "Blondie" series, demanded $118,000 damages from Leon le Doux, who plays the corresponding role on the radio. The suit contends that the radio "Baby Dumpling" imitated "the exact detonation, inflection and pitch" of the film "Baby Dumpling." The petition charged that Sims had suffered damage to a valuable property right, the use of his own natural voice.

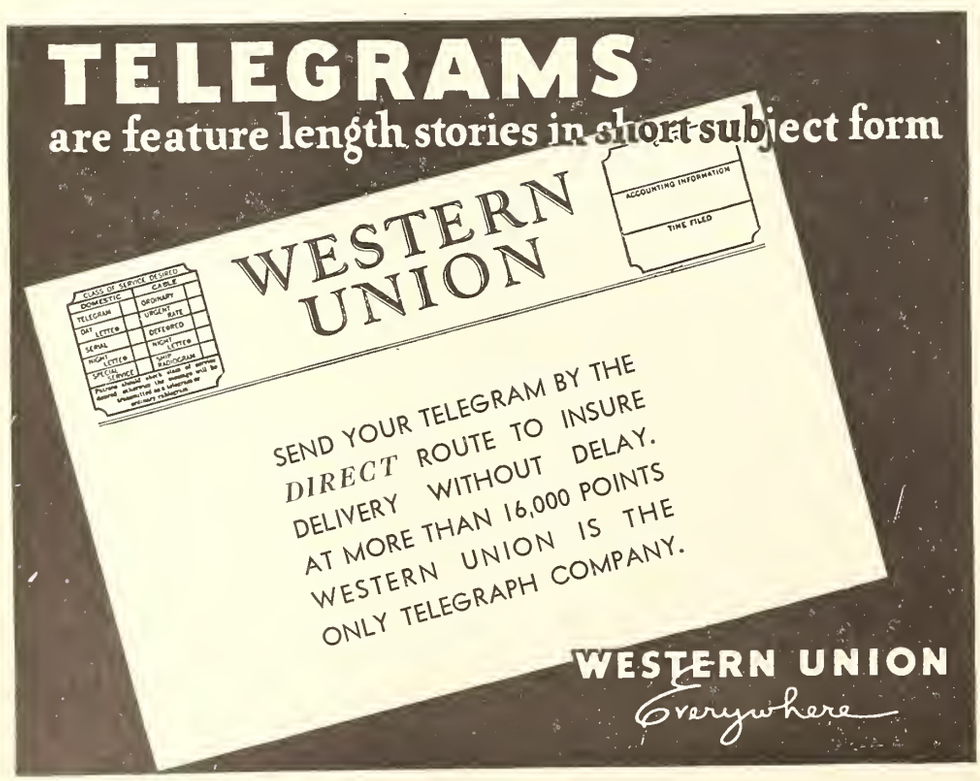
NBC Motion Denied In Anti-Trust Suit

John P. Barnes, federal judge, in Chicago last week, denied a motion of the Radio Corporation of America and National Broadcasting Company for a bill of particulars in the $3,425,000 anti-trust suit filed by the Mutual Broadcasting System and several of its stockholder affiliates. At the same time, Judge Barnes ordered that certain references in the title of the suit be stricken out to avoid the implication that the action was a representative one for the benefit of all Mutual affiliates and stockholders.

Mutual, in its brief, had conceded that the action was not representative in character. RCA and NBC have 60 days, under the order, to file an answer. The case may go to trial in the autumn. Mutual filed suit early last January, after the Government had previously filed a similar action, charging that the network and its affiliates had been damaged by exclusive contracts and options on time of NBC affiliates.



Judge Rules Ban on Outdoor Movies Invalid

A township ordinance in Allentown, Pa., banning outdoor movies, was ruled invalid as a "discriminatory trade regulation," in an opinion handed down last week by President Judge R. W. Iobst of the Lehigh County Court of common pleas. The ruling reversed the judgement of a justice of the peace in Whitehall township, who held the exhibitor guilty of violating the ordinance, and ordered restitution made to the exhibitor for fines and costs paid.

The opinion was made on the appeal of Leon Male, operator of the Seventh Street Drive-In Theatre, an outdoor summer theatre about one mile north of Allentown, from his conviction before a justice of peace on July 7, 1941, when he was fined $50 and costs. Pending the outcome of the appeal, Mr. Male continued operating his drive-in theatre.

The Young Mr. Pitt

(Twentieth Century-Fox—British)

Historical Drama

This is a screen biography of one of Britain's greatest Prime Ministers, but a man whose career is not an open book save to the better educated. It has certain definite points of appeal. It has the obvious and emphatic one of Robert Donat, among the British industry's Ten Best, and it has a certain parallel with present day conditions and political affairs. It is a well made film, spectacular, and pageantried, both personal and political, well acted. It carries unceasing concentration on the political and military aspects of Pitt's career. Romance plays a lesser role: so some women may find implied suggestion that a personable young man could have been more exciting in his loves.

Pitt is cast more or less as a Churchill of the Napoleonic days, a fervent reformer who cleaned up political conditions, fought against appeasement, armed his country against invasion, saved the nation and rid Europe of the menace of military aggression. The canvas is tinted luridly in its depiction of the corruption of the Commons and the weakness of the King. Pitt's solitary awareness of the dangers of aggression, his lone fight to save his country, and his building of a fleet are designed as human drama.

The wars against Napoleon are obvious parallels with today's war against the Axis. All through the drama the parallels crop up, speeches which might have been spoken today, situations which forecast the present, figures foreshadowing the spectres of 1942. The camera travels into and depicts 10 Downing Street, the King's Apartments, the House of Commons, chophouses and fistic academies, streets which savour of Rowlandson, sedan chairs and snuff boxes, and for Mr. Pitt's delectation, oceans of Red Seal Port.

Donat is urgent and sincere as the Younger Pitt and his speeches are worth the listening. Robert Morley, a greasy, suave Charles James Fox, Raymond Lovell, in a comedy King role, Albert Lieven as Talleyrand, John Salew as the irreproachable shadow, Smith, are some who stand out of an excellent and earnest cast.

Settings are in general accurate. Camerawork is lucent and defined. Gilliatt and Launder made the screen play with the unidentified assistance on dialogue of My Lord Castlerosse, to whom goes the responsibility for the original story. The whole is certainly a credit to production chief Maurice Ostrer and his producer Ted Black, undoubtedly a prestige picture for 20th-Fox—and for an industry working against wartime odds.

A trade audience gave the film undivided attention and reacted to the personal drama of Pitt's life. Its length—10,000 feet or so—did not seem to provoke uneasiness or discomfort. The star angle was agreed by exhibitors as being its soundest asset though the affinity with present day affairs was voted an additional point of appeal.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Magnificent Ambersons

(RKO Radio)

Late Victorian Tragedy

Producer - director - screenplaywright Orson Welles has assembled an excellent cast for a famous story by a popular author. He has produced it with striking sets and fine photographic effects. But the total impression of "The Magnificant Ambersons" is somehow less than the sum of its parts. The distance between the screen and its audience remains constant.

The fault does not lie entirely with Mr. Welles. It is in good part the fundamental difficulty of translating the Booth Tarkington novel into a drama that would grip today's audiences. The fact that it is set in the first quarter of this century when automobiles began to send up clouds of black smoke and women wore innumerable, fascinating articles of apparel is no obstacle for the producer who recalls these and other facts in a charming introduction. But even he can do little with the intrinsically dated character motivation on which the story hinges.

George Amberson, the spoiled son of a declining fortune, remains arrogant and selfish long past the endurance of the audience, although presumably not of the women who love him. Their long-suffering understanding, too, evokes little sympathy. The essential tragedy of the son of wealth and a loveless marriage, who has been coddled by his mother and encouraged by his family, seems of another era and not to be seriously considered today.

With all this, an unusual and intelligently-chosen cast has performed admirably. Tim Holt, of the RKO westerns, is surprisingly good as George. Dolores Costello, who plays his mother, is excellently cast. Anne Baxter makes a charming Lucy. Of the former Mercury players, whose performances on the radio and in "Citizen Kane" were generally acclaimed, first mention should go to Agnes Moorehead for her portrayal of the spinster aunt whose empty life has warped her judgment. Joseph Cotten does well, too, with the sympathetic role of the mother's former suitor and father of Lucy. Ray Collins, Richard Bennett, Erskine Sanford and Don Dillaway complete a noteworthy ensemble.

There is more than a suggestion that Mr. Welles has tried to adapt radio technique to the screen—his use of the narrative introduction and interpolation, and the sudden transition once a point has been made. This auditory approach has its advantages in the accompanying music of Bernard Herrman, but tends to keep the story episodic and to stifle emotional appeal.

Lady In a Jam

Comedy of Psychoses

Irene Dunne shoulders the burden of humor in this comedy of socialites and psychiatrists, and gives it a wealth of effectiveness, with Patric Knowles portraying with restraint and coherence the role of a psycho-analyst who sets out to correct her idiosyncrasies and ends mildly aberrated by emotion sustained in the process.

Produced and directed by Gregory LaCava, the film has expertness of handling as a factor outweighing whatever barrier general unfamiliarity with the terminology of psychologists may be to public comprehension. On the same upside of the balance is the frequent excursioning into the field of slapstick, which includes such matters as calf roping and other incidents occurring in Arizona where the heroine goes to see a grandmother alleged to own a gold mine.

The script, by Eugene Thackrey, Frank Cockrell and Otho Lovering, presents Miss

Dunne as a New York heiress of flighty temperament who finds herself broke without understanding why. It casts Knowles as a psychiatrist engaged by her guardian to correct her impulses. He hires out to her as chauffeur, reveals his purpose after she has been sold out, takes her to Arizona as a means of resolving her psychosis and also enabling her to replenish her funds, and winds up, after their return, helpless on the receiving end of her proposal of marriage.

The picture is out of routine and without seriousness in any particular, supplying showmen and their audiences a change of pace at this point in the flow of product.

One Thrilling Night

(Monogram)

Humorous Honeymoon

Producer A. W. Hackel is not the first maker of films to find humor in the momentary thwartings of a pair of newlyweds, but he's one of the first to make them steadily entertaining for 69 minutes without stepping over the borderline of taste or spending a million dollars in the doing. This comedy did everything for its preview audience that it might have done at ten times the cost of production and with a blue book of marquee names flying out front.

John Beal and Wanda McKay enact the honeymooners, in New York from upstate for one night of wedded bliss before he's to join the army, and they miss nary a laugh for keeping it clean. The complications begin with their finding of a cadaver in their bed, and multiply to include their capture by gangsters, their escape, a series of disappearances by the cadaver, which turns out to be alive, and so on, none of these being routine and all making sense in a degree beyond the custom in comedies.

William Beaudine's direction keeps interest at high pitch throughout and wastes no time in unessentials.

Previewed at the Vista theatre, Hollywood, to a Friday night audience which included a considerable number of youngsters, who joined with their elders in sustained laughter.—W. R. W.

Prisoner of Japan

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Pacific Spy Melodrama

This has a marquee title which relates it to the war and might arouse audience curiosity. It names the enemy and makes them as villainous a crew of stock heavies as ever sneered.

But the story turns on a pattern plot and has neither the acting nor directorial pace to give it reality. The action takes place on the island of a ne'er-do-well astronomer who is forced to act as the tool of Japanese agents. Alan Baxter plays the role with a stiff lower lip. It makes his articulation somewhat hard to hear. A dance hall girl, Gertrude Michael, comes ashore and the astronomer finds courage to turn on his captors.

Matsuru, the Jap agent, is overcome and Baxter and the girl barricade themselves in the secret radio room, frustrate a plot against a U. S. convoy, and summon a U. S. cruiser. They direct the ship's fire over the radio and die, with the Japs, in a direct hit.

Seymour Nebenzahl produced and Arthur Ripley directed. Ernest Dorian is relatively convincing as the Jap spy leader. The sound is poor and the noises which accompany a montage of Jap planes and ships are a threat to ears and sound heads alike.

Rock River Renegades

Range Busters Western

The Range Busters—Ray Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune—help out a U. S. Marshal friend doubly in this western. They track down some 'phantom' bandits thus preserving his job for him and show the bandit leader to be the marshal's rival in an affair of the heart thus eliminating that competition. It is a leisurely paced film in which the Range Busters are spared death at several points by sheer luck and more or less stumble on the bandits' hideout.

"Dusty" (King) sings "Prairie Serenade" and "Alibi" (Terhune) has a session with "Elmer," the dummy. Christine McIntyre is the girl and Weldon Heyburn the heavy.

George W. Weeks was the producer and S. Roy Luby the director of the picture.

Tough As They Come

(Universal)

Juvenile Melodrama

The Dead End Kids are growing up and, presumably, looking toward their future careers. The transition from neighborhood terrors to young men on the side of the law, worthy though it is, does not seem to have added entertainment values to their screen appearances.

Intimate knowledge of slum conditions in New York prompts Billy Halop, former leader of the group, to a desire for work in alleviating them. His aim is a job with the Legal Aid Society, but his methods—he is soon in the employ of a hated loan company—arouse the suspicion of his friends. He manages finally to clear himself, secure evidence against the company and earn a chance to prove his abilities.

The story is a little thin, although competent performances by Billy Halop, Bernard Punsley and Huntz Hall, along with the able direction of William Nigh, keep the action well-paced.

Ken Goldsmith is listed as associate producer.

Blondie's Blessed Event

Another Bumstead

The latest of the popular "Blondie" series introduces a new member, a baby girl, to the comic strip characters created by Chic Young. Its arrival is the cause, direct and indirect, of all of Dagwood's difficulties, including a playwright who won't go home and another dismissal by J. C. Dithers.

Dagwood is taking his prospective fatherhood so hard that Dithers sends him off to a convention. There his sad state arouses the sympathy, among other emotions, of an unsuccessful playwright who returns with him to take over his home. All this is too much for Blondie, who does not want the baby called "Cookie," who resents Baby Dumpling's passionate admiration of the visitor and who would like to get back to the point where they paid their bills.

Matters are cleared up, of course, and Dagwood is back at his desk before the picture ends.

Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton will not disappoint their many fans with this latest adventure in family life.

The film was produced by Robert Sparks and directed by Frank R. Strayer.

Tower of Terror

(Monogram)

Minor English Thriller

In direction, and dramatic heaviness, this is reminiscent of silent days. It also has dialogue exceedingly English and often muffled. A mostly male audience at a Broadway transient theatre refused to take it seriously.

The story has Movita, a refugee from a German concentration camp, and hiding in the lighthouse off the German-occupied coast, where keeper Wilfred Lawson is inordinately fond of her, believing her his wife reincarnate. He had murdered his wife, buried her beneath the lighthouse. Another character on the island, as a helper, is Michael Rennie, who turns out to be a British spy attempting to return to England from Germany, and awaiting a rescue boat.

The picture moves fast when Lawson and Rennie fight over Movita, Rennie winning—but only temporarily; for Lawson frees himself of his chains, and smashes Rennie into unconsciousness, then drags Movita to the underground chamber where his wife is buried, and begins digging Movita's grave. However, the Germans discover Rennie's identity, and that he is on the island; and their patrol boat shells the lighthouse. Rennie rescues Movita; the two escape by British motorboat; Lawson is left moaning in his wife's grave, and is buried by the debris of the smashed, burning tower.

Strictly In The Groove

Musical

Another of Universal's little musical comedies, this one is little more than an expanded band short, a series of musical numbers, songs and dances held loosely together by a dull and inconsequential story.

Bob Saunders (Richard Davies) on graduating from college, prefers piano playing in an orchestra (Ozzie Nelson's) to entering the restaurant business with his father (Russell Hicks). Disowned, he finds himself in Arizona with the band playing at a competitive resort to one of his father's properties. Father goes to Arizona, sees the boy is making good without his help and is won over.

Davies, Mary Healey, Martha Tilton and Grace McDonald, sing and dance, and musical specialties are done by Ozzie Nelson and his band, the Dinning Sisters, from radio, and Jimmy Wakely and his Cowboy Band. Picture's greatest appeal will be for the younger element.

Vernon Keays did the best he could with a script by Veni Higgins and Warren Wilson. Joseph G. Sanford was associate producer and John W. Boyle photographed.

Flight Lieutenant

(Columbia)

Aviation Melodrama

There is no warring in this melodrama of aviation and aviators, which begins in 1932 and ends in 1941, although there is much about flying and the final involves the testing of an interceptor for the U. S. army.

The story concerns a flier, veteran of World War I, who is grounded by the Aeronautics Authority and goes to Dutch Guiana where he earns money by commercial flying to send back home for support of his son. The boy grows up in ignorance of his father's disgrace and is about to be married when he learns that his fiancee's father was killed in the crash for which his father was grounded. The father redeems himself by substituting for his son in a test flight which eventuates fatally after establishing the unworthiness of a new plan for army use. Pat O'Brien gives the principal role his usual vigorous performance, and Glenn Ford portrays the son with some effectiveness, but overdeliberation in all departments is a handicap which neither players nor plot manage to cope with.

Production is by B. P. Schulberg and direction by Sidney Salkow, from a script by Michael Blankfort.

Rubber Racketeers

(Monogram)

Topical Melodrama

First picture dealing with the tire racket to reach the screen, Monogram's "Rubber Racketeers" is a timely crime melodrama whose contents make it worthy of extended exploitation. It is as topical as tomorrow's headlines, and has action, romance, and a message of patriotism packed together in such fashion as to deliver a terrific wallop.

Backgrounded against a defense industry, the story concerns a former bootlegger who gets out of prison just after the United States enters the war and who evolves a new racket—the stealing of new automobile tires and selling them, as well as the sale of unsafe recapped tires made with crude rubber they have stolen.

When a defense plant worker is killed in an accident caused by a tire blowout, his friends find that the tire, newly purchased, was remade from bad rubber. The lad's fellow workers investigate, and after a series of adventures, uncover the ring and capture the criminals.

Ricardo Cortez as the gang leader, Rochelle Hudson as his sweetheart and Bill Henry, who leads the workers in the expose of the criminals, are co-starred. Supporting them are Kam Tong, a Chinese who does an outstanding performance as a servant who enlists in the army; Barbara Read, Milburn Stone, Dewey Robinson, Pat Gleason, John Abbott and others.

Henry Blankfort wrote the original screenplay, making of it an exciting piece of cinema writing. Harold Young, in his direction, utilized every frame of film to advantage. The fourth production of the King Brothers, Maurice and Franklin, it is by far their best.

Previewed at the Filmarte Theatre, Hollywood, where a press and professional audience were greatly impressed. Applause punctuated the unfolding of the story.—VANCE KING.

MEN IN WASHINGTON—1942 (RKO)

March of Time (23,112)

Washington is a boom town and has been for some time back, starting with the advent of the New Deal and accelerated step by step by developments of the European conflict and culminating in the attack on Pearl Harbor. Washington is busy and overcrowded and yet the constant stream of men and women converging on the city continues because the expanding agencies of the Government need them.

In this issue of the March of Time, the editors have followed the stream of humanity there to find out what goes on and to present their findings to the moviegoers of the country. What they find is what the moviegoers have been reading in their newspapers about the war effort and about the men directing it. The difference is that here are the men in action.

The most footage goes to the top man of Washington today, the President, who is rounding out a decade in the same spot. Others shown in candid studies are Nelson, Hopkins, Henderson, McNutt, Landis, and Wallace.

Lacking the force of some other March of Time issues, the current subject nevertheless is worthwhile screen fare for the documentary nature of its material.—P. C. M.

"MRS. MINIVER" AT RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL

1st WEEK	2nd WEEK	3rd WEEK	4th WEEK	5th WEEK	6th WEEK	7th WEEK	8th WEEK	9th WEEK	10th WEEK	11th WEEK

In first four weeks the attendance was 622,354 a new high in Music Hall's 10 year history, the first picture ever to attract more than 150,000 attendance each week for four consecutive weeks.

Continuing its record-breaking pace it will soon pass the 6-week mark attained by only three other pictures (two were M-G-M) in Music Hall history. "It has been playing to 94% of capacity since opening," reports Gus Eyssell, Managing Director. "This is unprecedented in our history."

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 148. No. 2 — July 11, 1942

It's Official

WITH fine fair words, and friendly, the motion picture has the approval and encouragement of leaders of the war effort, beginning with the chief executive and commander-in-chief. Happily inevitable is the service of this art of the screen, born of the people of this Democracy, to the causes of the whole people now. It scarcely could have been otherwise. But this industry, enmeshed so in the war problems of all great enterprises, technological, commercial, social and political, can do well with expressions that re-state, for both Government and People, the essential nature of the functions of the art.

The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens. The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit. I want no censorship of the motion picture; I want no restrictions placed thereon which will impair the usefulness of the film other than those very necessary restrictions which the dictates of safety make imperative.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

I have come here to thank this industry for its fine attitude toward, and its important assistance in, the British fight for democracy and freedom. Motion pictures are a vital element in maintenance of the high morale of both our civilian and fighting forces and our appreciation is indeed deep and genuine.

LORD HALIFAX,
British Ambassador to the United States.

. . . I have been greatly impressed by the sincerity of the motion picture industry as a whole in its purpose to aid our national defense in every way. All my experience with you and those you represent has been pleasant and I have every reason to feel sure the same will be true during the months ahead. I am confident that we can make this cooperation very effective, indeed.

LOWELL MELLETT,
Coordinator of Government Films.

The strength of the film industry lies precisely in the fact that it is an entertainment industry. What is most valuable to the state in time of war as in time of peace is that it commands a vast audience who go genuinely and spontaneously for the emotion stimulus which the movies give them.

JOHN GRIERSON,
Canadian Government Film Commissioner.

Military morale cannot be separated from civilian morale. . . . It is dangerous for us to rely too much on military equipment. All armament must be backed and inspired by invincible resources of the human soul.

HENRY L. STIMSON,
Secretary of War.

Nations survive not alone because they possess implements of war or masses of men but because they possess indispensable morale. Those who are dealing with the strengthening of national morale are engaged in a national defense effort as vital as any.

FRANK KNOX,
Secretary of the Navy.

In times of peace motion pictures are a luxury, but in times of war they are a necessity. The declaration by the government that this is an essential industry was one of the most indicative and significant moves ever made by the government in relation to the entertainment world.

Colonel W. MASON WRIGHT,
Chief of the Pictorial Branch, U. S. Army.

From the beginning of the nation's war effort, this industry, which plays such an important role in all patriotic and charitable enterprises, has done everything requested of it by any department of the government. . . . Everywhere I have found a full realization of individual responsibility for conserving materials and at the same time preserving the industry that is so necessary to the country's morale.

HAROLD HOPPER,
War Production Board.

The place of the motion picture in free nations at war for freedom has been demonstrated by experience. When enemy planes swept over England, authorities closed the picture houses. And so it was in France. In a month Britain reopened the theatres to aid morale. France did not. America's fighting men have demanded and got pictures right up at the front. War workers on the three shifts of the endless production effort have demanded and got pictures for entertainment, no matter when their days end. So now wherever the great factories are making planes, ships and munitions there are all-day-all-night movies, too. It is the American art serving the American way.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

$538,000 for Miniver

"MRS. MINIVER" this week joined the select group of pictures—four to date—which have achieved a sixth week at the Radio City Music Hall in New York. It grossed approximately $538,000 in five weeks to earn the most money in the shortest time ever recorded by a single booking.

With the picture entering its sixth week Thursday, and grosses still above the $100,000 a week mark, executives at the Music Hall foresaw the possibility of a seventh, and possibly eighth week for "Mrs. Miniver." The only other pictures to achieve a sixth week in the Music Hall's nine years of operation were "Rebecca" at Easter time, 1940, "Philadelphia Story," Christmas-New Year's, 1940-41, and "Woman of the Year" which opened on February 5, 1942.

Up to Wednesday night approximately 772,983 persons had seen "Mrs. Miniver," better than 150,000 a week. The management reported that with four screenings a day attendance was the most consistently near capacity ever observed. Aided by the Fourth of July holiday the picture, starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, grossed approximately $107,000 from 150,629 persons in the fifth week.

Following are comparative attendance and gross statistics for the four six-week pictures.

Boom on Broadway

BROADWAY box office business is booming. There are throngs in its picture palaces. There are throngs in front of the box offices. It is a continuation of the July 4th weekend rush, which was echoed in many key cities.

"Tremendous" business was reported elsewhere. Minneapolis and Boston managers said receipts were 25 per cent over last year's. Los Angeles said there were "perfect" conditions. San Francisco theatres said business was "10 per cent above normal." Chicago's Loop area had grosses about 15 per cent increased. Better-than-usual business occurred in Providence, Omaha, St. Louis, et al.

'British Discrimination'

A RUMBLE of protest will soon become a roar, it was forecast by David Rose, Paramount's managing director in Great Britain, in New York last week. Mr. Rose said American representatives in England have become convinced all restrictions on remittances to this country, should be abolished. And they will press their viewpoint at conferences next month with British Treasury officials, he intimated. He added the restrictions extant, which have frozen an estimated $52,000,000 in American revenue, are now being viewed as discriminatory.

There have been preliminary conferences on a new monetary agreement in Washington, between the State Department and representatives of the film industry.

Although production is "difficult" in England, Paramount is preparing two pictures, Mr. Rose said. They are "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" and "The Admirable Crichton."

He observed that theatre attendance rises immediately after military reverses, proof, he added, of the service of the entertainment industry.

Mr. Rose this week left for Hollywood. He will return to London by August 1st.

$250,000 on the Line

WARNERS has bought another stage play for a huge sum, in a transaction of more than ordinary interest. The show is "This Is the Army." The sum paid is $250,000. And it is but the "first installment."

"This Is the Army" opened at the Broadway Theatre, New York, last Saturday night. Its producer is the United States Army. Its associate producer is Irving Berlin—noted, outside of his music, for "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" of World War I. Its beneficiary is the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

The $250,000 from Warners for film rights is a first installment because the Fund will share the film profits.

The film, like the play, will also have an all-soldier cast. Mr. Berlin will supervise it in Hollywood. Lieutenant-Colonel Jack L. Warner, of the Army Air Corps, and also head of Warner production, says work will begin in the autumn.

The stage show is expected to gross $1,000,000. This week, $350,000 in advance sales were already in the box office.

Fight British Quota

BRITISH exhibitors at a Cinematograph Exhibitors Association meeting in London Wednesday launched their expected onslaught against existing quota acts. After vociferous debates, they demanded that the Board of Trade substantiate the recent statement that exhibitors could meet quota obligations from films available—and also explain on what grounds 85 exhibitors were selected for prosecution, from the grand total of 1,200 defaulting the last quota year.

The exhibitors were critical that there were no prosecutions of defaulting distributors, among whom only one leading firm General Film, could meet the renters' quota. The discussion will probably be resumed at the September meeting.

Paramount to Skouras

CONSUMMATION of a deal between George Skouras' New York Circuit of 40-odd theatres and Paramount Pictures, for Paramount's 1941-42 product, was disclosed in New York this week. This is the last large New York circuit deal for 1941-42 and was made as the season draws to a close. It follows a similar deal with the Century Circuit, which together with the Skouras group had held out against Paramount's terms for almost a year.

Showmanship Awards

QUIGLEY AWARD plaques attesting to outstanding showmanship were this week awarded to Clayton Cornell, of the State Theatre, Tupper Lake, N. Y.; Edward Harris, Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Cal., and to R. Lee Kline, of the Orpheum, Philadelphia. The Awards were for the Second Quarter of 1942.

The Judges were Lou Metzger, Los Angeles theatre owner, Michael Edelstein, RKO division manager, and Ernest Emerling, assistant director of advertising and publicity for Loew's Theatres, in New York.

Medals of honor were awarded to the following runners-up: William Elder, Loew's, Indianapolis; Richard Feldman, Paramount, Syracuse, N. Y.; Edward Fitzpatrick, Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn.; A. J. Kalberer, Switow's Indiana Theatre, Washington, Ind., and to Arthur Krolich, Century, Rochester, N. Y. (See page 45.)

The United Nations

BRITAIN has been sending films as well as war materials to her ally, Russia; and Hollywood may soon have films which will be acceptable in Russia and also serve as entertainment here in the U. S.

That is the interpretation which may be placed on two news items this week: one, from the U. S. Department of Commerce, that Great Britain in two months has sent 20 short subjects and 64 newsreels to Russia, and is preparing 24 more special films; the other, from Hollywood, that producer Arthur Hornblow, late of Paramount, now of MGM, will make as his first feature for Metro, "The Song of the Red Army."

The British films are entirely in the Russian language.

U. A. May Get Welles

ORSON WELLES, until recently with RKO-Radio, but now on the outs with the new management, may go to United Artists to write, act, direct, produce, etc., as he did at RKO.

From Hollywood, Tuesday, it was reported that Gradwell Sears, Arthur Kelly and Edward Raftery, UA executives were conversing with Mr. Welles' west coast rear guard. Their topic: a deal whereby Mr. Welles and his Mercury Players would set up under the UA banner, with financing.

Last week, the Welles Hollywood publicity men, editors and business agents moved from the RKO Studio, by request. RKO said the space was needed. Both sides issued statements of strong words and the matter rested pending Mr. Welles' return from Brazil where he has been filming "It's All True" under joint RKO-Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs auspices.

From Brazil it was reported that Mr. Welles was to bring back the negative to RKO soon for editing. He was scheduled to leave Rio de Janeiro on July 15th, but delays appeared possible. First, he was to stop off at Washington to report to Nelson Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and Francis Alstock, film division head, on his assignments in South American relations. Brazil dispatches to New York papers on Tuesday reported record snowfalls, six-and-a-half feet deep; Mr. Welles might be snowbound awhile.

The United States Government, which underwrote the Brazilian RKO-Welles project against losses up to $300,000, meanwhile took the attitude that the tiff was a matter between RKO and Mr. Welles. An Inter-American Office executive pointed out that the government was "completely protected" on its $300,000. The guarantee held good only if the picture was delivered to and exhibited by RKO, it was said.

British Tighten More

EVERYONE in Great Britain will contribute shortly to the war, press wires from London reported last week. The British Government's various departments are combining to force "total war," it was reported. Small shops and businesses will be amalgamated, or eliminated. Manufacture of all non-essential goods will cease. All items possible of standardization will be standardized. Thus, clothing will be of one style; so will hats and shoes. Exhibitors of small houses were wondering whether their theatres would be "amalgamated," or "eliminated."

Could Be . . . . .

FIFTY-ONE per cent of film theatre patrons interviewed by Dr. Leo Handel like improbable coincidences in pictures; 26 per cent object: 11 per cent don't care; five per cent say their attitude depends upon the picture. The remainder have no opinions.

Dr. Handel is studying audiences through his "Motion Picture Research Bureau," New York. The question this time involved only improbable coincidences. He promises more later.

Donald Kids the Axis

DONALD DUCK is getting fighting mad. And to do his bit towards winning the war the belligerent duck, flanked by Mickey Mouse, Goofy and the other characters of the Walt Disney ink-bottle are hitting the Axis with satire. Mr. Disney and his cohorts feel that scornful laughter, and ridicule, can hit the Nazis and the Japs and Fascisti where it hurts, particularly in the still neutral countries.

Indicative of the trend towards a theme and preachment related to the war are recent Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck issues of life in the Army camps. Donald got drafted in a May release, and his antics with a top sergeant and potato pile are intended to relate directly to the spirit of America's citizen army. Pluto has turned up on the screen as an army mascot.

An even sharper trend towards ideological ridicule of the Axis is scheduled.

Soon to be released, Mr. Disney revealed at New York this week, are shorts naming the enemy by name and deflating many of their ideological contentions with the sharp barb of laughter.

"Donald Duck in Nutziland," for autumn release, will portray, via a dream, some of the probable experiences of Donald Duck should he fall into the hands of the Gestapo. It will ridicule Nazi race theories and other contentions of 'German supremacy.'

Other pictures in the same pattern are promised by Mr. Disney, who asserts that Donald and Mickey can carry not only a message of laughter, but, secondarily, one of still greater import.

Technician Shortage

THE RESEARCH COUNCIL of the Academy, in Hollywood, will train members of the Army Signal Corps Reserve in laboratory work, and in still and motion picture photography. One class has already been put to work; another will start Monday. The instructors are to be from among Hollywood's best, and are to donate their time.

The procedure is to have recruits enlist, transfer them to the Signal Corps after approval of that branch's officers, and then become members of its reserve, and so obtain the training. Following this, they are inducted into the regular army to help fill the large gaps existing in motion picture Army technical ranks.

$335,000 Censors' Bill

MOTION PICTURE distributors paid New York State's censor board $335,000 in reviewing taxes for censoring films in the year ended June 30th, 1942, establishing a new high. The tax is three mills per foot.

U. S. LAWYERS STUDY UNITY IN RELATION TO DECREE

Department of Justice Decision Awaited on Fate of New Sales Plan

Its context still the carefully guarded secret of the drafting committee, the sales plan evolved by the United Motion Picture Industry was before the Department of Justice at Washington at midweek awaiting the Government's approval.

If this is forthcoming without major changes the plan will go to Judge Henry W. Goddard, in Federal District Court at New York accompanied by a petition from consenting distributors that he include it in the Consent Decree as a formal amendment. Members of the committee which took the document to Washington on Friday were hopeful that it would reach the New York court before the end of this week.

The plan was submitted to Robert Wright, head of the motion picture unit of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice. The committee's trip to Washington climaxed months of work by the United Motion Picture Industry, its trade practices sub-committee and the legal drafting committee which, since March, has been casting the new blocks-of-12 selling formula into fitting legal language.

The delegation, headed by William F. Rodgers, chairman of the committee of the whole, consisted of Austin Keough of Paramount; Harry Brandt, New York ITOA; Abram F. Myers, counsel for Allied; Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA; William T. Crockett, president of the Virginia MPTO, and Robert Barton, Jr., attorney for the Virginia association.

Forecasting quick approval by the department, members of the group which submitted it on Friday said following their conference with Mr. Wright that no major points had been raised although a few minor changes in verbiage had been suggested by him.

Arnold, Wright Refuse Comment

Mr. Wright himself had no comment to make on the plan, pointing out that he could give no opinion until he had studied it, but he expressed the belief that a decision would be reached within a week.

Following the conference with Mr. Wright the delegation called on Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general who heads the anti-trust division. Mr. Arnold said that he would have no comment until Mr. Wright and other attorneys of the film division had completed their study of the proposed decree amendment. He indicated that the Department would abide by their decisions.

The text submitted by Mr. Rodgers and the lawyers was turned over to the consent decree section of the Justice Department. There, early this week, Government lawyers were busy checking the plan against the motion picture consent decree, and other decree precedents, to guard against inconsistencies. It was expected that they would return a report to Mr. Wright within a few days.

Members of the delegation, undeniably optimistic, expressed the opinion that the Department would advise UMPI of its approval by midweek, enabling the industry to go into court immediately with a petition for amendment of the consent decree. This would make the new plan effective in time for an early start on selling for the 1942-43 season which begins on September 1st.

Neither department officials nor members of the industry delegation would reveal details of the new plan, which the drafting committee had agreed not to publish until after the Department had acted. It was emphasized, however, that it dealt solely with selling and it was said that any other problems would be taken up one by one after the sales plan had been settled.

The delegation told Mr. Wright that 98 per cent of the exhibitors favored the new plan over the former block-of-five sales provided for originally in the consent decree. Exhibitor representatives, however, were said to have made it clear that their approval was not indicative of a belief that the new method was entirely satisfactory but that it was felt to be an improvement which should be given a trial. They pointed out that it would be effective initially for only a limited period. If need arose it could readily be amended or abandoned at the close of the trial term.

The new plan was brought to Washington under more favorable auspices than attended the initial blocks-of-five proposal of the consent decree. The UMPI plan had the support of the two major national exhibitor organizations, National Allied, and Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. It also had received the support, in original form, of all but a few regional organizations.

Independent Exhibitors, Inc., the New England Allied unit and constituent groups in the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association were the only principal organizations to register opposition to the unity proposals. The New England association subsequently resigned from Allied.

The Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers has also registered protests against the new selling plan proposed by the Big Five.

Mr. Keough, at a committee meeting on Tuesday, reaffirmed his stand that the text of the plan should be kept secret until presented to the court. He was reported to have taken the position that neither the UMPI committees nor the Government should be required to explain or defend any last changes which they might have to work out.

Meanwhile it was learned that numerous regional exhibitor groups and field leaders had asked UMPI headquarters for copies of the final text. These requests have all been denied.

Abram F. Myers, outlining the UMPI plan to the 50 delegates at the meeting, saw encouragement in it as "the first earnest attempt to solve industry problems." He urged maintenance of strong regional exhibitor associations and said that while rental problems were primarily local there might be a chance of national action soon.

EARLY APPROVAL SEEN FOR PLAN

The blocks-of-12 selling plan, in substantially the same text submitted to the Department of Justice last Friday, was expected on Wednesday to reach the U. S. District Court at New York by week's end. Industry leaders at New York reported that a few "very minor" changes suggested by Robert Wright, head of the Justice Department film unit, had been made. Barring last minute revisions, they expected the Government lawyers to arrange a date with Judge Henry Goddard on Friday, or early next week, for him to pass on the plans as a formal amendment to the consent decree. It was reported that both industry attorneys and the Government were anxious to avoid extended court hearings. If approved by the court, the new order of selling would be effective immediately for pictures slated for the 1942-43 season, which starts September 1st.

THREE GOVERNMENT UNITS DEAL DIRECT WITH STUDIOS

Offices of Censorship, War Information, Inter-American Affairs Functioning

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Three agencies of the United States government now deal with the motion picture at its source in Hollywood, not counting the Army and Navy.

At the top is the Los Angeles Film Board of Review, established by the Office of Censorship under Byron Price, appointee of the President, which concerns itself with completed films, domestic and foreign, on the point of availability for export and import licensing.

The Office of War Information, established by Lowell Mellett, U. S. Co-ordinator of Films, recently placed under direction of Elmer Davis, appointee of the President, concerns itself declaredly with the supplying of ideas, information and material, on application, to the producers of films for the entertainment market, actually with a good deal more than that.

The Motion Picture Society for the Americas, established by the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Nelson A. Rockefeller, appointee of the President, concerns itself with the suitability of films for exhibition in the Latin-American countries, with financing out of governmentally appropriated funds both short subjects and features, going beyond this in practice to take a hand also in the general preparation of films of all lengths and kinds for the field of commercial entertainment.

The Los Angeles Board of Review, consisting of Watterson Rothacker, chairman, Thomas Geraghty and Major Ralph Liddle, U.S.A., maintains a staff of three examiners.

This organization views pictures in completed form, guided by a memorandum supplied by the Office of Censorship detailing 10 specific bases of consideration and several generalizations subject to interpretation and application by the chairman, and is empowered to grant or withhold export license. It wields the same power to grant or withhold import license for films of foreign origin.

The Los Angeles Board of Review reads no scripts, renders no judgments in advance upon pictures in production, limits itself to the function announced as its purpose and confines its attentions to completed pictures.

Function of O.W.I. In Hollywood

The function of the Hollywood branch of the Office of War Information, according to the announcement issued by Co-ordinator Mellett at the time of its establishment under resident directorship of Nelson Poynter, is to make available to producers the Government's viewpoint on matters related to the war effort, to facilitate studio acquisition of data and information in Governmental possession, and to pass on to producers suggestions, ideas and topics considered by the Government to be suitable for inclusion in the stream of entertainment product.

Originally ensconced in the Roosevelt Hotel, where it was announced he could be contacted by producers on impulse, Mr. Poynter now is officed in the Taft Building, at the corner of Vine Street and Hollywood Boulevard, where he is aided by his assistant, Fred Polangin, and a staff of five reviewers.

Co-ordinator Mellett, who revealed his objectives to producers and organization executives in a two-day visit, left behind him some 30 ideas as suggestions which he felt might serve usefully in the making up of subject material for entertainment films. Producers picked and chose, seeing short subject material in most of them, feature material in a few.

New Developments Bring More Suggestions

"Yes, there have been some more since then," Mr. Poynter replies to inquiry. "Rubber, for instance, wasn't a topic of urgent importance then. Developments bring up more as matters progress. Any problem that is likely to be of some duration lends itself to film treatment."

Sitting in a hotel suite awaiting callers was no role for short, slight, dynamic Mr. Poynter, owner of a newspaper and broadcasting station which, he says, he has neglected shamefully since dedicating himself to the war effort. He was too young to get in the last one, declares he wants to do his utmost this time.

In the months since his appointment he has extended his activity into every department of Hollywood procedure. He addresses writers en masse, notifying them of the trend of Government interest and policy in subjects and on treatments. He addresses producer associations similarly, and producers, directors and others individually, making himself available the while to any and all of them for advice and counsel.

"Yes, they are most cooperative," he says. "It's their war, too, and they want to win it."

He sits in on "as many as fifteen story conferences a week," on invitation. "We are purely an advisory organization. I am a newspaper man and you know how newspaper men feel. If there had been radio and motion pictures when the founding fathers were writing the Bill of Rights their inviolability would have been included as well as implied."

And "Yes," he and his reviewers examine all the product in work at the studios, not just those films which are based on suggestions supplied by his office, for it would be possible for a picture or pictures based on other subject matter acquired in the course of standard procedure to offset or nullify the effect of the films based on ideas furnished by the O.W.I.

Submits 50-Page Manual to Hollywood

Last week Administrator Poynter made available to producers, writers and other interested parties a 50-page brochure, prepared in loose-leaf form so that supplemental pages can be added, setting forth the principles, plans and purposes of the O.W.I. and submitting, in the concluding pages, six themes recommended for filming.

But "It is not possible, of course, to write a set of hard and fast rules to govern an undertaking of this kind. There are so many intangibles, so many variables, that personal discussion, conference and comparing of viewpoints is necessary if results are to be obtained swiftly and without confusion."

A case in which no O.W.I. suggestion was involved is that of a well known stage play which was not considered appropriate, as to nationalities and races represented by the characters, at this point in world history. He made some suggestions and some changes took place. His office is without formal power to enforce changes of this kind, or any other, but cooperation has been uniform, not to say unanimous.

Administrator Poynter is in Washington this week "on a routine trip—I'm supposed to make one every month—to catch up with developments. In a time when affairs are moving so swiftly it is hardly practicable to keep abreast by mail."

The Motion Picture Society for the Americas is described in official language as "a non-profit organization acting in a liaison capacity between the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs and the motion picture industry." A recent official statement says:

"The activities of the Society, according to stiplations by the Co-ordinator, are being greatly expanded. Heretofore its major function has been to correlate commercial motion picture activities with the program of the Co-ordinator's office; now, however, the Society is to supervise the production of

U. S. WAR REVIEW BOARD COMPLETED

Membership of the Los Angeles Film Board of Review was completed Monday by the Office of Censorship, Washington, with the appointment of Tom J. Geraghty, Hollywood motion picture writer.

With Watterson R. Rothacker, former Los Angeles vice president of the Quigley Publishing Company, who is chairman, and Major Ralph W. Liddle, executive office, Mr. Geraghty will pass on all Hollywood motion picture product designed for export to countries other than Canada. A similar board in New York, consisting of Richard R. Smith, publisher; Perry Arnold, former newspaper man, and Captain George Ernest, passes on newsreels and other films leaving or entering the country through that port.

U. S. Agencies Keep Watch on Production

a series of short subjects directly for the Co-ordinator. . . . An important phase of the Society's activities is the correlation, reviewing and dissemination of information and ideas dealing with motion picture activities affecting the Latin-American Republics. This also includes reviewing books, scenarios and plays suggested for use in connection with activities in the other Americas. . . . The Society will continue to cooperate with producers in the production of motion pictures relating to national defense and morale, the war effort of the United States and Inter-American relationships and activities."

Under that broad warrant the Society for the Americas carries on a collaboration with Hollywood producers in their production of entertainment films which parallels that carried on with them by the Office of War Information under resident Administrator Poynter, plus the financing of direct production of shorts, with features recently announced as to be included, from funds and material supplied by the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Titular president of the Society is Walter Wanger, vice-president E. J. Mannix, treasurer P. R. Guth and secretary Helen Jones.

Y. Frank Freeman is chairman of a board of directors which lists Bert Allenberg, Edward Arnold, Fred Beetson, Samuel J. Briskin, George W. Cohen, Sheridan Gibney, Samuel Goldwyn, Louis B. Mayer, George Schaefer, David O. Selznick, Harry M. Warner, Clifford Work and Darryl F. Zanuck.

These names betoken industry-wide acceptance of the Society.

David Hopkins Heads Unit with Three Aides

Actual director of the Society's operations in Hollywood is David Hopkins, son of Harry Hopkins, delegated to this undertaking by the Office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs. Mr. Hopkins came to his Hollywood post at the turn of the year after serving the Co-ordinator some four months in New York. Prior to that he had been associated with the Buchanan advertising agency. He serves the Co-ordinator in Hollywood on matters of radio as well as the motion picture.

Mr. Hopkins operates with a staff of three assistants. He and they make themselves available for conference and consultation. They inspect scripts and supply ideas and materials which are considered appropriate from the Inter-American viewpoint.

Like the O.W.I., the Society does not limit its ministrations to pictures which they initiate, inspire, finance or officially control, but include in their orbit of awareness all that goes on in front of all the cameras.

Mr. Hopkins does not attempt, however, to maintain a constant inspection, personality or by staff, of all the production being filmed. He relies in large degree upon the cooperation of the censorship contacts, as they are termed, of the several studios.

These are: Luigi Luraschi, Paramount; Robert Vogel, MGM; William Gordon, RKO-Radio; Carl Schaefer, Warners; Harold Sugarman, Universal; Eli Levy, Columbia; Jack Cutting, Disney; Walter Goetz, Republic; Jason Joy, Twentieth Century-Fox, and George Glass, United Artists.

"They're all experienced experts in such matters," says Mr. Hopkins, "and when they see something in script or coming up for production that they think may present a problem, from our point of view, they get in touch with us and we sit down and talk it over. No set rules can govern these things. Not all of the things that concern us are necessarily things which mention any of the American republics or their nationals. A number of things can come up, in just an ordinary comedy, for instance, which can be overdramatized or emphasized in a way to suggest to the people of other nations that they are typical of the American way of life.

Cites Examples of Erroneous Concepts

"Sometimes a subject or incident which has potentially destructive connotation can be handled safely by one studio or director but not by another. Many incidents (he named some) which we in America know to be extraordinary in the country's routine must be omitted or played down lest they be regarded as of general occurrence (he named some more). The censorship contacts of the studios know about these and watch out for them, calling us in when necessary to get our reaction."

Some cases of cooperation carried to the *n*th power before solution of Inter-American problems was achieved are in general knowledge. There was a great American box office success that had to have things done to it before it went outside the boundaries of the country. There was a minor musical that had to be scrapped and remade from scratch, and one studio is still at work on a repair job required by another. The Society for the Americas possesses no formal power to compel such remodellings, but the corrections were made, nevertheless, all of them.

There have been, up to now, no conflicts between the Office of War Information, supplying ideas for the stream of entertainment production and checking on the ideas supplied by other sources, and the Society for the Americas, doing likewise, although the functions of the two converge at several points.

Just what would happen if, for instance, Nelson Poynter furnished to a studio an idea which eventuated in production of a picture which David Hopkins didn't consider suitable to the purposes of his organization, is among the potentialities producers are confronted with at this point in the war.

WAR FILMS SELL BONDS IN THEATRES

Hollywood features depicting Nazi aggression or other films based on war themes inspire patrons to buy more War Bonds and Stamps in motion picture theatres, it was reported this week by Loew's theatre managers who have been showing "Saboteur," "Nazi Agent" and other pictures of this kind.

Goetz Signs New 10 Year 20th-Fox Pact

William Goetz has signed a new 10 year contract for the post of vice-president in charge of studio operations for 20th Century-Fox, Spyros Skouras, president, announced in Hollywood this week shortly after his arrival from New York.

Mr. Goetz also will continue as a member of the board of directors of the company. His new contract will run concurrently with that of Darryl F. Zanuk, vice-president in charge of production, Mr. Skouras pointed out. The two have been closely associated since the formation of 20th Century Pictures Corporation, which was subsequently merged with Fox Film Corporation to form the present company. Mr. Zanuck and Mr. Goetz, with Joseph M. Schenck, organized 20th Century in 1933.

Mr. Goetz has completed 10 years' service with the company. He is a veteran in the business, having served in various production and executive capacities for the last 17 years.

Mr. Skouras and Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution, are on their first joint visit to the studio. The new season's program will be discussed in the studio conferences.

Suit Filed Over Stanley Profits

Maurice Maurar, Markmo Amusement Corp., operator of the Stanley Theatre in New York, and Artkino, Inc., were named defendants this week in a suit brought in the New York supreme court by Benjamin Levine, erstwhile manager of the Stanley. Mr. Levine seeks a judicial ruling that he is an equal partner with Mr. Maurar as owner of the Stanley, and an accounting of all profits.

The plaintiff claims that he reached an oral agreement with Mr. Maurar which resulted in the partnership. The contention is made by the plaintiff that he discovered the availability of Soviet films and that as a result of his efforts the Stanley switched from playing subsequent run American films to a straight run of Russian pictures. Artkino is nominally a defendant because of its distribution arrangements with the house. Mr. Maurar denies having had any business relationship with the plaintiff other than that of employer and employee.

Ask More for Jewish Appeal

Increased effort was asked of those in the industry for the United Jewish Appeal at a luncheon in New York City Tuesday. The emphasis was placed because contributions this year are under last year's. David Bernstein, Loew's, who presided, asked volunteers for a final effort. He added that individuals from the film industry this year had increased their gifts, but that other sectors of the amusement business had failed. Among those present were Arthur Israel, Jr., Max Seligman, Samuel Rinzler, Dan Michalove, Edward Rugoff, William Klein, Leopold Friedman.

Sobottka with Hamrick

Herbert Sobottka, former manager of the Fifth Avenue, Paramount and Orpheum theatres, Seattle, and more recently manager of the Paramount theatre in Portland, has returned to Hamrick-Evergreen circuit's executive offices there. It is understood that he will soon assume the position of city manager for the circuit, directing the operation of the Paramount, Orpheum, Fifth Avenue, Music Hall, Music Box and Blue Mouse theatres.

Distributors to Force End of Star Symbols

Use of newspaper critics' symbols — and especially, use of the "star" system—will disappear from cooperative advertising and special pre-release displays, it is hoped by distributors, following adoption of a plan last week in New York, to implement the formerly voluntary agreement.

In all future contracts for early run engagements where extra money is contributed by the distributor to build the picture, the use of star ratings will be barred and the home office advertising departments given closer supervision of all local newspaper advertising and theatre display. Distributors have always had this right in effect. But they have agreed, through the Eastern Public Relations Committee, to maintain more active supervision over such campaigns.

That supervision was not included in the United Artists contract with the Globe theatre, New York City, which played that company's Charles Chaplin release, "The Gold Rush," and displayed in newspapers and theatre advertising the four stars given the picture by the New York Daily News. That quotation produced similar reactions from other theatres; and the voluntary agreement was shattered.

The committee comprises advertising and publicity chiefs of the major companies.

The group, last week, also voted not to encourage radio dramatizations of films, recognizing the exhibitor contention that such dramatizations, if given during and prior to, a picture's release, hurt attendance at theatres. Committee members agreed to attempt to discourage the radio portrayals for a period of at least 60 days after general release.

Glendon Allvine, executive secretary, reported that acceptances to the committee's invitation to field leaders to serve as regional contacts were continuing. Latest additions include Allan Sparrow, Loew's, Richmond, Va., and Russel A. Dovim, the Ohio theatre, Columbus. On Monday Mr. Allvine will meet with Washington theatre and exchange leaders to form a Capital committee to represent both the eastern and western publicity group.

Field representatives now number 29.

The industry's International Film Relations Committee, meeting also in New York, and on Monday, and comprising the foreign publicity managers of the distributors, explored new avenues of cooperation with the Office of War Information, and the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, it was said that day.

Representing the OWI at the meeting was Samuel Boals.

A new radio project was dnscussed. Named to a subcommittee to work out its details were Michael Hoffay, RKO; Fortunat Baronat, Universal; John Agell, Columbia. They will cooperate with William A. Hillpot, of the Inter-American Affairs Committee.

David Blum, MGM, was designated July editor of the committee's feature service. The editorship rotates monthly.

Army Open-Air House

Construction of an open-air theatre for soldiers of the 38th "Cyclone" Division at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, without pictures since their removal to the new area last April. has been announced, with work starting last week, with a larger and permanent theatre due to start late in the summer, Colonel G. M. Halloran, camp commander, reported. Area Engineer Major Herman Orr will be in charge of construction of both theatres. The open-air theatre will seat 2,050, and will be surrounded by a high fence. No plans have been made known for the permanent house.

'STARS OF TOMORROW' IN 72 ASSIGNMENTS FOR YEAR

Winners Advanced to Top Roles; Five of Top Male Stars in Armed Services

The ten "Stars of Tomorrow," chosen last Autumn by the exhibitors of the nation in a Motion Picture Herald poll, have been assigned to some 72 roles during the production year just closing, or an average of seven each.

The 15 runners-up have been given a total of 78 roles.

Forty-five of their assignments have been or are being completed by the ten; 54 by the runners-up.

Emphasizing the current shortage of name talent is the fact that five of the 12 men who placed in the first 25 Stars of Tomorrow listing of the HERALD poll have either been called by or volunteered for the Army, the Navy or the Merchant Marine.

Lost for the duration are Ronald Reagan, Number Five, and Jeffrey Lynn, Number Seven, in the top ten; and Louis Hayward, Stirling Hayden and William Holden. Mr. Reagan and Mr. Lynn have already joined the Army; Mr. Hayden is in the Merchant Marine. Mr. Hayward is going into the Navy, and Mr. Holden soon enters the Army.

Hayworth Top Star For Columbia

Rita Hayworth, Number One Star of Tomorrow, has come a long way since the exhibitors chose her to lead the parade. She appeared in "My Gal Sal," now setting box office records, worked in another 20th Century-Fox picture, "Tales of Manhattan," release date of which is not yet set, and is currently working opposite Fred Astaire in Columbia's "You Were Never Lovelier," which was also called "The Gay Senorita." She will be starred in four high budget Columbia pictures for the new season, according to the company's recent product announcement, one of them a musical with Fred Astaire.

Laraine Day, Number Two, was seen in "Unholy Partners," "A Yank on the Burma Road," "Fingers at the Window," and is now working in MGM's "Journey For Margaret," opposite Robert Young. Set for her is "Girl on the Hill" thus far.

Ruth Hussey appeared in "H. M. Pulham, Esq., "Married Bachelor," and "Pierre of the Plains," all MGM, during the current season. She's at present working in "The Man on America's Conscience," with Van Heflin and Lionel Barrymore. Her next assignment will be "Gentleman from West Indies," opposite Robert Taylor.

Top male in the list of the ten Stars of Tomorrow is Robert Preston. He's also a busy actor. Assigned to roles in 11 pictures, he made eight of them during this season. He finished "Parachute Battalion," for RKO, and, for Paramount, "New York Town," "The Night of Jan. 16th," "Reap the Wild Wind," "Pacific Blackout," "This Gun for Hire," "Wake Island," and "Lady Bodyguard." He's set for "Priorities of 1942," "Listening Post," and "Sky Over China."

Ronald Reagan, next in order of the exhibitor vote, finished "Nine Lives Are Not Enough," "Kings Row," "International Squadron," "Juke Girl," and "Desperate Journey," in the latter playing second lead to Errol Flynn. He had been announced for "Background to Danger," "50,000 Fliers," "Iron Cavalry," "Tugboat Annie in Drydock," "Kickoff," "Peter Biddle, Air Warden," "Pittsburgh Pilot," "Washington Broadcast," and a saga of Buffalo Bill, all at Warners.

Six top assignments came to John Payne during the season. He appeared in "Weekend in Havana," "Remember the Day," "Song of the Islands," "To the Shores of Tripoli," "Sun Valley Serenade," and "Iceland." He is set for "White Collar Girl," "Crash Dive," and "Strictly Dynamite."

Completing his roles in "Law of the Tropics" and "The Black Widow," Jeffrey Lynn joined the Army.

Ann Rutherford, Number Seven in the exhibitors' choices, appeared in "Badlands of Dakota," Universal; "This Time for Keeps," the Hardy pictures, at MGM; "Orchestra Wives," 20th Century-Fox, and now is working in "Whistling in Dixie," opposite Red Skelton. Twentieth Century-Fox obtained her contract from MGM, then loaned her for the "Dixie" film. She has been named for "Coney Island," 20th Century-Fox; and "Tulip Time," "Now We Are 21," and "Six Girls in Uniform, at MGM.

Four roles were completed and one is being worked in by Dennis Morgan, Warner star. He finished "Captains of the Clouds," "In This Our Life," "Wings for the Eagle," and "The Hard Way," and is currently shooting in "The Desert Song," wherein for the first time on the screen he'll have a real chance to sing. Set for him at the Burbank lot are "Iceland Patrol," "Robinson Crusoe," "Aloha Means Goodbye."

Jackie Cooper, Number Ten selection, made "Glamour Boy" for Paramount, "Syncopation" and "Growing Pains" for RKO, and is currently working with Pat O'Brien and George Murphy in "The Navy Comes Through."

Busiest of all the runners-up was Gene Tierney, 20th Century-Fox starlet. She was loaned this season to Walter Wanger for "Sundown," to Arnold Pressburger for "The Shanghai Gesture." On her home lot she made "Belle Starr," "Son of Fury," "Rings on Her Fingers," "Thunderbirds," and is working in "China Girl." Set for her are "Hello, Frisco, Hello," and "The Bird of Paradise."

Bonita Granville made six pictures to Miss Tierney's seven thus far in the season. They are "Syncopation" and "Growing Pains," for RKO; "Down in San Diego," "H. M. Pulham, Esq., for MGM; "The Glass Key" for Paramount, and "Now, Voyager," for W. B.

Jon Hall made five screen appearances. They were in "Tuttles of Tahiti," RKO; "Aloma of the South Seas," Paramount; "Eagle Squadron" and "The Invisible Spy," Universal, and now in "Arabian Nights," Universal. He is set for "Cobra Woman," Universal.

Louis Hayward, Number Eleven in the balloting, made only one picture this year: "Ladies in Retirement" for Columbia. He was set, before he entered the Navy, for "Brighton Rock," Lester Cowan production for Columbia, and for one Edward Small production.

Stirling Hayden's only picture this season was "Bahama Passage" and immediately following that he obtained a leave of absence from his Paramount contract and entered the Merchant Marine.

William Holden had been set for Columbia's "The Things They Do in Rio" and Paramount's "Out of the Frying Pan" and "Absent Without Leave" before the Army called. He finished roles in Paramount's "The Remarkable Andrew," "The Fleet's In" and Columbia's "Texas" and "Meet the Stewarts."

Comedian Eddie Bracken had roles in "Sweater Girl," "The Fleet's In," and "Happy-Go-Lucky," all Paramount, and has a busy schedule coming up with "Hairbreadth Harrington," "Out of the Frying Pan," "Thumbs Up," "Let's Face It" (with Bob Hope), "Very Hot in Haiti," and the Paramount all-star "Star Spangled Rhythm."

Kathryn Grayson in Two for MGM

Being groomed at MGM is Kathryn Grayson, 15th in the voting. She had the romantic lead in "Rio Rita," and played in "The Vanishing Virginian." Her next role probably will be opposite Nelson Eddy in "Lucky Number" and then she goes into "American Symphony."

Another MGM protege is John Carroll, singer who had the lead opposite Miss Grayson in "Rio Rita." He also appeared in "Lady Be Good," and "Pierre of the Plains" for MGM and was loaned to Republic for "The Flying Tigers."

Nancy Kelly is set at 20th Century-Fox for "Highway to Hell." Previously she appeared on loanouts in Edward Small's "Friendly Enemies," Paramount's "Fly By Night," and RKO's "Parachute Battalion." The only picture she made this season on her home lot was "To the Shores of Tripoli."

Geraldine Fitzgerald is currently working in "Watch on the Rhine," Warner vehicle for Bette Davis. She is also set for "Captain Horatio Hornblower," opposite Errol Flynn, and "One Hour of Glory."

Gloria Jean's career at Universal has taken on new impetus with the studio using the young singing actress in a series of musicals. She is currently working in "Get Hep to Love," having finished the first musical "What's Cookin'?" She appeared with W. C. Fields in "Never Give a Sucker an Even Break" earlier in the season.

Loaned to Warners for two pictures, one of which was "Kings Row," Betty Field has just finished "Great Without Glory," at Paramount. She also appeared in Warners' "Blues in the Night" and soon will be seen in Paramount's "Are Husbands Necessary?", new title for "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat."

Ellen Drew's roles were in "The Remarkable Andrew," "Silver Queen," "The Night of Jan. 16th," "Lady Bodyguard," Paramount, and "My Favorite Spy," RKO. She is set for "Listening Post," and "Prison Widows," Par.

MAYER ASKS FOR NEW FACES

Louis B. Mayer at a special session of executive producers, directors and top writers at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Tuesday pleaded with them to give greater consideration to new faces and new talent in formulating production plans. He emphasized studio need for developing new talent and exploiting younger players in bringing them to public attention by more important roles.

AAA APPEAL BOARD ADMITS 'INADVERTENT ERROR'

Amends Previous Ruling in Buffalo Case; No New Complaints Filed

Although no new arbitration cases were filed during the week an appeal award and three decisions by local arbitrators disposed of four important cases in Buffalo, New York, New Haven and Indianapolis.

The Appeal Board corrected an earlier decision, for the first time, on Thursday when it filed an amended award in the clearance complaint of the Dipson Theatre Corporation for its Bailey theatre, Buffalo. Admitting "inadvertent error" in its 24th award, dated May 4th, the board modified a provision setting availability for the Bailey "at not later than 37 days after first run downtown."

The three judges conceded that in the light of play date schedules and booking and preferred time arrangements called to their attention subsequent to the award by the five distributors and the Buffalo Theatres, Inc. operator of the Kensington theatre, the provision was unfair.

They agreed with the contention that "it was an inadvertent error to hold that the Kensington has delayed unreasonably in playing its pictures." This, the board found was supported by play date schedules which were not available to the arbitrator or the board on the original record.

Citing records showing that the Kensington played most pictures before, or on, its 30-day availability after first run the board found that the delayed bookings were relatively few, and unavoidable.

"After giving consideration to the ordinary problems of booking and the difficulties which sometimes arise when two or more pictures required to be played on preferred playing time become available at or about the same date we have come to the conclusion that the Kensington has not unreasonably delayed the playing of its pictures" they wrote.

"So long as the Kensington continues to play its pictures as promptly as it has heretofore been playing them the Bailey, with an availability of one day after the Kensington will not be unreasonably delayed in playing pictures which are first shown at the Kensington," the appeal judges decided.

New York

New York's first specific run complaint was dismissed on Thursday when Robert R. Bruce, arbitrator disallowed the demand against all five distributors by Jack Fields for Section X relief for his subsequent run Cameo theatre in Jersey City. Mr. Fields received a partial relief in the clearance portion of his complaint however.

The action by the Rosyl Amusement Company charged that the distributors discriminated against the Cameo in favor of the Skouras circuit in the sale of second run. Mr. Bruce dismissed this claim as unproven. He also found the seven day clearance of the Skouras over the Fulton to be reasonable.

The seven day clearances of the Apollo and Orient theatres, which play between the Fulton and Cameo were cut to one and three days on Paramount, RKO and Warner pictures. Loew's was directed to adjust its 21 day availability agreement with the Cameo after the Fulton so that excesses in favor of the Fulton, Apollo, or Orient over the Cameo should conform with the maximum set for the other distributors.

Twentieth Century-Fox was dismissed from the case under Section XV of the decree, the arbitrator finding that it was exempted by virtue of a franchise affiliation with the Skouras house antedating June 6, 1940. This is the first time that Section XV has been invoked in an award. Costs were assessed equally among all parties.

New Haven

A New Haven arbitrator, Leonard S. Horner, in the city's sixth case, this week granted a partial reduction to the Grand theatre, operated by J. Lewis Cannon, Jr., and admonished exhibitors and distributors to work together in greater harmony for the good of the industry. He also set a maximum availability precedent.

He cut the 14 day clearance of the Dreamland theatre over the Grand to seven days but found the 14 days held by the Pequot theatre to be reasonable.

The arbitrator found that booking delays by Pequot and Dreamland held back Grand pictures for as much as 160 to 180 days. He directed that the Grand have availability not later than 49 days after the first of either of the houses and not later than 79 days after first run. Loew's and Warners were involved.

He dismissed the action as to RKO and 20th Century-Fox on the grounds that no contracts are current between them and the Grand. Costs were assessed one third against complainant and MGM and Warners.

Indianapolis

The second Indianapolis complaint, clearance action of William Rosenthal for the Irving theatre, was dismissed by Albert Stump, arbitrator on Friday. He found that no arbitrable issue had been presented under Section VIII. Mr. Rosenthal had charged that the 42 day margin granted the Rivoli theatre by Loew's was unreasonable. One half the costs were charged against the complainant and the balance divided between the Rivoli and Emerson theatres, intervenors.

The Rivoli has a complaint pending asking an increase in its clearance over the Irving and the Emerson also is seeking a reduction of its margin behind the Irving. Neither case has been decided.

Boston

An appeal was filed at Boston on Monday in the sixth case, clearance action of Frank M. Deane operating the Colonial Theatre, Manchester Depot, Vt. An intervenor, Rutland Enterprises, Inc., operator of the Grand theatre, Rutland, appealed the award of Frederick W. Bliss which granted Mr. Deane 14 day availability after Rutland.

Philadelphia

Harpur M. Tobin has been appointed arbitrator of the 19th Philadelphia complaint, clearance action by Joseph Engle for the Plains theatre, Plains, Pa.

"AID EXHIBITORS," ARBITRATOR SAYS

Distributors should "take steps to assist by their knowledge and technical experience their clients to a greater extent than exists today," Leonard S. Horner, New Haven arbitrator declared this week in his award of a clearance cut to the Grand theatre. "Theatres could be materially helped by such expert advice and assistance on methods and policies to be adopted in order to insure better relations from the standpoint of the public," he wrote.

He also urged the theatres in the case to take steps to insure "a friendly and helpful competition" in order to make all houses in the area more profitable individually and to distributors. This they can do, he said, "either directly or through the available exhibitor organization."

Mr. Horner said he was "impressed with the value of arbitration" in the New Haven case and hoped that "it will become more widely recognized and adopted," both in the film industry under the consent decree and in other fields.

Warner Checking Service Progresses

With the appointment of over 1,100 checkers throughout the country, Warners' recently reinstated film checking service now blankets all territories and is in a position to cover any engagements that the sales department wants checked, according to Rudy Hagen, who has charge of the checking organization.

Mr. Hagen returned to New York recently from a trip to Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Indianapolis and Cincinnati. Additional appointments of checkers in the field are still being made by Mr. Hagen.

Runyon to 20th-Fox

An agreement has been concluded whereby Damon Runyon will become a producer for Twentieth Century-Fox. His first film is expected to be a service picture, which he will write. The deal is for two years.

Mexican Color Film Started

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Production has started on the first of the two feature pictures to be made in color in Mexico. The film is "Asi se Quiere a Jalisco" ("They Do Love Jalisco"). It is being produced by Fernando de Fuentes. The initial scenes are being filmed at Cuernavaca, 45 miles from Mexico City and a popular American tourist resort.

The second feature in color, "Que Lindo es Michoacan" ("Michoacan the Beautiful"), is to be started in early autumn by the Rodriquez Bros. The delay in starting the picture is caused by the full schedule of local studios. The rush of production has prompted CLASA, largest studio here, to start the construction of two more stages.

Mexican motion picture men have become war-minded in a practical sense. Gabriel Figueroa, for instance, a leading cameraman, has been commissioned a captain in the militia of the industry. The National Cinematographic Workers Union is training the militia which will soon be inducted into the Federal service, for duties in fighting units for which they are best qualified.

It is understood, however, that this induction will be such that it will permit the motion picture people to continue to carry on for the industry as the Government again has emphasized that it is convinced that motion pictures are a highly important factor in maintaining the morale of the servicemen and the general public.

Alfonso Sanchez Tello, one of the leading Mexican producers—he has several successes to his credit—is the first producer to volunteer for military service. Action on his application is expected soon.

Rendition of the National Hymn at the start and conclusion and at intermissions in all theatres in Mexico, a voluntary gesture of the exhibitors, that has been accorded official praise, now has the whole-hearted support of the public.

New Competition Hits San Francisco Houses

San Francisco theatres are facing renewed downtown competition from recreation centers and amusement arcades, opened in the downtown district principally to attract patronage of soldiers and sailors.

Sam Gordon, beach concessionaire, has put $20,000 into a large arcade in the building formerly occupied by the Bank of America, announcing that he must gross $1,000 weekly to break even. In the Mission district a $350,000 sports center has opened, boasting 38 bowling alleys, eight badminton courts, table tennis courts and a bar. Dick Templeton, former Stanford track coach, is the sports manager. A month ago a $350,000 Downtown Bowl, with 40 bowling alleys, was opened.

Warner District Managers Meet in New York

Tuesday and Wednesday, district managers of Warners met at the New York home office, with Ben Kalmenson, sales manager, presiding, and Joseph Bernhard, general manager and vice-president, the chief speaker. Another speaker was Mort Blumenstock, Eastern advertising chief. Among the managers were Wolfe Cohen, Toronto; Henry Herbel, Los Angeles; Ralph McCoy, Atlanta; Robert Smeltzer, Washington; Harry Seed, Pittsburgh.

CIO Union Wins NSS Clerical Workers

Clerical workers of National Screen Service, New York, Tuesday voted 129 to 28 for the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, as their bargaining agent. The election was under the National Labor Relations Board. The Guild said immediately afterward, that it would press for negotiations promptly. It has petitioned for a vote among the clerical workers at the Paramount home office; and next Tuesday, there will be a board hearing on its petition for elections at the MGM New York exchange.

The Guild now represents "white collar workers" at the Columbia, Loew's, Twentieth-Century Fox, and RKO home offices.

Swiss Product Increased

Domestic production in the Swiss motion picture industry increased substantially in 1941, according to the annual report of that country's Federal Department of the Interior and announced by the United States Department of Commerce. A contributing factor to the development was the opening of two new film studios in Zurich, making a total of four studios now in operation in Switzerland.

Approximately 20 feature films had been completed or were nearing completion by the end of 1941. In addition, documentary films, produced under the management of the Film Chamber, were being made at the rate of approximately 200 meters a week.

Film imports, especially of feature pictures, increased during the year, but exports were adversely affected by world conditions.

Warners To Film "Army"

"This Is the Army," Irving Berlin's all-soldier stage revue, now on Broadway, was acquired by Warner Bros. over the weekend and will go into production at the Burbank studios immediately following the Broadway engagement and a brief tour. On conclusion of the road dates, Mr. Berlin will go to the coast to prepare for the filming of the picture, which he will supervise.

Theatres Damaged by Fire

Damage estimated at $150,000 was caused at Warners' Capitol in New Britain, Conn., last week by fire of unknown origin.

Damage to the Harris Grand theatre in Bloomington, Ind., from fire last week was estimated at $75,000. More than 200 patrons were in the house at the time and left in orderly manner.

E. A. McFarlane, for 14 years associated with the exhibition field in the Gulf area, has assumed management of the Royal at Gulfport, Louisiana, succeeding W. L. Ozburn, who has accepted a position at the Naval Advance Base Depot in that area. Mr. McFarlane formerly managed Royal houses at Jackson, Greenwood and Meridian, Mississippi.

Bureau of Mines' Films Ready

The Bureau of Mines of the United States Department of the Interior has completed production on five new 16mm instructional "sound" films. The films have been made primarily for use of the War and Navy Departments and Defense training centers throughout the nation.

The films are "The Story of a Spark Plug," which tells a comprehensive story of the manufacture, operation and care of the spark plug, running time, 35 minutes; "Nickel High-Lights," which describes the production and preparation in Canada and the United States of nickel and its alloys, running time, 34 minutes; "Lubrication," revealing in pictures, diagrams, animated drawings and by voice the need for lubrication and methods of lubricating the great variety of machines which make the materials and supplies of war, running time, 30 minutes, and "Heat and Its Control" and "The Story of Rock Wool Insulation," which tells the story of heat insulation as a means of conserving the nation's fuel supply.

Copies of the films, in 16mm sound, are available for exhibition by schools, churches, civic and business organizations. Members of the mineral and allied industries made available a sum in excess of $200,000 since last January 1st to enable the Bureau to produce the films.

The Bureau of Mines is at present supervising a number of additional film subjects that are being made expressly for training purposes in connection with the country's defense program.

Paramount Staff in Des Moines Shifted

A number of changes have taken place in the Paramount exchange in Des Moines following the leaving of Ralph Hayden, chief accountant, and Charles Elder, assistant booker, to the Army and Navy, respectively.

Julia Brooks, cashier and bookkeeper, succeeds Mr. Hayden; Beverly Mahon replaces Mr. Elder; Lois Ewing takes over Mrs. Brooks' post and Ruth Slater becomes second booker.

The houses involved are at Mountain View, Campbell, Sunnyvale and Los Gatos. A site for a theatre has been purchased in Los Altos, but no attempt to obtain priority on materials for the project will be made.

Officials of the circuit are Bruno Vecchiarelli, J. Leslie Jacobs and W. B. David.

The tour is being arranged at the request of and through the cooperation of the Mexican Government. TRUCKERS, EXHIBITORS CUT FILM DELIVERIES 25%

Carriers, Distributors Face Problem of Rearranging Booking Schedules

The delivery of film to theatres was first this week among exhibition's wartime problems as exchanges, carriers and theatremen in all exchange territories sought to cut delivery mileage by at least 25 per cent.

The Office of Defense Transportation has instructed all common carriers of film, and other delivery services using trucks, tires and gasoline, to pare at least 25 per cent from their weekly itineraries, effective July 1st. All special delivery trips, repeat calls and Sunday and holiday pickups and deliveries are slated to go.

Many readjustments by exchanges, carriers and theatremen appeared necessary in virtually every area. In some exchanges, particularly those with long hauls or close play dates, a drastic rearrangement of booking practices and print assignment appeared likely to result.

Following a meeting at New York last week of home office distribution officials and National Film Carrier Association representatives the problem reverted to the 31 exchange cities. There committees were discussing ways to save tire mileage, gasoline and unnecessary trips. The discussions appeared to be proceeding in harmony. Several areas reported mileage savings well in excess of ODT minimums.

At New York, exchangemen and carriers met on Tuesday at the Film Board of Trade to work out mileage savings. On the committee were: Ralph Pielow, chairman; David A. Levy, Myron Sattler and Edward Mullin, for branch managers; Nat Goldberg and Herman Silverman, office managers; Archie Berish, Jennie Dennett, Etta Segall, George Blenderman, Edward Richter, Jack Perley and Sam Feinblum, bookers; and Louis Johnson, John Weinberg and David Newman, shippers.

Sunday night and Monday morning deliveries will be cut sharply at once and efforts will be made over a ten-day trial period to eliminate them completely in the New York area, the Tuesday meeting decided. An earlier morning start by trucks from the exchanges and an agreement to operate at reduced speeds was also pledged by the carriers. Efforts are underway to eliminate duplicate routes.

The committee will meet again July 17th to report on the trial changes, and study further mileage cuts.

Deliveries Cut In Chicago

New delivery schedules for the Chicago area were set up at a meeting last week between representatives of the film exchanges and Christ Otto, secretary of the Chicago Film Carriers' Union. Mileage will be cut by eliminating one complete round trip each week over all routes.

Effective July 13th city theatres will be serviced with only one delivery a day. Closer cooperation on last minute bookings and C.O.D. deliveries is being urged by both the exchanges and the carriers. On deliveries to Peoria, Danville and Springfield territories the Sunday trip will be eliminated as will service to Sterling, Rockford and points as far West as the Mississippi River.

A temporary committee consisting of William Hamm, chief booker of the Paramount exchange; J. H. Imhoff, MGM office manager; George Busch, business agent of the Chicago Film Exchange Employes Union, and head shipper for RKO, and Christ Otto, of the Film Carriers' Union, has been established to iron out problems.

A committee of St. Louis truckers was appointed to prepare a plan to cover at least three essential points at a meeting on June 29th. Film exchange managers, bookers, heads of shipping rooms of exchanges and representatives of a dozen film delivery companies in the St. Louis area met at the Fox Theatre Screening Room.

The truckers' plan is to incorporate: 1. A method of cooperation between truck lines serving the same or adjacent territory to avoid duplication of service. Under this plan one line may pick up film for another and in turn get similar help elsewhere in the territory;

2. Exchanges are to arrange play dates and shipments so that the truck may attain the maximum of efficiency on each trip. Special trips and call backs would be eliminated.

3. In St. Louis and St. Louis County trucks would make but a single trip daily. Exhibitors will be asked to eliminate all special service calls.

Deferment Asked For Michigan

One of the first requests for relief from the ODT regulations came this week from exhibitors in Michigan. David Newman, attorney for Cooperative Theatres, is reported seeking a postponement in the regulations until August to permit the clearing of present close booking schedules and the establishment of a new print handling system. Currently the area, with double bill problems, is one of the most closely booked in the country.

Under discussion is a proposal by Frank Downey, MGM manager, to split the area into East and West halves, each playing different pictures, then swapping. This would cut the number of prints required. Service on accessories is also being revised and exchanges are seeking to work out a quicker print inspection routine.

Buffalo carrier, theatre and exchangemen, meeting this week for their third transportation curb session, reported that 1,000 miles a week had been shaved from carrier schedules, with approximately 1,500 miles more to be cut in order to meet ODT minimums. Bookers are trying to work out a system of unifying territory change dates so that pictures would be more uniformly available. Varying combinations of split week bookings are said to present the chief difficulty.

Dunphy Asks Salvage Drive

The cooperation of exhibitors and legitimate theatres in salvaging critical materials and conserving all supplies was asked Thursday by Christopher J. Dunphy, Chief of the Amusements Section of WPB's Services Branch, following an appeal by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, for an intensified nationwide salvage campaign.

Mr. Dunphy expressed particular concern over the necessity of salvaging copper, a vital material in all phases of the war program. He urged every theatre manager to scrap all unused pieces of copper, and to save each piece for distribution to salvage centers.

"All carbon butts," he said, "as well as every ounce of the drippings from the carbon, should be accumulated and sent immediately to the nearest local theatre supply company. Managers also should keep an accurate record of carbon drippings, because these furnish a vital contribution to the war."

Mr. Dunphy said that he had made arrangements with supply companies to sell all salvage material to scrap dealers. They will donate the proceeds to the American Red Cross or other welfare agencies.

Mr. Dunphy has succeeded M. D. Moore as government chairman of the Motion Picture and Speaking Stage Industry Advisory Committee.

New price ceilings were established this week by the Office of Price Administration for a wide variety of electrical apparatus. Carbon products, flood lighting equipment, rectifiers and other similar mechanisms were stabilized at the October 1, 1941, level. Radio transmitters, receivers, electronic recording devices, tubes, etc., were set at the March 31, 1942, price. Maximums for photographic equipment were applied under the OPA general maximum price order.

Studio technical experts are continuing research into ways to save film, preparation to the next meeting between the industry and War Production Board at Washington on July 28th.

M. C. Levee, chairman of the Hollywood film conservation committee, expressed confidence at a meeting last week that the studios would be able to meet all raw stock reductions following a report by Ray Klune, who attended the WPB meetings in Washington last week.

Mr. Klune, Lindsley Parson and Ben Goetz were appointed to keep a continuing check on all conservation measures.

A full report on raw stock consumption for the first six months of the year will be ready for the WPB on July 15th. Thereafter the committee will prepare monthly reports. It meets with the WPB again on July 28th.

SAVING 30% IN RAW STOCK

Voluntary savings by the film industry in raw stock consumption have amounted to 30 per cent of previous usage, Harold Hopper, chief of the Motion Picture Section of the War Production Board announced at Washington Tuesday. He had just returned from Hollywood.

A detailed report of the savings will be submitted when the production committee of studio and WPB representatives meet later this month at Washington. Mr. Hopper spoke in praise of the wholehearted cooperation in the conservation effort which he had witnessed in the studios.

The need for saving film is greater than ever, he said, pointing to limitations on chemicals used in its manufacture and the increasing demands for film stock from the Army and Navy.

Record 6 Months Claimed by Fox

More revenue accrued to Twentieth Century-Fox in the first 23 weeks of this year than by any other half year, the company claimed this week. It also drew from the figures the expectation that business for July through September would be "substantially" better than last year's similar period.

Meanwhile, the company announced its August releases, first pictures of the new season. They are "Footlight Serenade," with Betty Grable, John Payne, Victor Mature; "A-Haunting We Will Go," with Laurel and Hardy; "Little Tokyo, U.S.A.," with Lloyd Nolan, Brenda Joyce, Noel Madison; "The Pied Piper," with Monty Woolley, Roddy McDowall, Anne Baxter; "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe," with John Shepperd and Linda Darnell.

The 1941-42 season ends July 31st, with release of 54 features.

While five features are announced for release in August on the new program it was disclosed at the studio that 21 films were in work or being edited. These and those announced for release constitute a full half season's supply, "a new record for production," according to the company.

Major films on the new program are "Orchestra Wives," "Thunder Birds," "The Black Swan," "Iceland," "Girl Trouble."

At the studio this week conferring with Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production, were Spyros Skouras, president; Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution, and Laudy Lawrence, foreign sales head.

UA Executives Confer at Coast

A week of conferences on new season plans was begun in Hollywood Monday by owners and executives of United Artists, among them Edward C. Raftery, president; Gradwell Sears, vice-president in charge of sales; Arthur W. Kelly, chairman of the finance committee; Mary Pickford, producer-partner; Charles Chaplin, producer-partner; David O. Selznick, producer-partner; Sir Alexander Korda, producer, partner; George Bagnall, and Loyd Wright.

Grainger on Three-Week Sales Tour

James R. Grainger, Republic president, is this week visiting the company's exchanges on a three week sales trip which will carry him to Los Angeles and back to New York. His first stop was Dallas. Among other cities he will visit are San Francisco, Denver, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Chicago.

Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales for Producers Releasing Corporation, will hold a series of weekly regional sales meetings, beginning next week and extending over a period of six weeks, covering every exchange in the company.

The first will be held in New York, July 18-19, with subsequent meetings in Chicago, July 25-26; Cleveland, August, 1-2; Atlanta, August 8-9; Dallas, August 15-16, and San Francisco, August 22-23.

Details of the 1942-43 program will be disclosed and sales policy set for the 42 pictures, consisting of six "V-Specials," ten "Pacemakers," eight "Spitfires," and eighteen westerns.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Although the 250-seat Cameo Theatre in Unalaska, adjoining bombed Dutch Harbor on Unalaska Island, is boarded up "for the duration," show business continues in that farthest West U. S. outpost for the armed forces and the civilian workers who are laboring to complete military installations there. This was the word brought to Seattle by John W. Fletcher, mayor of Unalaska, this week, when he returned to the United States with the small civilian population of his little town who were ordered to evacuate after the first Jap raids on Dutch Harbor.

"We were ready to leave ten minutes after the Japs flew over us," Mr. Fletcher said. "We had been prepared for weeks, knowing that they'd come sooner or later, and when they did fly over we gave them everything in the way of anti-aircraft fire that the Navy and Army had up there. That attack was the signal for me to order all civilian business and social life evacuated—I didn't want to keep any of our families there in the danger zone. It meant losses of our homes and businesses, but we hope to go back before too long and start in where we left off."

Mr. Fletcher, beside his mayoralty duties, owned and operated the Cameo theatre, a commercial short wave radio station now taken over by the government, and also had mining and fishing interests in the territory. At present he is located in Seattle with his wife and two children, and reports his plans are "very indefinite."

In spite of war conditions, motion pictures still entertain the armed forces and workmen in Dutch Harbor and Unalaska, Mr. Fletcher reported. The Army has a recreation hall where late films are shown to the men stationed in that locality. Navy men see late pictures aboard ships stationed in the Aleutian waters. And the civilian workers, all employees of the Siems-Drake Construction Company, building fortifications, have their own rudely-constructed theatre.

Newly-released films are among the most important items of cargo carried by the transports that serve the territory, as these films are the only source of entertainment for the hundreds of men stationed in the region.

Mr. Fletcher, a hardy-looking business man of moderate age, spends at least part of his time now speaking before community clubs and groups in Seattle and neighboring regions in behalf of the U. S. war effort. He is emphatic in his report that the Japs didn't catch Dutch Harbor asleep and is proud to say "we gave them all we had."

"There's plenty I can tell you about the wonderful way everyone responded to the attack when it came," Mr. Fletcher said, "and there's plenty more that went on up there, and still continues, that I can't tell you yet. But you can bet we'll all be back there as soon as we can."

The management of the State Theatre, in Nanticoke, Pennsylvania, put on a "Flag Day" trailer and song slide for the rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner," the other day. And not a single individual in the audience responded; not a person arose, not one applauded. Did someone say 'United We Stand'?

Rare, indeed, was the collector introduced last Saturday night by Dave Elman on his CBS "Hobby Lobby" show. Max Herzberg, of the Newark (N. J.) Evening News, collects insults.

Elmer Davis, being Director of War Information and in that post having something to say over motion pictures, Washington Correspondent John O'Donnell's story of Mr. Davis and a recent meeting with Washington newspaper men appears to be in order.

Seems that just to make sure Chief Censor Davis doesn't get the idea that words alone will win the war, brother newspapermen from Indiana tossed this story at him the other night when they made Hoosier holiday in welcoming Mr. Davis back to the capital:

A native of Davis' community back home in Indiana returned to the native heath after years in Washington and joined the group around the cracker barrel. There was much village gossip and finally one of the natives paused in his whittling and asked the visitor:

"By the way, how did that 1940 election ever come out? Did Roosevelt get re-elected?"

Dumfounded for a moment, the visitor finally blurted in astonishment:

"What! You don't know how the 1940 election came out? Don't you get your newspapers here?"

"Sure we get them," said the native, disgustedly. "But those Republicans won't read them to us."

Exhibitors who receive their film print supply via Railway Express will soon see ol' Dobbin pulling up to their doors instead of the motor trucks now in use. Dobbin comes back for the war.

N. P. Ballou, assistant to the president of Railway Express Agency, has been commissioned to go out and 'dig-up' hundreds of horses of all kinds and description.

When World War I broke out, the express system, now operating the largest fleet of motor trucks in the country, other than the Army —owned about 15,000 wagons and 20,000 horses. Today the company has only six wagons and three coaches, all reserved as museum pieces. Other problems present additional troubles. The express company, for instance, has been able to find only three manufacturers in the entire country capable of making horse collars. And in many places there are no facilities for having horses shod. It was recently estimated that only one horse-shoer remains on Manhattan Island.

"It is the duty of us all to help maintain good spirits and morale of our men in the service and especially those who are leaving our shores for indefinite periods," starts an announcement reaching our news desk this week from Otto Schnering, President of the Curtiss Candy Company, Chicago. The business department of the Brockton, (Mass.) Enterprise-Times afternoon newspaper, and Manager Ernest Fitzgerald, of the local Colonial Theatre, were more than a little embarrassed, the other day, when they turned to the Colonial advertisement in the newspaper and read that, instead of five cents, the ad was offering five dollars for every two records brought to the theatre by patrons in a record salvage drive. There's been no formal report on what happened to whom.

That recent fantastic proposal by Ben Serkowich, press agent for the Capitol Theatre on New York's Broadway, to put up a big canvas tent in the streetway to shield display lights for a 'world premiere' lighting display for a new motion picture, pales into insignificance against the plan offered this week by theatre men, concessionaires and other amusement vendors at Coney Island to erect a canvas curtain 18 feet high, running 14 blocks along Coney's front boardwalk to meet the authorities' dimout and blackout requirements for that Atlantic seafront. Like Serkowich's, the plan was rejected flatly.

Better not taunt actor Boris Karloff or actor Erich von Stroheim. 'Inquiring Fotographer' Jimmy Jemail, of the New York Daily News, asked both, the other day, whether playing the part of a murderer influenced their thoughts in any way.

Karloff replied that because he's been playing the part of a monster for so many years, another murder or two doesn't faze him. "But I'm a bit worried about the subconscious mind," he added, warning, "They say it catches up with you."

Von Stroheim flatly declared, "Yes," playing the part of a murderer has influenced him. He reminded Reporter Jemail, for public newsprint consumption, of ex-President Herbert Hoover's wish to have the right to shoot three persons a year without explaining why to anyone. In that, added Von Stroheim, "I concur!"

Seek Ways to Cut Frames

Two expedients under consideration of technologists investigating ways and means of conserving film contemplate expenditures and sacrifices by exhibitors.

Neither of these has been recommended to the Film Conservation Committee, but both are known to have been studied by technicians cooperating with the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

One of these procedures contemplates shortening and narrowing of the aperture plate, together with elimination of the frameline between images, so that a three-sprocket-hole pull-down would replace the present standard. A saving of 25 per cent could be effected in this way, it is figured, without loss of definition or change of proportion. It is reckoned, however, that the mechanical changeover would be costly, both directly and in terms of confusion, and that materials and services required for it would not be available.

The other procedure contemplates retaining the present four-sprocket-hole pull-down but would expose only half of the rectangle at a time, using the top half for exposure on one trip through camera and projector and the other half for a return trip through, reversed. Supplying of a second sound track on the opposite edge of the film, to accommodate the second image, would narrow the image enough so that elimination of the frameline would restore present screen proportion. Screen image would be half present size, however, necessitating installation of new lenses. Saving of 50 per cent would be effected, but 50 per cent loss of definition would be sustained.

Use of this second expedient would be virtually the equivalent of changing over to 16 mm without substitution of equipment.

At this point in the proceedings neither of these expedients is considered to warrant recommendation for adoption.

Committee Restates Rules for Benefits

Sorting, channelling and coordinating of requests for film personalities to participate in patriotic, charitable and similar activities was announced as a principal reason for formation of the Hollywood Victory Committee and has continued one of its major functions.

Cooperation of the talent with the H.V.C. has been of an extent and character to impress even the participants and to warrant editorial comment in many a newspaper, plus expressions of grateful acknowledgment from many a responsible source, since institution of the system.

But by last week it had become necessary for the Public Relations Committee, Western Division, to commission the publicity directors of the member studios to issue instructions that "hereafter no free personal appearance for patriotic or charity purposes of any contract player or other player at a studio are to be arranged except on approval of the Hollywood Victory Committee."

This followed perusal of a report listing occasional appearances of studio players at events not cleared through the H.V.C., and the placing of a ceiling over such unapproved appearances was termed "a matter of protection to players and the industry."

Enthusiasm had got out of hand and some taking of advantage had occurred, but the reason for the original measure, and for this restatement of the principals by the P.R.C., is in fact grounded in goodwill.

Any personality of prominence receives many more invitations to serve than could be accepted and discharged in a lifetime devoted to nothing else. None of them can just say no to any of the groups and organizations inviting them and then say yes to any other. The Hollywood Victory Committee can explain to petitioners and routine the bids in sequence so as to obtain for the various institutions, causes and drives the greatest possible revenue from the services volunteered by the talent.

Hollywood Record On War Support

The statistics speak.

Some 1,360 men have left studio jobs to enlist in the nation's armed forces, according to the Public Relations Committee, and more are leaving at the rate of 12 per day.

Four hundred players participated in 142 gratis appearances of various kinds during June, according to the Hollywood Victory Committee.

Fifteen entertainment units visited Army camps, Navy posts and hospitals during the month, staging 52 two-hour shows, and fourteen additional camp shows of other kinds were given in the local area.

Three hundred feature pictures and as many short subjects have been reduced to 16mm. and supplied to American forces overseas.

Sixty training films completed in cooperation with the Research Council under chairmanship of Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck have been delivered to the War Department.

NYACK - NEW YORK

Dear Sam:

You've been asking me to think up some kind of a breathtaking movie that would make people love their country and give them a stirring idea of what they are fighting for.

Well, Sam, you are wasting my time, because you've already produced just that movie.

When I saw "Pride of the Yankees" I shed a tear and made a prayer that the U.S.A. pictured in your epic would be always thus.

"Pride of the Yankees" is as refreshing as an ice cream cone, as tender as a mandolin in the moonlight and as exciting as any news from the front. The heart, soul and humor of our wondrous and cockeyed country are in your picture. And I won't be surprised if you wind up in a colonel's suit for producing it.

DISTRIBUTED BY RKO-RADIO

in BRITISH STUDIOS

By AUBREY FLANAGAN, in London

U. S. Producers Press Plans

Production difficulties, dealt with in extenso on the opposite page, the limits on personnel, the shortage of materials, and the unavailability of studio space, do not seem to be daunting American producer distributors here. That they are placing serious and insuperable obstacles in the way of their physical production is, of course, obvious. That they are not preventing a valiant effort to fulfil quota requirements, and indeed to sponsor films for a market wider than the merely British market, would seem equally to be the case from a survey of the contemporary scene. That the sum total is much less than could be desired, that most of the films are less ambitious than had been intended is true.

Twentieth Century-Fox last week previewed their most ambitious British film in years, "Young Mr. Pitt." Though made to 20th pattern and order by the Gaumont Gainsborough unit at Shepherds Bush, with Messrs. Ostrer and Black in charge of the production and unit technicians working on it, the film was made as a Twentieth Century production, and will certainly not lower the prestige of 20th-Fox on the world's screens. It has been an expensive picture, somewhat long in the making. The financial limits of the British market are such that it will not necessarily recoup all its cost on this side of the Atlantic. It should, however, reach a wide public in the U.S., and return to the company a worthy material recognition of their enterprise, an enterprise all the more creditable in the face of the extremely difficult wartime conditions in the industry today.

Metro's "Thunder Rock," made for that company's release by John and Roy Boulting, who made the successful "Pastor Hall," has been produced on unrestricted lines, will certainly either rank as treble quota or come into the quality quota category of which many of the American companies here have availed themselves since its inception. Not yet in its finalized form, the film cannot be assessed on its marketability but the odds are that it will be put into Metro's U.S. release programme.

Meanwhile, the trade here awaits screening of "Uncensored," another Shepherd's Bush made production, which 20th Fox will release here as part of their quota commitment.

Warners have recently trade shown and premiered in the West End—at Metro's Empire, concurrently with their own Warner Theatre—"Flying Fortress," an ambitious war drama which has been reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Now Irving Asher is in town, working valiantly against intense wartime odds, to materialize Metro's plans to make a Donat picture "Sabotage Agent," on world market lines. Metro's old love, the Denham Studios, where "Mr. Chipps," "The Citadel" and "Yank at Oxford" were born under the paternal eye of Ben Goetz, being presently in full occupation, Mr. Asher has had to fall back on the less spectacular Gainsborough Studio at Islington.

It is planned that Harold Huth, previously associated with Metro British, will produce, but other details are as yet unsettled, pending a solution of the multifarious problems of personnel, supplies, etcetera, which Asher is currently working out. He will have no easy task. None the less it is the Metro plan to reopen their Denham headquarters next year, if the war situation permits, and go ahead translating frozen credits into marketable product for the world's screens.

This month, too, RKO Radio have gone to work at Denham on a new British film for release here, a Victor Hanbury production, as yet untitled. It is a war subject, with the Secret Service, Gestapo big shots, escaping British airmen, and all the box of the wartime entertainment tricks. Emeric Pressburger wrote the story, and Lance Comfort, who made "Hatters Castle," is directing. Eric Portman stars, but, so far, in the second week of production, a leading lady has not yet been found.

7 Leading Ladies for Two Cities

There may in fact be a shortage of British women players for a week or two, for a corner in leading ladies has been made by Two Cities-Concanen who are presently at work in the Highbury Studios on a film about the A.T.S., the feminine section of the British Army. There are no less than seven leading ladies in "We're Not Weeping" (derived from Kingsley's "For men must work and women must weep") which Derrick de Marney is producing under the aegis of Two Cities' chief, Fillipo Del Giudice.

They are Jean Gates, Jean Gillie, Joan Greenwood, Joyce Howard, Rosamund Johns, Lilli Palmer and Barbara Waring. Presiding directorially over this feminine septette is Adrian Brunel, who reports to date, with no small pride in his voice, ..."There has not been the slightest dispute."

The film is being made with War Office and A.T.S. collaboration. There will be no Paris creations or salon glamour in it. It will be a picture of women in uniform, with sequences actually shot under service conditions in an A.T.S. camp. The pattern will be complete, for each of the girls will play a woman from a different sphere of life, or a personality in relief to her fellows.

All Stages at Denham Busy

Since newspaper reporting of the weather is the subject of a timelag by British censorship, it is not possible at this stage to record the success or failure achieved by the Noel Coward unit which currently has been shooting exteriors at Denham and trying to keep ahead of schedule. . . . At least it can be said that the film is still ahead of schedule, but it must be left to be guessed whether credits are due to the sun or to Noel Coward. Two Cities' Fillipo Del Giudice, impresario par excellence, legal luminary, financial wizard, gastronome and psychologist, unsatiated by his unceasing production of films under the present complex conditions, is still materializing plans for a continued succession of Two Cities films.

With "Unpublished Story" on West End pre-release, "In Which We Serve" in its latter stages, and "We're Not Weeping" launched, Giudice is finalizing arrangements to make, at Denham, one of the most ambitious films of the year, Anatole de Grunwald's "This Demi Paradise." The film will not be a war subject, but will satirically, but dramatically, concern itself with pre-war England, so casual and so honest, disliked abroad and misunderstood at home, which has today translated itself into a citadel of democracy. Anthony Asquish will direct, and the production plans, plus the stars, will place it potentially into world market calibre.

Leslie Howard was elected to the board of Two Cities Monday. In addition to serving as production consultant, he will produce his own films under its banner.

Others Continue Production Plans

Otherwise the British studios—those of them which are available for producing—are reasonably busy. At Denham Marcel Hellman continues on "Secret Mission," with Harold French directing. At Elstree Flanagan and Allen are still romping around under the eye of John Baxter in their British National comedy "We'll Smile Again." Another British National subject, with Leslie Hiscott in charge, "The Lady From Lisbon," occupies the floor at Hammersmith. At Shepherds Bush, Anthony Asquith is nearing the close of "We Dive at Dawn," Gainsborough's submarine drama. The other Gainsborough subject, Arthur Askey's "King Arthur Was a Gentleman," is in the location stage, at army camps and elsewhere in the country.

George King of British Aviation Pictures, and S. W. Smith of British Lion, have renewed a production association of long standing with the announcement that George King has taken the floor at Teddington with "Tomorrow We Live," a saga of French resistance in Nazi-occupied territory. It will be directed by George King as a British Aviation-Lion production.

"Tomorrow We Live," an original, factual story, has been woven into screen form by Anatole de Grunwald, with a shooting script by Katherine Strueby.

John Clements, as Jean Baptiste; Godfrey Tearle as the mayor; and Hugh Sinclair as Von Kleist, head the cast which also includes Greta Gynt, Karel Stepanek, Judy Kelly, Bransby Williams, Pere Mathieu, and Gabriell Brune.

BRITISH INDUSTRY FEARS DECLINE OF PRODUCTION

Survival Doubted Unless 1941-42 Total of Forty-Six Films Is Increased

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the British industry now in the third month of its third, complete war year of Quota production, the mood of the moment, replacing that of gratitude that the situation was no worse, is one of intense and unillumined gloom.

Despite that British pictures were currently grossing higher figures than in the pre-war period, that in totality a greater number of workers are currently employed in the studios than in September, 1939, conditions in general have progressively worsened, and continue to do so. It is agreed that production is now at its rock bottom minimum, that if next year's total drops below the 1941-42 figure of 46 films all told, there can be scant hope of survival for the British production industry.

Manpower, studios and material remain still the three hinges upon which turns the door which leads either to a future or to oblivion. These three, and the continued unwillingness of the Government to devise and materialize an industry policy, to decide what shall be the industry's role in the war machine and to assist its service in that regard, are the problems of the day.

Producers Disagree on Panacea

With only 46 films registered during the past quota year—nine of them not even ranking as renters quota—the situation is statistically dire. None the less the Board of Trade's view, as expressed in the Commons last week by Hugh Dalton, its president, is that there are enough films available to provide the exhibitors supplies. It is true that he agreed that the situation was becoming more difficult, but even this was a half-hearted admission, and coupled with the implied suggestion that exhibitors could still meet their quota commitments out of films made within the last four years.

Exhibitors, however, are not of the same opinion as Mr. Dalton. They are determined that the 2½ per cent cut in their percentages, which will operate from October 1st, is not of necessity going to solve the problem. They are going to investigate the position further and probably will make new approaches to the Board of Trade.

Nor are all the British producers content with the Board of Trade's sublimity. Many of them are bursting into print and protest about the present condition. Recently a conference was held representing independent production interests, mainly the intellectuals among the labor groups, plus such personalities as Anthony Asquith, Michael Redgrave, the Boulting brothers, and others, writers, technicians, etcetera. Its purpose was to stimulate some all-industry action in the direction of persuading the Government to make fuller use of it in the war effort, and thus to give an impetus sorely needed.

Shunned ceremoniously by the Producers Association, many of whose members have, despite the general slump in the industry, done extremely well since the war, the conference was not held in vain. As a result of its deliberations a committee was set up to explore the whole industry position and as far as practicable to bring about some unity and translate the intentions into practical effect. This week the British Film Producers Association have showed some change of heart, have, in fact, agreed to meet the committee and hear what is in their minds.

What is in their minds is, in fact, not so dissimilar from what was in the minds of the Association of Cine Technicians when that body formulated its programme of rationalization and called for a round table to explore the possibility of reforms and greater efficiency. So was it, presumably in the mind of Michael Balcon, British producer, who is known to have favored more serious treatment of the A.C.T. memorandum and who has this week expounded publicly his attitude on rationalization and his conviction that action is urgently needed in the cause of industry survival.

Mr. Balcon takes the view that the business cannot physically stand any further depletion of its effort, and opines that if this last year's production minimum is not maintained the studios must face the prospect of going out of business.

Mr. Balcon, too, pleads that such committees as are at present working on behalf of Government departments, safeguarding such matters as supplies and manpower, should no longer be confined to Government nominees and academic personalities, but should be made more efficient by the presence of those experienced in actual wartime production. What is needed, he says, is an authoritative body which could control all allotments of studio space, manpower and supplies, this and the Government to make up its mind about the industry and take steps to ensure its maintenance.

An allround survey of present national requirements from the industry, in relation to studio space, manpower and supplies is a suggested solution. Mr. Balcon is specific in suggesting that the Government make up its mind and say just how many feature films it wants the industry to make during the twelve months period.

Something of this kind was adumbrated during the sittings of the Manpower Panel. The industry still does not know where it stands or even if it can be assured that it will retain what at present it holds.

Films Gross 25% More Than Before War

That these suggestions and appeals have not had the fuller support of the great majority of existing British producers, not even of their official body itself would seem at first surprising if not downright illogical. The facts are that the former are not doing too badly at all, have so far weathered the storm of manpower, own the studios themselves, have seen their films grossing at least 25 percent more than British films did before the war.

Though the volume of production is infinitesimal, and though the independent producer finds it increasingly difficult to break into the ring, the commercial value of the British film has gone up considerably during the last two years, its quality has improved, it is slowly melting the ice on the foreign market—and its producers are benefiting accordingly.

Under a census taken this year it was discovered that approximately 3,000 workers, including technicians, are currently employed in British studio and laboratories, 1,400 of them in feature production. The figure is 500 or 600 over the figure for September, 1939.

British films are currently budgeted higher than in 1939 and they are grossing higher, at least 25 percent higher in relation to their actual cost. Films produced at a cost of £40,000, for British release alone, are currently bringing back over £100,000 in some instances, with an average return of £75,000 to £80,000. World market films made at a figure of £75,000 have brought from the British market alone grosses amounting to £120,000. Two of them have already returned over $800,000 dollars on the U. S. market.

British National have their own studio at Elstree, and another at Hammersmith. Gaumont British Gainsborough have two studios at Shepherds Bush and Islington. Associated British have their own stage at Welwyn, and the various companies associated through release with General Film have ready access to the General Film-Denham Studio. They have Board of Trade collaboration on supplies of timber, hessian, jute and clothing.

Meanwhile, the American companies here, ready to invest their frozen credits into world market films to be made here, are tied by the conditions by the unavailability of studios, materials and personnel. Metro British, who have hitherto, as an individual unit, used the ambitious Denham Studios, have declared that they will—obviously through the unavailability of any other—make their Donat picture at Gainsborough, a studio hardly equipped or of sufficient dimension for the making of world market films, and where very few films have been made at a cost higher than £40,000.

K.R.S. REBUFFED BY FREE STATE CENSOR

Hope of effecting an agreement for modulation of film censorship in the Irish Free State, which has rendered many films commercially useless in the recent past, is understood to be waning following a report on the recent visit of Sam Smith, president of the Kinematograph Renters Society with Dublin distributors.

Smith conferred with the Free State censor, but reportedly found him adamant on relaxation of censorship procedure, particularly with respect to war films. It has been suggested that the K. R. S. either may seek the intervention of British government agents or the good offices of the United States Amabassador at Dublin.

'Pied Piper' to Open; 'Squadron' in New York

Premiere of 20th Century-Fox film, "The Pied Piper" will be held July 16th at the RKO Palace in Rochester, N. Y., it was announced by the company. Tom J. Connors, sales chief, and Jay Golden, manager of the theatre, completed arrangements. According to present plans, the opening will be attended by Monty Woolley, Anne Baxter and Otto Preminger of the cast. Nunnally Johnson wrote and produced the film, which is based on a serial that appeared in Colliers Magazine.

Plans for the world premiere of Paramount's "Holiday Inn," to be held at the Paramount, New York, August 4th, proceeds of which will go to the Navy Relief Society, were discussed at a luncheon Monday at Toots Shor's restaurant. Jules Stein is chairman of the premiere committee.

Last Thursday night, Universal's "Eagle Squadron" made its bow at the Globe Theatre, New York, with representatives from the film industry, from the U. S. fighting forces, and the RAF and the RCAF, in attendance. The Hon. Godfrey Haggard, British consul-general in New York, was recipient of the $10,000 check donated to the RAF Benevolent Association by Walter Wanger, producer of the picture. The presentation of the check was made in behalf of Mr. Wanger by Col. Melvin E. Gillette, commanding officer of the U. S. Army Signal Corps Film Training Unit at Long Island.

Among those on the invitation list were: Colonel Charles Sweeney, founder of the Eagle Squadron; Sir Ronald Sinclair, representing Lord Halifax, British Ambassador; Major General Follett Bradley, commander of the First Air Force, and commanding General of all the air forces of the Eastern Defense Command; Brigadier General W. T. Larson, commander of the First Bomber Command; Captain Arthur Marsden, of the British Ministry of War Transport; Vice-Admiral R. Bell-Davies, Naval attache of the British Embassy; Col. Arthur I. Ennis, of the U. S. Air Force; Group Captain D. V. Carnegie, of the RAF; Wing Commander Humphrey Bevan, air attache from New Zealand; Wing Commander Christopher Clarkson, of the British Air Commission; Commander John Grant, of H.M.S. Penelope; Wing Commander C. McK. Henry, Australian Air Attache; Major C. B. Omerod, of the British Ministry of Information; and Sir Samuel Savage, recently knighted by King George VI for war relief work.

Also: Myrna Loy, with her husband, John Hertz, Jr.; Ruth Draper, noted diseuse; Michael Strange, the former Mrs. John Barrymore and mother of Diana Barrymore, who makes her debut in the film; Lt. Robt. Tyre (Bobby) Jones, who recently joined the Air Force at Mitchel Field; and Major Lynn Farnol, press relations officer at Mitchel Field and former film publicity director.

"Yank at Eton" Seen in Washington

A sneak preview, very rare for Washington, D. C., was accorded "A Yank at Eton" last Monday night at Loew's Palace. The British Ambassador and Lady Halifax led a delegation from the British Embassy, who viewed the unheralded MGM picture, but even the local film critics were not informed of the "sneak." John Considine, producer, also was among those present.

Audience reaction to the latest Mickey Rooney vehicle was enthusiastic, according to Loew officials in Washington. The regular feature which was being shown at the Palace was "Tortilla Flat."

"Fantasia" will be shown in neighborhood theatres in Chicago on twin film bills at advanced prices of 40-cent matinees and 55-cent evening admissions, it was reported this week.

March of Time's full-length feature, "The Story of the Vatican," opened Wednesday July 1st, for an indefinite run at the Little theatre, Newark, N. J. Distribution is through RKO. This is the first full-length picture ever filmed inside Vatican City. The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen is narrator for the picture.

RKO announced this week that trade showings of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Pride of the Yankees" will be held in 29 key cities on July 15th. Screenings were held Tuesday in Buffalo, Salt Lake City and Washington. The New York showing will be at the Astor, 11 A. M., July 15th. All 31 other screenings are at 10:30 A. M. The trade shows will coincide with the New York opening at the Astor theatre that evening.

A special box office has been opened at RKO Palace, New York, where reserved seats can be purchased for any of the 40 RKO houses which will show "Pride." All seats are $1.10. The Palace will not show the film, but the service was installed for convenience of patrons who happen to be in the Times Square area.

'Miniver' Plays to 94% Capacity

"Mrs. Miniver," MGM's film on wartime England, which is breaking all records at New York's Radio City Music Hall, has been playing to "94 per cent capacity since the picture opened," according to Gus Eyssell, managing director of the theatre. Mr. Eyssell reported this week that "Miniver" is "unprecedented in the history of the Music Hall and is one of the rare pictures in my entire experience in show business to display such a sustained quality."

The film began its sixth week on Thursday, thus equalling the all-time long-run engagement record shared by "Rebecca," "The Philadelphia Story" and "Woman of the Year," the only other pictures in the theatre's 10-year history to play a six-week period. It was expected that "Miniver" would end its fifth week by passing the three-quarter of a million mark in patrons who have viewed it.

The film will have a twin opening at the Apollo and United Artists, Chicago, on July 18th.

Loew's Rochester will revert to single feature policy for the run of "Mrs. Miniver," beginning July 16th.

The RKO Palace, Cincinnati, opened the picture last week at a scale of 40 cents to 1 P.M., 44 and 66 cents from 6 P.M. to closing. The regular scale is 33 and 40 cents for matinees and 40 and 50 cents evenings.

Loew's Poli, in Hartford, screened the film for city and state officials last week, and the Poli in Springfield, Mass., held a screening for the city's Motion Picture Council and city officials.

Record grosses for the first day at the following theatres were recorded; Paramount, Des Moines; Paramount, Los Angeles; Paramount, Toledo; Malco, Memphis; Majestic, Houston; Paramount, Springfield; Esquire, Davenport; Brooklyn Fox theatre; Capitol, Wilkes-Barre, and the Comerford, Scranton.

20th Century-Fox reports that "This Above All" topped previous records of Fox films at the Rochester RKO Palace last week, where a number of exploitation tie-ins were effected for the picture's engagement.

3,457 Theatres Sell $2,064,823 in Bonds

June Figure for Houses in Small Cities; Total Expected To Be $10,000,000

A total of $2,064,823 was sold in War Bonds and Stamps during the month of June in 3,457 of the 15,000 theatres participating in the industry's campaign, it was reported at mid-week at national headquarters in New York.

Since the majority of these houses are in small cities and towns, the average of $600 per month is considered extremely encouraging, it was said, and indicates that the total for all theatres during the month of June would run over $10,000,000, once all reports are in.

Joseph Bernhard of Warner Bros. reported a total of $540,000 last week, of which $285,000 was in stamps, at 450 Warner theatres. The 66 Skouras houses in New York reported $125,000. In Rochester, N. Y., 30 theatres sold bonds and stamps at the rate of $5,000 a week, it was said, with the first month's total about $22,000. In Boston, 130 houses reported averaging $130,000 weekly, with a $550,000 total for June. In Worcester, Mass., downtown houses sold $35,000 during June.

According to Mr. Fabian, the first 274 theatres to report on their first month's participation in the drive, accounted for a total of $112,542.70 in bonds and $72,816 in stamps. All of the houses are independents in small towns, he said.

From New Haven, reports at the end of the first month were that Warner theatres sold $83,000 in bonds and $21,358 in stamps, while Loew-Poli houses sold $69,128 in bonds and $26,159 in stamps. The Poli, Hartford, sold $16,825 in bonds, $7,442, stamps. In Manchester, Conn., Jack Sanson, manager of the State, conducted a week's intensive drive with talks from the stage, and chalked up $104,000 in bond sales.

$50,000 for Hat in "Miniver" Iowa Debut

A total of $227,000 in War Bonds was sold during the day of the opening of "Mrs. Miniver" at the Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Monday. A capacity house of 1,700 purchased $170,000 in bonds to obtain their tickets. One ticket was given free to each purchaser of a $25 or $50 bond and two were given for each $1,000 bond.

After the premiere, Dave Elman, of the "Hobby Lobby" radio show, sold at auction for $50,000 the mink hat worn by Greer Garson in the MGM film. Other articles, including an autographed copy of the book, by Jan Struthers, in Miss Garson's and Mr. Pidgeon's handwriting, brought another $7,000 in bonds. Tickets for the opening performance were sold out the day before the premiere and several hundred more could have been sold, it was reported.

Sale of bonds and stamps in the 50 theatres of the Tri-State circuit, Des Moines, totaled approximately $2,000 for the first four-week period.

St. Louis theatre sales of bonds are well over the $200,000 mark for the first three weeks of the drive, it was reported this week. The largest individual sale was made by the Melba theatre to Dr. W. W. Walters, physician, who purchased a $5,000 bond.

Employes at 18 Twentieth Century-Fox exchanges have subscribed 100 per cent.

Marlene Dietrich and Nancy Carroll helped the sale of bonds in Atlantic City last week and brought the day's total to $1,685,040. The resort city celebrated July 1st as Victory Day.

Nine theatres in Reading, Pa., including Loew's, Warner, Strand, Ritz, Rajah, Embassy, Park, Penn and Astor, sold $70,140 worth of bonds and stamps during June, through the cooperation of volunteers of the Civilian Volunteer Defense Office.

Industry Aids China Relief

A number of women from the home offices of distributing companies participated in the three-day street drive held in New York from Thursday through Saturday this week on behalf of United China Relief. A rally was held in Times Square Thursday at noon under auspices of the Film War Service Council, which comprises local motion picture industry trade unions. Speaker for the event was James G. Blaine, chairman of the New York Civilian Defense Volunteers. Stage, screen and radio players were on hand to entertain the lunch-hour crowds which gathered in the square.

Chicago's film row, under direction of Edward Silverman, John Balaban, James E. Coston and Jack Kirsch, is reported contributing to the United China Relief. Among the donations received to date are: Essaness theatres, $500; Balaban and Katz, $500; H. & E. 15% of Benefits to Talent Unit

The United Theatrical War Activities Committee, which is organized to provide talent for war benefits and drives, will collect 15 per cent of gross receipts from all Army and Navy relief shows, it was learned in New York this week, following arrangements completed with Amy and Navy relief societies. Five per cent will go to overhead, another five to the American Theatre Wing War Service for its Stage Door Canteens, and the remaining five per cent to various theatre charities.

James E. Sauter, executive director of UTWAC, explained that the organization was manned principally by volunteers and that most of the 5 per cent earmarked for overhead would not be needed. He said that the unused portion would be divided equally between the Theatre Wing and the funds of the other charities.

A total of $360,385.61 has been collected for the Army and Navy Relief fund drive through the theatres affiliated with Paramount Pictures, Inc., Leonard Goldenson, vice president of Paramount Pictures in charge of the theatre department, announced in New York Monday.

More than $20,000 was netted by the Army and Navy Relief as a result of the performance of "Ready on the Firing Line," sponsored by the St. Louis chapter of Variety Club last week in that city. The musical was produced, written, staged and acted by 100 soldiers from Fort Leonard Wood, near Rolla, Mo. The club handled promotion for the show and gave it widespread publicity.

N.Y. HAS SECOND BLACKOUT; THEATRE BUSINESS HOLDS

New Test Has Little Effect on Gross Receipts; Theatres Collect Rubber

New York underwent its second thorough blackout Monday night, 9:30 to 9:50 —and this time boxoffices suffered little, a portent of some good for other theatres of the nation, which cooperating loyally, have been hit hard in numerous tests.

Business was actually better in the Broadway sector, theatre men there reported. In the neighborhoods, it was "normal."

The blackout was generally successful, authorities said. There was no criticism of theatres of which almost 600 were affected.

Defense officials at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, decreed this week the dimout must be deeper. The city will thus be following the example of Boston, where the dimout is drastic.

Even in Milwaukee, theatre men are being schooled in their air raid duties; and blackout precautions have been drawn. Underway is a survey to determine how many persons may be housed in the city's theatres in emergency.

Building Operations In San Francisco

Despite wartime building restrictions, several theatres in the San Francisco area have recently been completed or have undergone remodelling.

Fox-West Coast Theatres, Inc., are finishing an 800-seat newsreel house in downtown Oakland, to be known as the Fox-Newsreel. It is the first of the circuit's three coast newsreel houses opening this summer, the other two in southern California.

In San Francisco the neighborhood Alexandria, operated by San Francisco Theatres, Inc., underwent a $110,000 reconstruction job, reopening with an additional 300 seats to up its capacity to 1,705. Rocking chair loges were added upstairs. The same circuit has sold its Balboa Theatre in San Francisco to D. B. Levin, who also operates the Grand Theatre in the Mission district. Across the bay in Richmond, site of two bustling new shipyards, employing 35,000 men, Robert L. Lippert recently opened the new $25,000 Royal Theatre.

Complaint against construction of a theatre at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, has been referred by the Senate Defense Investigating Committee to the War Production Board. Hugh Fulton, counsel for the Committee saying its members await a reply from the WPB before deciding whether further inquiry is necessary.

The complaint came from Hendrix Rowell, lawyer for independent operators at Pine Bluff, who said that the Malco Realty Corporation, owned 50 per cent by Paramount Pictures, Inc., was proceeding with construction of a new theatre there. Mr. Rowell announced he would be willing to appear before the committee to charge that the WPB with "the report of their own Little Rock director that the construction proposed at Pine Bluff was in violation of Conservation Order L-41, has apparently, or at least secretly, permitted such construction to be resumed." Mr. Rowell said that Malco obtained a city permit on April 8th for construction of a new theatre costing in excess of $12,000.

Mr. Rowell testified that he reported the matter to W. L. Payson of the WPB and that after an investigation, WPB's Little Rock director reported that construction not having begun prior to April 9th, the building violated a conservation order. Subsequently, Mr. Rowell said, a charging letter was sent by the WPB to M. S. McCord, a Malco official at North Little Rock, halting construction pending evidence the order was not being violated. Since that time, repeated efforts to learn the status of the project from the WPB in Washington or North Little Rock was unavailing, he testified, until announcement was made in Pine Bluff on June 11th by Malco officials that construction was being resumed. Since that Malco announcement, the complainant said, his clients have been unable to learn "circumstances surrounding" the decision.

"I personally charge, without hiding behind a cloak of counsel, that something is amiss in the War Production Board organization," Mr. Rowell charged. He accuses the WPB of complacency and indifference in "deliberately overlooking the flagrant violation of orders made to conserve vital war material."

Rubber Collected At Special Shows

The Alabama Theatre's "Rubber Matiness" in Birmingham, that state, Friday, July 3rd, was attended by more than 1,200. Admission was two pounds of rubber for each person.

Wisconsin theatres actively aided the rubber drive. Special shows at the Orpheum, Kenosha, the Wausau, Wausau, and the Orpheum, Green Bay, produced 3,000 pounds.

The Court Square Theatre, Springfield, Massachusetts, collected more than 100 pounds during a children's morning show.

The 71 Loew theatres in New York's metropolitan area will have collected approximately 35 tons, C. C. Moskowitz, the circuit's operating head, said last week.

Almost five tons were garnered by Sidney Lust's six theatres in Maryland.

The U. S. Army Air Corps continued its "occupation of Atlantic City" this week by seizing the Convention Hall, largest hall in the world, and the Madison Hotel, its fifth to be requisitioned there.

At Springfield, Massachusetts, the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot of the Army took the Eastern States Exposition Grounds. The exposition was cancelled. There are six major buildings, and 25 acres in the deal. Among the buildings is the Coliseum, so there will be no more hockey and ice shows in that city for the duration.

The United States Coast Guard has also participated in the alteration of amusement habits in Atlantic City; it has installed a 1:30 A.M. curfew, and has barred midnight shows at theatres, and on piers.

Early Morning Shows Started

As an experiment to draw the attendance of "swing shift" workers in defense plants, the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, has instituted a 9 A.M. to 5 A.M. policy twice weekly. Special emphasis on this arrangement was contained in the advertising of "Sergeant York."

A check by Harry Schreiber of RKO theatres showed more than 24,000 local war plant workers, many of whom cannot attend theatres during present regular hours. Most of the workers get off in the period from 12:30 and 2 A.M. Mr. Schreiber asserted considerable business could be picked up by theatres accommodating these workers.

A 24-hour showing of "Wings for the Eagle," in connection with the buildup at the large plants also is under consideration.

Mr. Willkie is honorary chairman of the Fund's drive and Mr. Rubin is a vice-chairman and heads the amusements' division.

The quota for the industry is $150,000 this year. Last year, its contribution totalled $115,000.

In their appeal, Mr. Willkie and Mr. Rubin stressed the importance and extent of the philanthropic endeavors of the city's 400 charitable agencies which unite annually in the drive for funds. They characterized the Fund as "the embodiment of the American spirit applied to charity. It asks only 'What is your need?' and never 'What is your creed?' By its fine record it has earned your support. Perhaps no group in the City of New York is called upon more often by and responds more often to charity appeals than our own amusement industry. Certainly, no group gives so liberally in both money and services. Because of this enviable record, we do not hesitate to appeal to the motion picture, radio, sports, legitimate theatres and all other parts of the entertainment world to join in support of the Fund. We urge you to give and give generously."

ARMED FORCES CALL HEAVILY ON RANKS OF FILM WORKERS

Most recent of Hollywood's screen stars to answer the call to the colors is Victor Mature, 26-year-old actor of 20th Century-Fox, who is completing work on the RKO lot in "Sweet and Hot." Mr. Mature joined the Coast Guard and was inducted last week. He will commute daily from the operating base at Los Angeles Harbor to the RKO studio until he finishes work on the film.

Recently, Clark Gable, of MGM, for many years one of the top ten money-making stars in the HERALD-FAME poll, and reported to be the second highest paid actor in Hollywood last year, applied for a commission in the Army Air Force. He passed his physical examination and is awaiting consideration of his application, according to the War Department. If accepted, it is understood he will be ordered to the officers' training school at Miami Beach, Fla., for training, and then to the office of the director of individual training in Washington. From there, Mr. Gable would be sent to various air force replacement training centers, those specializing in navigation, gunnery, radio and engineering, to explain the type and importance of air crew jobs.

HONOR ROLL FOR SERVICEMEN

Plaques carrying the names of former employes of RKO and Paramount home offices who are now serving in the U. S. armed forces were unveiled recently with appropriate ceremonies by staffs and executives of both companies.

Paramount's plaque lists the names of 51 men from the home office and metropolitan area. The unveiling took place at a recent meeting of the Paramount Pep Club. Two plaques carrying the names of men from RKO Radio and RKO theatres who have answered the call to the colors, have been placed on the 11th and 14th floors of the RKO building.

A service flag with 41 blue stars representing names of employes of Radio City Music Hall in New York was formally dedicated last week and is now on display in the grand foyer of the theatre.

Record Crisis Faces Makers, Broadcasters

The National Association of Broadcasters board which will meet shortly will discuss the repercussions and counter-movements to the musicians' refusal to make recordings and transcriptions after August 1st.

New York musical and radio circles this week could only hazard possible action by the broadcasters, to whom recordings are vital. Some felt application to the Department of Justice might come. They called the American Federation of Musicians' action illegal restraint of trade.

The Screen Writers Guild, Hollywood, has named six new board members, replacing those in the armed forces and the Government. They are Boris Ingster, George Oppenheimer, Marguerite Roberts, Paul Franklin, Allen Rivkin, Jane Murfin. Vice-president Ralph Block resigned because of defense duties. The Guild will elect a successor.

The six men replaced are Richard Maibaum, Jerome Chodorov, Phillip Dunne, Dwight Taylor, Joseph Fields, Marc Connelly.

In New York, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees last week confirmed that its drive to include all exchange employes in its "B" unions heretofore embracing only "back room" workers, applies also to bookers, although they usually are paid higher salaries.

Paramount's New York employes last week received a "cost of living" bonus, their third. It was eight per cent of a week's pay, retroactive 13 weeks. Excepted were 27 members of the Screen Publicists Guild. They protested, and their representatives conferred with the company's officials. The Guild won a contract with the home office recently.

Representation for "white collar" workers in the MGM New York exchange is sought by the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, Local 109, through the National Labor Relations Board. The guild thus comes into conflict with the IATSE, with "B" locals in the nation's exchanges.

New officers of the United Scenic Artists of America are Howard Bay, president; Jack Maryon, vice-president; Rudy Karnolt, recording secretary; Arthur Romano, financial secretary; George Everett, treasurer; Peggy Clark, trustee; Fred Marshall, business agent.

Direction of the San Francisco chapter of the American Guild of Variety Artists has been assumed by Mat Shelvey, succeeding Curt Hyans.

Ed Fay, of Providence, Writes War Song

Edward M. Fay, Providence exhibitor, has written the words and music for "On Our Way," a new martial song for popular music counter sales. The song is being published by the Fay Music Publishing Company, organized by Mr. Fay, with offices at 1600 Broadway, New York, and 60 Union Street, Providence.

The lyrics of the chorus are:

"On our way, on our way, We are on our Way. We will fly through the air and we'll sail the seas. We will fight, we will fight. You can bet we'll fight, to the East and the West to the North and South. On our way, we are on our way. We will fight for the freedom of all the world. So hurray, yes hurray, for the U. S. A. And equality of race and creed."

"More Training Films": Zanuck

Expansion of the army training film program of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, was announced in Hollywood Monday by Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck. He added that documentary and "orientation" films, disclosed some time ago as the task of Major Frank Capra, would go into work immediately.

Major Capra arrived in Hollywood from Washington recently, and has been preparing the groundwork for the films. He is with the Army's special services branch. Production is in various studios.

The training films have been in work for more than a year, and are the industry's important specific contribution to the armed forces. Colonel Zanuck said the Research Council was leasing a portion of the Fox Western Avenue studio. This comprises offices, projection rooms, film vaults, and cutting rooms. Lease is from that company, and for the duration, at $1 per year.

That Colonel Zanuck will produce a feature in color, on the Signal Corps, for release by Twentieth Century-Fox, was reported last week by officers of that corps at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

Columbia Signs Writer

Columbia this week signed Lou Breslow, writer, to a long term contract, according to a company announcement. Collaborating with Fred Schiller, Mr. Breslow is now working on a script for a forthcoming musical to be produced by Gregory Ratoff.

Altec Renews with Circuit

Altec Service Corporation this week signed a renewal agreement with the Gregory Circuit for service and repair replacement coverage on their 10 theatres in the state of Washington.

Craven Disputes Fly On FCC's Reorganization

The division of opinion in the Federal Communications Commission over its functions and authority became dramatically apparent last week with testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven. Mr. Craven, testifying on the Sanders bill to reorganize the FCC, and allow Congress to define its policy, favored the bill.

In doing so, he diametrically opposed the FCC chairman, James L. Fly, whose regulations last year against radio station "monopoly" and investigation of newspaper ownership of radio, stirred the broadcasting industry and led to the present hearings, which have continued several weeks.

Touching the network regulation controversy, he contended chains are essential to broadcasting. He added that if practices are unhealthy, Congress should outlaw them. He suggested that the maximum of Congressional legislation should be prohibition of contracts preventing licencees from broadcasting public service programs of other networks, and from rejecting programs they believe unsuitable. Such legislation, also he said, might prevent the "tying up" of a station for more than three years, and chain options on unspecified periods of a station's time.

Mr. Craven also opposed barring newspapers from radio station ownership.

Of investigation into clear channels, Mr. Craven insisted the FCC should protect them as a "reserve for the future," when new developments may require new channels.

Mr. Fly had testified previously, defending his course as chairman, and his anti-monopoly regulations. Also previous witnesses were executives and lawyers for the radio networks, two of which, the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, favor the bill.

U. S. Films at Peak In South America

With strong anti-Axis feeling spreading throughout Central and South America, exhibition of American motion pictures is at a peak level, it was reported Monday in New York by Morris Goodman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales for Republic. Mr. Goodman returned from a four-month inspection tour of Latin America countries and told the trade press, during an interview, that the film transportation problem which is growing worse may eventually hazard industry operations throughout the area.

Distributors have only to contend with delays at the port of embarkation at present, he said. Republic lost only one shipment in a sinking, he reported. But a further curtailment of transportation is a serious possibility, he added.

Mr. Goodman told of a general business boom in Puerto Rico, Panama and Trinidad resulting from expanded military operations. The rest of Latin America is faring fairly well. Argentina, according to the Republic foreign chief, leads in production with 60 features planned for the current year. Republic is showing a 20 to 25 per cent increase over last year in South America, he said.

Cutler Signs Director

Lester Cutler has signed Alexis Thurn-Taxis to direct four pictures which he will produce for Producers Releasing Corp., it was learned in Hollywood last week. The first film will be "Night for Crime."

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME"

. . . the original exhibitors' reports department, established October 14, 1916. In it theatremen serve one another with information about the box-office performance of product—providing a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. ADDRESS REPORTS: What the Picture Did for Me, Motion Picture Herald, Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.

BLONDIE'S BLESSED EVENT: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Ran this with "Song of the Islands" to an O.K. crowd. Some very funny sequences in this and the fellow who plays the actor is very good. However, as a whole, it is not as funny as preceding Blondies. They can take them or leave them in this town. The blessed event I am waiting for is using the SRO sign again sometime. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 25-26.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier—A very timely and excellently made production. The cast was splendid and each member tried to do his utmost to make this an outstanding success. The story weakened in the latter part but concluded with a bang. Played June 19-20. —A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

Krellsberg

40,000 HORSEMEN: Grant Taylor—A real action picture that did business. Lacked star power, but satisfied. Nice weekend. Play it, it's O.K.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—We did best business of any MGM release of current season. Very entertaining but could have benefited by cutting. Played June 14-15.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD, A: Laraine Day, Barry Nelson—We played this pretty late so decided to "give" it in the interest of sale of stamps and bonds. American Legionnaires in uniform assisted in sale of stamps and the admission was the purchase of stamps. We hiked the admission some and sold about $350.00 in stamps on a day when average business is about $50 to $60. Picture pleased all. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 17.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C.

YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD, A: Laraine Day, Barry Nelson—Very entertaining program picture with plenty of thrill and a suspenseful story. Played June 17-18.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—Well, maybe this was the beginning of a romance between Madeleine and Stirling but certainly nothing that was shown in this picture would indicate it. We thought it one of the poorest stories we have had in a long time and we do not think such a heavy tan enhances Miss Carroll's beauty at all. Color was beautiful. Played June 21-22.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—Double billed this with "Charlie Chan in Rio." Fair business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 18-20.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

HENRY AND DIZZY: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—Good comedy and above average business. The Aldrich family on the radio brings them in. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Bob Hope, Madeleine Carroll—Excellent for Bob Hope fans and box office well above average. Very good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 18-19.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Rural patronage.

TRUE TO THE ARMY: Judy Canova, Allan Jones, Ann Miller—Good picture and good business. Just the stuff for a small town. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

JESSE JAMES AT BAY: Roy Rogers—Nice picture; did business. Rogers quite popular here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MISSOURI OUTLAW, A: Don "Red" Barry—I had a particular interest in this picture as Ken Duncan, the villain, and I went to school together. I didn't like him picking on old men. Played him up here in Chatham and did extra business. Keep it up, Ken; thanks for your letters. A good western. —Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ROMANCE ON THE RANGE: Roy Rogers—Good western drama which pleased on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—Nice weekend business. No regrets. Should play well in small towns.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck —Good comedy and a little spicy in place and that is no detraction. Not for the average audience.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

TOM, DICK AND HARRY: Ginger Rogers, George Murphy—A very fine picture, that pleased all who saw it, but the receipts were very low on this feature. When Rogers goes back to Astaire she will mean something at the box office. George Murphy should be given a real chance in Hollywood. Played June 17-18.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE, WHITE AND PERFECT: Lloyd Nolan, Helene Reynolds—Right down the alley for Michael Shayne and about as good as has been made of this series. Played June 24-25.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BLUE, WHITE AND PERFECT: Lloyd Nolan, Helene Reynolds—Pleased the usual Saturday crowd, and will fit fine with a double bill. Doubled with "West of Abilene" to the usual Saturday business. Fine acting by all of this small cast. Too weak to stand alone. Played June 19-20.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield. Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

CONFIRM OR DENY: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett —Good program picture in which it seemed to us the director passed up a grand opportunity for a thrilling climax which didn't materialize. Played June 19-20.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—A good western. Wish we could get more as good. Good box office. Played June 19-20.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

RISE AND SHINE: Jack Oakie, Walter Brennan, Linda Darnell—The first nighters panned this in no light manner. Think personally it wouldn't be such a flop where people were football conscious and there was youth. My product has to appeal to middle aged patrons. Played June 15-17.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

United Artists

FIESTA: Ann Ayars, George Negrete—No good for small towns. Business held up. Doubled with Rogers' western.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Good patronage.

JUNGLE BOOK, THE: Sabu—Business good but not up to expectations. Appealed to men and children. Running time, 109 minutes. Played June 11-13.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

SHANGHAI GESTURE, THE: Gene Tierney, Walter Huston, Victor Mature, Ona Munson—This did not arouse much enthusiasm despite the good cast. However, I'll give my personal Oscar to Ona Munson for her role. This was the outstanding part of the picture, her work.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

SHANGHAI GESTURE, THE: Gene Tierney, Walter Huston, Victor Mature, Ona Munson—The small crowd who came said it was the best they had seen, but that doesn't help put bread on the table. Personally thought Ona Munson should have had top billing, she is a real actress. Walter Huston presented his usual fine performance. Get them in, and you will have your worries over. The picture does the rest. Played June 22-23.—Mrs. V. Sheffield. Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. General patronage.

TWIN BEDS: George Brent, Joan Bennett—Joan Bennett popular here. Good comedy. Running time. 90 minutes. Played June 1-3.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

Universal

FLYING CADETS: William Gargan, Peggy Moran —Double-billed with "Juke Box Jenny." No draw, just a double bill. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 4-6.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Abbott and Costello—One of the best pictures this team has made to date. Very funny, but drew only average business at the box-office. The patrons came out well satisfied about this one, so everyone happy. Played June 15-16.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

IT STARTED WITH EVE: Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton—A fine picture, real good entertainment. Laughton has yet to mean a dime to us. Business only fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KEEP 'EM FLYING: Abbott and Costello—Did all right. No trouble with these boys, here.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Abbott and Costello—Better than the last two; it is pure corn (as they both admit) and if that is what it takes to get business, the more corn, the better. The business needs more comedians and less heavy pictures at this time. The technique of this pair is old stuff, and it is still good theatre, and the boys know it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind. General patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Abbott and Costello—Swell business, good comments, so everybody was satisfied. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 8-10.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

SABOTEUR: Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane—A real fine picture. Well acted, did not sell out, but did above average business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SPOILERS, THE: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne—A pretty good show. Suitable for any change. Box office only fair. Played June 21.—K. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BODY DISAPPEARS, THE: Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman—Did nice business even if it was cold.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BODY DISAPPEARS, THE: Jeffrey Lynn, Jane Wyman—Doubled with "Six Gun Gold" to fair Friday-Saturday business. This picture proved to be a feature length comedy, and had the audience laying in the aisles. Edward Everett Horton stole the show and Willy Best gave a perfect performance. Played June 24-25.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. General patronage.

DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE: John Garfield, Raymond Massey—Dandy picture. Sponsored a theatre party on this one. Nice business for middle of week.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

KINGS ROW: Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings—This is a very good dramatic show and business was in accordance. I would call it a woman's show. Running time, 127 minutes. Played June 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT: Humphrey Bogart, Sylvia Sidney—The usual high standard of motion picture you get from W. B.; pleased all who came, and is worthy of any date in the week. Box office only fair. Played June 24-25.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. General patronage.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BARBEE - CUES: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith at his best. Play it.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FURTHER PROPHECIES OF NOSTRADAMUS: Miniatures—Fairly entertaining reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

AT THE COUNTY FAIR: Speaking of Animals—This series seems to have lost its appeal here. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

IN THE CIRCUS: Speaking of Animals—Another good comedy in the Talking Animals series.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM IN THE RANKS: Madcap Models—Well liked. Running time, 9 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ont., Can. Railroader patronage.

SNUBBED BY A SNOB: Color Classics—An old cartoon, but still a good one. In color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS, NO. 1: My patrons like these. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ont., Can. Railroader patronage.

Philadelphia Stage Season Ends

Philadelphia closed its most successful legitimate theatre season in almost a decade with a total gross of $1,318,400 credited to the 1941-42 season, started September 8 and ended May 30. Among the three Shubert houses—Forrest, Locust St. and Walnut St.—and a single week for the Mask and Wig college show at William Goldman's Erlanger Theatre, there were 80½ weeks played with only 26½ weeks dark. The previous season, the same theatres split 70 playing weeks for a total gross of $994,500. The number of attractions were virtually the same, with the 1941-42 season offering 13 musical shows and 20 dramatic attractions.

Outstanding was the record run at the Forrest Theatre of "Hellzapoppin'" (Jay C. Flippen-Happy Felton unit), playing 10½ weeks for a gross of $316,900. The season previous, "Life With Father" remained for 13 weeks at the Walnut St. Theatre, but only grossed $219,700 for its run. Other significant engagements were "My Sister Eileen," drawing $57,000 for six weeks at the Locust St.; Eddie Cantor's "Banjo Eyes" bringing the Forrest $78,800 in three weeks; and "Arsenic and Old Lace" accounting for $68,500 in four weeks at the Walnut St.

The season's major failure was Irving Caesar's "My Dear Public," staying two weeks at the Forrest for $20,000 and then folding. While not all attractions showed impressive grosses, only five shows closed their local engagements in the red.

The Forrest Theatre again proved the biggest grosser, drawing more than half of the season's total gross in bringing in $766,400 for 33½ weeks with 13 attractions. Locust St. followed with $287,200 in 25 playing weeks with 11 attractions. Walnut St., running for 21 weeks with 10 attractions, grossed $231,800. The independent Erlanger, for its single week with the Mask and Wig collegiate show, "Out of This World," added $33,000 to the season's total.

Quiz Kids To Make Features

With the completion of their present series of Paramount short subjects the company will promote the Quiz Kids, of both screen and radio fame, to feature pictures, by arrangement with Louis G. Cowan, who controls the entertainment activities of the juvenile group and their quizmaster, Joseph Kelly.

The first full-length picture in which the Quiz Kids will be featured is now being planned by Paramount, where several stories are under consideration.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

We Can, We Will, We Must, We Have

Most of us know that unless we tell somebody else what we have done, the pride of doing it is little recompense for the effort involved. And we are fortunate in being in a business where ear is always given to the other fellow's accomplishments. That's the epitome of the Round Table—it's also the secret of the success of many a picture and many a theatre. For the successful formula is made available to others to apply again.

With that in mind, let us consider the tremendous job we are doing in the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. Theatres from the Radio City Music Hall with 6,200 seats down to the Dream Theatre at Bennett's Switch are all selling War Stamps and Bonds. We of the industry know we are doing it; the public knows we are doing it . . . but we must still spread the word further so that it reaches the Government, represented by certain officials.

The way to do this is to send to the War Activities Committee, to a local film group or to us at the Round Table a tabulation of what you have done in the sale of War Stamps and Bonds. There won't be any comparison made with anyone else; no one will write to spur you on to even greater efforts. The sole purpose is so that a report can be compiled to show the Government that we have been tried and not found wanting.

If your theatre is a part of a circuit, include the daily or weekly total sales of War Stamps on the back of your home office reports; if you are an independent operation, send them to the Round Table or give them to a local War Activities Committee member who represents the industry.

The second month of the sale of War Bonds and Stamps through theatres is well under way. Yet newspapers in New York on July 1 reported on their front pages that on that day sale of War Stamps and Bonds began in the department stores. Of course, department stores are heavy newspaper advertisers, but we of the motion picture have the finest publicity minds in the country and we should certainly be able to point out to the newspapers and through them to the public that we are doing a first-class job of bond selling.

Sure, we know other industries are doing good work along the same line, and we hope they continue it. It's all going into the same place. But it's a selfish world and every nation, every section, every industry and even different communities and groups are all vying to see who can sell the most bonds and stamps. So it's not only a job of putting our team on top but keeping it there and then yelling as loud as we can to tell everybody that we did it.

It's one case where we can do well to emulate the chicken in one respect and do diametrically the opposite in the other. Let's do as the hen does when she cackles after laying an egg, "Look, look, look, what I did!" But let's not cross the road hither and yon without aim or purpose. Let's do the job and then tell everybody we did it. The hen who lays her egg and hides it will soon be a roasting chicken.

With the cooperation of the entire exhibition branch, who in the long run are doing the job for which the entire industry will get the credit, Washington can be shown what the theatres of the country can do and have done.

ANOTHER JOINER

Several theatremen have written us following our editorial, "The Joiner", in the issue of May 30, agreeing that it is advisable for a showman to belong to as many organizations as possible and also proving that they do.

Among the "joiners" is Earle Holden, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, who has been elected president of the Atlanta Lions Club. His picture was published in the paper when he took office. "I consider it a great honor to have been elected president of the Lions Club which numbers 145 representative businessmen of the city," says Earle. "I have been in Atlanta only 10 years. I have been an active member of the club but not to the extent of neglecting my business; and, to my own satisfaction at least, I have proved that a manager can devote time to civic activities and operate his business at the same time. My other club or civic activities are: Chairman of the Public Relations Committee of the Atlanta Variety Club and Member of the Entertainment Committee (Red Cross) for the Lawson General U. S. Army Hospital."

Dick Feldman sells War Stamps and Bonds from this dugout placed right at the curb under the marquee of the Paramount Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y. The booth was paid for by the Syracuse Trust Co. and manned by school teachers in three-hour shifts.

Kline Has Ring-Toss Display

Effective was the lobby display used by Lee Kline at the Orpheum, in Philadelphia, center of which was a pedestal on which was a hand pointing upward. Each patron making a donation to the Army and Navy Relief Fund was entitled to take a chance at tossing a ring on the third finger of the hand. Those scoring were presented with a pass to see the next attraction.

Cohn Uses Jalopy Ballyhoo

A jalopy painted with army slang expressions, etc., toured the streets of Chicago to aid Ben Cohn of the Hamilton in selling the war effort. Large sign on the back of the car read: "Keep us free. Buy war savings bonds and stamps." In addition, the card plugged Ben's current attraction.

Brien Enlists Cooperation of Westinghouse Co.

Cooperation with an industry not only to sell War Stamps and Bonds but also to sell the War itself was Lige Brien's motive in arranging for a special show at the Belmar Theatre, Pittsburgh, of which he is manager, for the employees of the Westinghouse Company.

The campaign which Lige staged is far more than just the local promotion—he was told that if it went over, the same thing would be done in all cities where Westinghouse has factories, thus reaching more than 70,000 people.

To start the affair off with a bang, a parade of 600 employees led by a 20-piece band and including a police escort, Army, Navy and Marine detachments, marched through the section and up to the theatre. The paraders bore a sign reading, "Buy War Stamps and Bonds at the Belmar."

The newspapers gave the affair considerable space. The slogan of the affair was "Let's Show Them" which was emblazoned on a Victory Rally Card and Badge given to all employees.

In the theatre itself, where the employees from the Homewood plant gathered, a special feature made by the Westinghouse company was shown to the employees. It dealt with the company's work on war materials. Before the picture was screened, a Navy man blew taps as the flag was raised and a Marine officer made a speech. An Army officer and a Navy officer also spoke, as did Manager Brien. Song sheets bearing martial music were handed out to all present and the affair thus got off to a fine start with a good old-fashioned "sing" in which everyone joined.

It may look a bit strange to see that Spanish language sign at the left, but they're selling War Bonds and Stamps in Puerto Rico, too, which is very much a part of these United States. This is the lobby of the Metro Theatre at Santurce, with "Two Faced Woman" the attraction; therefore the Melvyn Douglas tieup with a photo of one of the stars to everyone who bought a Stamp or Bond.

INSTITUTIONAL COPY ON WAR BOND RECORD

A four-column card with space for recording purchases of War Bonds was given out to patrons of the LaSalle Theatre in Chicago. Institutional copy on the reverse side gave details of the theatre's policy as well as a plug for War Bonds and Stamps. Cheap to print, cards like this can be given away in prodigious quantities.

Prytz Uses Decal To Sell War Stamps

Conceived by Roy O. Prytz, manager of the Granada Theatre, in Duluth, Minn., and introduced in New York, Washington and California is a new Allied-V Decal transfer emblem with an interlocking A and V. Searching for some symbol which would represent the unity of the Allied nations in their combined struggle for victory, Prytz hit upon the decal, which is printed in red, white and blue with copy around the outside reading: "War Stamps on Sale Here. Ask for Stamps instead of change."

One of the Duluth papers in reporting on the idea stated that a Duluth woman had presented one of the emblems to Crown Prince Olav on a recent visit for which Roy received a personal letter of appreciation.

Co-conceiver of the idea with Prytz is another Duluthian, Clarence Wipson.

"Slap-A-Jap" Machine Gun Lobby Stunt Used by Nevison

A "Slap-A-Jap" machine gun lobby stunt highlighted Joseph Nevison's "A Yank on the Burma Road" campaign at the Bromley Theatre, in Philadelphia. A giant map was featured on which were planted miniature Jap airplanes, folks were invited to try their skill at the machine gun, those getting the highest scores were awarded guest tickets.

The display was manned by uniformed majorettes of the local Drum and Bugle Corps, who acted as attendants, soliciting contributions to the Army and Navy Emergency Relief Fund and inviting participation on the machine. Local newspapers carried three column photos of the stunt on the front page, breaking currently with the engagement of the picture.

Dow Uses Giant Hat to Inaugurate Bond Sales

To open the Bond and Stamp sale at the Fox Brooklyn Theatre, Charles Dow, manager, featured a booth in his lobby that was fashioned from a giant compo board hat, a replica of that worn by Uncle Sam. The hat was erected by Walter Will, chief electrician, on his own time. Stationed in the hat was one of the staff dressed as Uncle Sam, while Bond and Stamp sale copy was carried on a banner overhead.

Rubber Matinee in Plymouth, Pa.

In an effort to assist the scrap rubber collection in the town, the Rialto Theatre in Plymouth, Pa., staged a special rubber matinee July 4th. Admission to the show was presentation of five pounds of scrap rubber by children. All the rubber was donated to the drive.

CORNELL, HARRIS AND KLINE ARE AWARDED PLAQUES

Fitzpatrick, Kalberer, Krolich, Elder and Feldman Win Medals

Clayton Cornell of the State Theatre, Tupper Lake, N. Y.; Ed Harris of the Fox Glendale, Glendale, Calif., and R. Lee Kline of Warners' Orpheum, Philadelphia, were the Quigley Awards Plaque winners for the Second Quarter of 1942. Kline and Cornell are first-time winners; Harris won his first Plaque in the First Quarter of 1942.

The campaigns submitted for the Judges' consideration were considered last Thursday. Those who judged them were all theatremen of wide experience: Lou Metzger, theatre operator of Los Angeles, Calif., formerly general sales manager for both Columbia and Universal; Ernest Emerling, assistant director of advertising and publicity for Loew's Theatres; Michael Edelstein, an RKO division manager.

As customary, the three top winners receive Plaques; the next five are awarded Medals. Medal winners for the Second Quarter are: Bill Elder, Loew's, Indianapolis; Richard Feldman, Paramount, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ed Fitzpatrick, Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn.; A. J. Kalberer, Switow's Indiana Theatre, Washington, Ind.; Art Krolich, Century Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

The Medal winners are all repeaters. Fitzpatrick and Krolich were Plaque winners for the First Quarter, while Elder, Feldman and Kalberer will receive Bars to affix to the Medals they received last Quarter.

In making their selections of the winning candidates, it should be noted that the Judges were guided by the following considerations: consistency of effort; the situation, whether closed or competitive; first-run or subsequent; what was not done as well as what was. Not taken into consideration at all was the method of presentation. Costly campaign books with hand lettering of all kinds receive no more consideration than the simple statement which in effect says, "Here's what I did".

The situation is regarded as important for numerous reasons. For example, the first-run key city showman has more opportunity and more money to spend than his confrere in a smaller situation. The situation is also important with regard to the newspapers; if the papers are cooperative, the theatreman can show more in the way of accomplishment but perhaps the greater accomplishment is that of the man who makes a single "plant" in an uncooperative paper.

The competition is now open for the Third Quarter.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

JACKASS MAIL (M-G-M): Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main, whose teamwork has been observed in several pictures, are again in comedy roles in this one. The title is indicative of the nature of the picture and can be heavily advertised through such means as parading a donkey or mule labelled, "I'm the biggest jackass in town. I can't see 'Jackass Mail.'" The kids might be induced to enter a jackass braying contest. The fact that Beery is compelled to drink milk at the point of a gun provides the basis for a promotion with a milk distributor in which the difference between milk today and in the days of the old West is compared. The comedy can be sold in a variety of ways: a contest can be run for the kids in which prizes are awarded for the best drawing of a jackass; the old game of pinning a tail on a donkey can be played; a man with a cloth over his head on which the likeness of a jackass has been painted would likewise attract attention.

WINGS FOR THE EAGLE (Warner Bros.): This is a story of the plane builders—the men and women behind the guns. Publicity and exploitation can center on the men behind the scenes. On this picture Warner Bros. inaugurates a service which furnishes an exhibitor 25 second and 55 second professionally recorded radio announcements with a five-second cut-off for local playdate copy. It is easy to tie the War Bond campaign to the picture with a slogan like "Buy 'Wings for the Eagle' by Buying War Bonds." There's a throwaway available which can also be planted in newspapers or inserted as a paid ad. Cut-out airplanes can be distributed to the kids for throwaways. Buttons bearing the words of the title are also available as a giveaway. A model plane contest can be held using the plan of a Lockheed Hudson bomber which was printed in Air Trails Magazine. The idea embodies a prize for the best model, but the distribution of the plans with the theatre's name on the back, and the cost partially defrayed by additional merchant ads would result in far more publicity than the average prize contest.

MEN IN WASHINGTON (March of Time): This subject, dealing with the frenzied atmosphere of the national capital as it is today, reveals that the important figures are no longer the Cabinet members, Senators, etc. New faces are now dominant in Washington. It might therefore be an attention-provoking idea to run pictures of the prominent men of Washington today, as noted in the March of Time press sheet and offer a prize for those who identify them all correctly. Postcards bearing an ad for the picture on one side with plenty of space for message including playdate on the other are available. The initials of all of the many Government bureaus concerned with the war also provide the background for another contest.

Smith Builds Bond Booth on "Menace of the Rising Sun"

Taking advantage of the exploitation possibilities of "The Menace of the Rising Sun," Clyde Smith, at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., erected a special red, white and blue booth on the sidewalk in front of his theatre to sell war stamps and bonds. Members of the Sigma Beta Phi sorority acted as hostesses during the sale and the local newspapers were cooperative in giving the stunt a break in the papers.

Teaser Lobby Display Sells "Bashful Bachelor"

As a teaser ahead of "Bashful Bachelor," Harry Stearn and Ken Carter at the Manring Theatre, in Middlesboro, Ky., used a large film can for their lobby display, tying it up with wide pink ribbons and labelling it "The Surprise Picture of the Year. Special print from Hollywood." In addition, a special front display was made featuring cutout heads of Lum and Abner with giant cutout letters.

For "Great Man's Lady" and "Sweetheart of the Fleet," the boys issued a special herald printed in red, white and blue, devoting the cover to defense stamps and bonds. The second page carried a cut of the theatre ad and the third page was devoted to merchants' ad which covered the cost of the four-page folder.

Jolley's Glider Promotion

Mel Jolley at the Columbia Theatre, in St. Thomas, Ontario, for "International Squadron" promoted one of his local merchants for several hundred balsam gliders which were appropriately imprinted and distributed to kids at his Saturday matinee. In addition, through a tieup with the local distributors of Quaker Oats, Airplane Cockpit toys were distributed to kids presenting three box tops.

Longo Ties "Ship Ahoy" To Navy Recruiting

Tying up with the local Navy Recruiting Station ahead of "Ship Ahoy" at Loew's State, in Boston, Joe Longo arranged for a sound truck to play hit tunes from the picture with other Navy songs featured. Recordings were interspersed with spot announcements plugging Navy recruiting.

On the opening night, a group of 100 sailors attended the theatre, some of whom purchased defense stamps in the lobby, which was good for photos in the newspapers. For a week in advance an automatic record player was used in the lobby playing hit tunes from the picture, while a card displayed on the top of the machine carried appropriate credits.

Slang Contest Sells "Rooney" for Morton

Printed on tinted stock with a scene still cut was the herald distributed by Bill Morton and George French ahead of "Miss Annie Rooney" at the RKO Albee, in Providence, R. I. A contest angle was brought in through the listing of slang words, promoted prizes going to the winners, the blanks were widely distributed through the schools.

Because the picture leans heavily on a jitterbug session, Bill held a Jitterbug Jamboree on his stage the opening night, the teacher at the local Arthur Murray school was a judge and promoted prizes were awarded here too.

Feldman Erects Dugout For "Pearl Harbor"

Folks in Syracuse were recently treated to the unusual sight of a dugout, right in front of the Paramount Theatre, all of which was part of Dick Feldman's advance exploitation for "Remember Pearl Harbor." The papers covered the event together with the fact that the color guard marched to the theatre, performing a brief concert outside before entering. The dugout, used for the purpose of selling war stamps and bonds, is manned by local school teachers.

Makemson Distributes Tinted "Sal" Heralds

As a teaser stunt ahead of "My Gal Sal" at the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, John Makemson distributed a set of heralds tinted in various bright hues. Each carried a cut of Rita Hayworth, together with a message supposedly in the star's handwriting, selling the picture with such lead copy as: "You've got a date with me" etc. The record was played at exits and intermissions a week in advance.

Hall's Ration Card

As the opening gun of his "Keep 'Em Laughing" show at the Majestic Theatre, in Johnstown, Pa., Walter Hall distributed ration cards which were distributed to all mill workers and on the streets. Card bore copy: "In addition to the 217 guaranteed laughs and giggles, the Majestic Theatre hereby allots you 30 more howls and 20 guffaws when you see," etc.

INGENUITY REIGNS

Showmen resort to Unusual ideas to Intrigue the Public

"Dumbo" was a little late coming to Akron but Millard Ochs brought Clyde Beatty's elephant, "Pitt", downtown to meet "Dumbo". The two met right in front of the Strand.

Mrs. B. W. Dickinson of the Hamlet Theatre, Hamlet, N. C., uses the wall recesses in the lobby for intricate, novel and attention-getting displays.

Bill Morton of the RKO Albee, Providence, really put this lady in the jam. The display extended the full width of the window. The mannikin stood in a barrel.

Ed May brought a portion of the Brown Dancing School class onto the stage of the Washington Theatre, Maysville, Ky., for their first annual revue. It made quite a hit with the townsfolk.

The Marks Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, is a long way from the sea, but Stew Gillespie, the manager, didn't let that deter him from rounding up all the sailors in town, parading them through the streets, and in return giving them free admission to "Sailors On Leave".

Two green spotlights thrown on this display made a weird effect in the lobby of the State Theatre, Manhattan, Kansas, said Dave Dallas, manager.

Pollock Entertains Notables At "Mrs. Miniver" Screening

A special screening of "Mrs. Miniver" and buffet for prominent localities was recently held by Les Pollock at Loew's, in Rochester, N. Y. Headed by the Mayor, society leaders, critics on the newspapers and others, the party was served a buffet supper on the mezzanine lounge before the screening. A musical ensemble entertained during the half-hour preceding the showing.

A display of 11 by 14 stills was featured in the lounge, while an attractive usherette distributed cigarettes, mints and comment cards, which were later used for advertising purposes. In addition, a girl distributed a flower to each lady, card attached reading: "A rose from Mrs. Miniver."

Teaser Calling Card For "Hardy" Family

Folks in Rochester were intrigued recently when they found calling cards under their doors reading: "The Hardy Family. Sorry you were not at home." This teaser stunt was puled by Jack Hamilton for his advance on "The Courtship of Andy Hardy" at Schine's Webster Theatre. The Round Tabler followed the calling card angle up with a tinted herald bearing cut of the entire Hardy family together with title, cast and playdates. At the bottom was a postscript reading: "It is now your turn to repay their visit."

King's "Blues" Window Cards

Effective were the window displays spotted by C. B. King for "Blues in the Night" at the Ritz Theatre, in McGehee, Ark. Placed strategically in the windows were stills and records of hit tunes from the picture. King also promoted the high school band to march to the theatre opening night with banners.

Druker's "Sal" Contest

Much newspaper coverage was given to Maurice Druker's date on "My Gal Sal" at Loew's State, in Memphis, particularly on the contest angle for which war bonds were offered to those submitting a new World War song. The cooperating dailies ran a list of entries together with art work in all of which the picture came in for a good plug.

Purcell's "Torpedo" Tieup

Through the cooperation of one of his local dailies, Ed Purcell ahead of his date on "Torpedo Boat" at the Strand, in Staunton, Va., landed a contest in which juveniles were invited to build a General MacArthur Escape Boat. The paper ran a two column story and diagram of the boat and the children were invited to bring their models to the theatre, winners receiving guest tickets.

Hevia's Atmospheric Lobby

To sell "Valley of the Sun" at Schine's Hippodrome, in Gloversville, N. Y., Guy W. Hevia planted a special Indian tepee in the lobby of the theatre in addition to having a man in full Indian regalia parade the streets carrying a placard for two days ahead. The libraries coperated by featuring an Indian display together with playdates and copy.

Shannon's Teaser Cards Helps "In This Our Life"

For his advance on "In This Our Life" Lige Brien at the Cambria, in Johnstown, Pa., distributed some 2,000 special teaser cards in which he emphasized the sensational angle. The cards bore copy reading: "The Personal Affairs of Women of the World. Don't pity me. I've paid for my sins a thousandfold. See Bette Davis in," etc. These were distributed in beauty parlors, restaurants, hotels, department stores, etc.

Special invitations in announcement card form were printed and mailed to a select group and station break announcements were made over the radio spotted four days in advance of the opening day.

Makemson's Bowling Tieup Features Shorts Program

Booking two shorts called "Better Bowling" and "Ten Pin Parade," John Makemson at Schine's Van Wert, in Van Wert, Ohio, tied up with a bowling alley which agreed to pay for the entire cost and distribution of 2,000 heralds. In connection with the tieup, John arranged a "Schine Sweepsteak" at the alley the week preceding playdates with the high man and woman on certain days of bowling being awarded with guest tickets which were good during the showing of the shorts. The bowling alley ran a co-op ad in local daily, spotted a 40 by 60 and plugged the event to customers.

Plane Insignia Contest Aids Kalberer on "Wife"

May Covers Rural Routes

To sell "Home in Wyoming" at the Russell, in Maysville, Ky., Ed May mailed over a thousand Government postcards with the week's program to his rural routes, in addition cards were distributed house-to-house locally. Special one-sheet displays were used in white and colors in the balconies as well as the lobbies two weeks ahead and sidewalks displays were used in addition.

Harwell's Spook Bally

Booking in Weber's Midnite Voodoo Party at the Laroy Theatre, in Portsmouth, Ohio, W. D. Harwell procured a skeleton costume in which he dressed a member of his staff and used him for a walking street bally. Credit card on the man's back helped sell the show.

Golden's Special "West Point" Front

Jay Golden resorted to the traditional gold, grey and black of the Military Academy for the decoration color scheme of his RKO Palace front and lobby in Rochester when he played "Ten Gentlemen from West Point." Jay also recently honored war workers at the giant Bausch & Lomb plant by setting aside a special night in their honor during the run of "This Above All."

The Quigley Awards Rulings

In addition to exploitation on pictures—feature, short, serial, etc.—entries may be on goodwill or other institutional ideas. Material which ties up with War Bond selling, or the War itself in any of the many phases in which the theatre can be of service, will be separately judged for the Quigley War Showmanship Award.

The Quigley Awards are voted for single ideas or promotions. Consistency of effort is required for consideration by the Judges. The one-shot contributor cannot expect to have his material judged on the same plane as those showmen who report week in and week out campaigns.

A single idea may be confined to a window, contest, newspaper or program publicity, street stunt, lobby display, ad or ad series, newspaper section, radio tiein, etc.

A single promotion may include more than one slant, providing all slants relate to the original idea. Thus, a single contest promotion may be carried in newspapers, on the radio, in windows, ads, lobby, etc.

Where entrants choose to submit a complete campaign, the single idea or promotion for Awards consideration must be marked accordingly.

The 1942 Quigley Awards are divided into four Quarter periods. Each Quarter is divided into two-week preliminary periods — the "Fortnights".

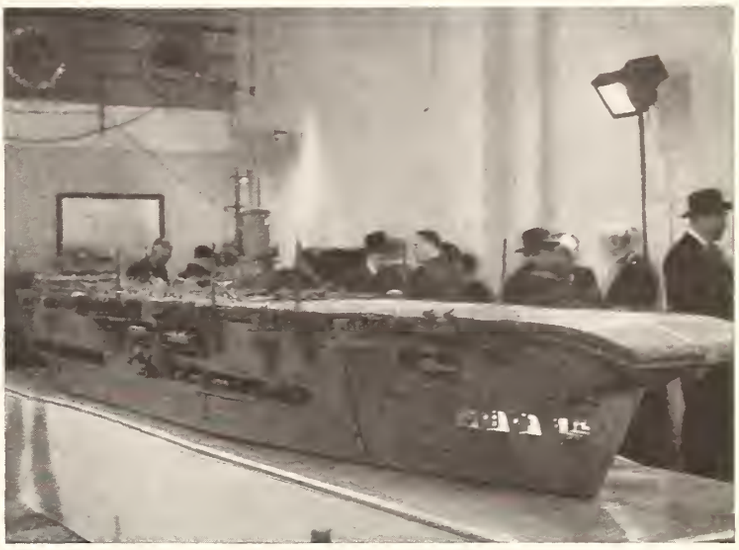
May Lands Essay on "Remarkable Andrew"



Through the cooperation of the motion picture chairman of the local D.A.R. chapter, Ed May at the Russell, in Maysville, Ky., landed an essay contest in the English and History classes of the city schools as an advance on his "Remarkable Andrew" date. Posters made by the students were displayed throughout the schools with title and playdate copy.

SHOWMANSHIP ABROAD

The Last Premiere in Shanghai; England and Neutrals Report

Reynolds Roberts reports that the dummy shown above was dressed in his dinner clothes. Roberts is manager of the Elite Theatre, Middlesbrough, England. The promotion was for "The Perfect Crime".

This scale model of the Ark Royal, 25 feet long and weighing half a ton, was displayed in cities throughout England which played "Ships With Wings" during the Warship Week Campaign. It was made at the Ealing Studios by Norman A. Ough, a Cornish artist and model maker.

This display appeared in the windows of Pan-American Airways in Buenos Aires, Argentina, on behalf of "Mr. Bug Goes to Town". In Spanish the title was translated into "Castles in the Air". Arturo Piacentini, Paramount publicity and exploitation chief in Buenos Aires, is credited with the tieup.

The front of M. Marmonier's Capitole Theatre in Lausanne, Switzerland, was effectively decorated in the interests of "Dumbo".

Shanghai, China, Nov. 1, 1941.—The premiere of Alexander Korda's "Lady Hamilton". Just five weeks later all premieres in that part of the world became but memories. This picture but recently arrived here with one of the last businessmen to leave Shanghai.

Fighter Squadron Invited By Rose to "Real Glory"

To insure newspaper coverage for "The Real Glory," at Loew's Poli Globe, in Bridgeport, Conn., Harry Rose invited members of the 61st Fighter Squadron to attend the show opening night in army trucks with police escort. The 35 piece Boys' Club band played a brief concert out front, while police were detailed to handle the traffic. The stunt was covered by a photographer from one of the dailies, which gave the event a nice break.

Harry tied up with a well-known restaurant called "New Glory" for a window display of scene stills, etc., the management also featuring the picture title and playdates on its menu.

Horse and Buggy Show

"No Gas" has made the horse a topic of interest again, Manager Ralph Lawler of the Paramount, Toledo, discovered when he invited home-towners to attend his opening of "My Gal Sal" in horse and buggy rigs. The turnout of antique conveyances broke the front pages of all Toledo papers.

Purcell Ties "Young America" To Local 4-H Club Agent

With the cooperation of a number of local merchants, Ed Purcell at the Strand, in Staunton, Va. was able to sell a full page ad on "Young America." The local county agent, the home demonstration agent and the 4-H Club leaders told all their members about the picture well in advance of the opening. The county 4-H clubs as a whole had a benefit ticket sale on the picture and helped put over the opening. Purcell also arranged with several county schools for the students to attend afternoon shows in a body.

Aldritt Uses Radio For "Ship Ahoy"

With "Ship Ahoy" lending itself to radio promotions, Don Aldritt at the Fox Watson, in Salina, Kansas used the MGM air trailer to good advantage on several spots and started his campaign by publication and newspaper radio columns.

The entire staff was dressed in navy uniforms a week ahead and Don received permission from the local Sea Scout organization to use their land ship in his lobby with a troop member on duty to answer all questions. In addition, boards containing various types of knots were displayed.

Feldman Contacts Groups To Sell "Fantasia" Date

Hospitals, university fraternities and sororities, PTA, and other groups were approached by Dick Feldman at the Paramount, in Syracuse, to sell his date on "Fantasia," urging them to attend the theatre in groups. Newsboys wore specially imprinted aprons, puzzle giveaways and MacArthur buttons were available for kids, while a coloring contest was also plugged for guest tickets. Numerous stores came through with window displays featuring scene stills and records, while bookstores used windows of the various Disney books with theatre credits.

Kalberer Gives Free Dinners On "Man Who Came to Dinner"

Through a tieup effected with a local restaurant and furniture store, A. J. Kalberer at the Switow Indiana, in Washington, Ind., offered free dinners in connection with his opening on "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Stories were run in the newspaper to the effect that any young man who could secure two young ladies to sit with him and eat a meal in the furniture store window would receive the meals gratis in addition to being guests of the management.

Reynolds "Bomber" Display

Effective was the lobby display on "Dive Bomber" as arranged by Reynolds Roberts at the Elite, in Middlesbrough, England. A sea was formed of optical glass illuminated by a concealed lamp. Riding on the crest of the waves was a battleship flying the American Flag, with a German dive bomber swooping down toward it, with a hurricane in hot pursuit. A dummy dressed in flying suit looked on and the background was completed with star heads of Flynn, MacMurray and Bellamy.

Jalopy Covers Colleges And Sells "Virginian"

A 1914 Model Ford was promoted and appropriately bannered by Francis E. Lattin, at Schine's Athena, in Athens, N. Y., and driven about town with appropriate tie-in copy selling his date on "Vanishing Virginian." Covering the campus of the Ohio University two days prior to the opening, the bally was parked in front of the theatre during playdates.

Promoting a double window in a vacant store adjacent to the theatre, Lattin filled it with a complete set of stills, title, cash and theatre credtis, following out the Double V theme. The theatre cashier called all local fraternities and sororities calling attention to the picture's opening.

Schad Appeals Suit Dimissal

Harry J. Schad, Reading, Pennsylvania, exhibitor, last week filed an appeal in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Philadelphia, from the decision of Federal Judge J. Cullen Ganey, dismissing recently his anti-trust action against 20th Century-Fox, Warner theatres and the Wilmer & Vincent circuit. The appeal is expected to be heard during the October term of the court this autumn.

Meanwhile, in Nashville, there is awaited a decision from Federal Judge Elmer Davies, on the Government's anti-trust suit against the Crescent circuit, affiliates, Universal, and United Artists. It is approximately seven months since Judge Davies received the case for decision.

The case was the first of the Government's anti-trust suits against large circuits to be tried.

The second was the Schine circuit case, which ended as it began, with a two-year "standstill" agreement arrived at in Buffalo Federal Court.

The Seneca theatre, of that circuit, may be finished, the War Production Board ruled last week. Construction had been halted by the Board's ban on such erections costing more than $5,000. It had begun about 10 months ago. The WPB has ruled that construction may proceed only where sufficient materials are already available. That condition has been certified to exist in the instance of the Seneca. The theatre is at Salamanca, New York State. Architects are John and Drew Eberson.

A. B. C. Productions, Inc., Manhattan, theatrical business, with Harry Saltzman, Hedwig Jablon and Geraldine Perlmutter, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, Abraham L. Berman, same address, filing the papers.

Kirkland Theatres, Inc., has changed its corporate name to Miriam Amusement Corporation in papers filed by Ober and Shukat, 170 Broadway, New York.

Three concerns have filed papers of dissolution with the Secretary of State: Avocet Production Corp., and Creative Age Flm Corp., originally filed by Irving M. Rosen, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York and Entertainment Features, Inc., originally filed by Goldwater and Flynn, 60 East 42nd Street, New York.

IN THE COURTS

Sonja Henie Loses Contract Action

Sonja Henie last week was ordered by the Appellate Division of the N. Y. Supreme Court to pay Dennis Scanlan $77,658 damages representing 10 per cent of her film earnings until 1940 and interest under an alleged verbal contract. The high court upheld a jury verdict rendered in November, 1940, after trial before Justice Aron Steuer.

The appellate court by a 3-to-2 vote ruled the evidence sufficient to warrant a finding that Miss Henie agreed in France in 1936 to pay Scanlon 10 per cent of all her film earnings in return for his securing a film contract for her. The majority in affirming the award wrote no opinion.

Justices Francis Martin and Edward Glennon in a sharply worded dissenting opinion cited the fact that the finding for the plaintiff was tantamount to granting him 10 per cent of Miss Henie's film earnings for her entire life. This was so, it stated, because a ruling upholding the contract would be binding on all future disputes. The dissenting opinion stated that the verdict was contrary to the weight of evidence because the Justices felt that if there had been a contract Mr. Scanlan, "a man of broad experience, naturally familiar with contracts, would have reduced it to writing."

U. S. Takes Over German Companies

Moving to extend his control over enemy-owned business, Alien Property Custodian Leo T. Crowley announced in Washington this week that he has taken over General Dyestuff Corporation of New York, selling agency for General Aniline and Film Corporation, and Siemens, Inc., United States representative of Siemens and Halske, A. G., of Germany, one of the largest electrical and radio equipment manufacturers in the world. Agfa-Ansco is a division of General Aniline and Film.

To Resume Michigan Rental Tax Hearings

Hearings are being resumed by the Michigan State Tax Administration on the current case against Allied Films Exchange, to collect a three per cent tax on all film rentals. The tax would be imposed as a "use tax," adopted in place of the general state sales tax.

Dismiss BMI Action

Federal Judge John Bright in New York this week ruled that a similarity in two songs to constitute plagiarism must not be that of a bar or two but such that "the general public will detect the same air in the new arrangement," in an opinion which dismissed after trial the song piracy suit of Ira B. Arnstein against Broadcast Music Inc., George Fragos, Jack Baker and Dick Gasparre. Mr. Arnstein who previously had brought and lost some half dozen other plagiarism actions charged the infringement of nine of his songs in BMI's most popular numbers including "I Hear a Rhapsody" and "Frenesi."

Sue WOR Over Scripts

WOR Program Service, Inc., was named defendant last week in a suit for $50,000 damages filed in the N. Y. Supreme Court by Billy King, writer of radio programs. Mr. King claims to have left ten radio scripts with WOR in May, 1941, with the understanding that they were to be examined and then returned to him. Ten more were left in September, 1941, under the title "Harlem News Comedy Scripts" for retyping, according to the complaint. The suit seeks $50,000 damages because WOR, it is claimed, refused to return any of the scripts.

The Pied Piper

About People in Wartime

The experiences of an Englishman whose fishing holiday in the south of France is interrupted by the fall of that nation's army in 1940 are told here in terms of people with that power which, Hollywood is now learning, surpasses that of melodramas which dramatize the war itself rather than the human characters caught up in its effects.

There is much of humor in the story, and also much of stress, each gaining strength from the simplicity with which the actuality of war, including some death, is presented on the screen.

Produced and written for the screen by Nunnally Johnson from the best-seller of the same name by Nevil Shute, the film is a sample of that technique of understatement manifested in the same studio's "How Green Was My Valley". Direction by Irving Pichel is of a kind to conceal all evidence of effort and thus to impart realism and credibility to all that each character does and says.

Monty Woolley portrays with assurance the Englishman who, deciding his place is at home now that England is threatened with invasion, sets out for the Paris that is falling, taking with him two children he has promised to safeguard on their way there. Other children join him at various points of his difficult trip. Finally on the point of escaping by a hired boat, the party is apprehended by Nazis who accuse him of espionage. The circumstances of his detention and the means by which he is enabled to continue his journey are matters not to be revealed in synopsis.

The picture depicts the ruthlessness of the Nazis in terms of deeds rather than words, although it uses those also, and it places in contrast the merits of the democracies, likewise without shouting. There is no heckling, gesturing nor preaching, but there is demonstration in abundance, carrying conviction beyond phrasing.

Previewed at the studio to a press audience which pronounced it a success on all points.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Footlight Serenade

(20th Century-Fox, 1942-43)

Musical Comedy

This is one of those strikes across the heart of the plate that not even the bleacherites find fault with.

It's got song, dance and humor in a blending and routining that makes each profit the other.

It's got Betty Grable dancing and singing, John Payne singing and boxing, Victor Mature boxing and bombasting, Cobina Wright, Jr., singing and acting, and Phil Silvers displaying at last upon the screen in full his talent for comedy.

It's got a story about show business which is not like all the other stories about show business, nor all the other stories, and it's got a pace that never slackens for as much as the drawing of a long breath.

It's about a pugilist who is starred in a musical show and uses his influence to bring about stardom for a showgirl he's in love with, without knowing she's married to a fellow member of the company. Most of the things which might be expected to happen under those circumstances don't happen, but some unexpected ones do.

Five musical numbers by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger amply display the abilities of Miss Grable and the others in that field.

Gregory Ratoff's direction sets a brisk pace in the opening shot and never lets down.

Five writers share credit for the job, which reflects enough for all. They are Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Lynn Starling, for the script, Fidel LeBaron and Kenneth Earl for the story.

William LeBaron produced, the result rating among his all time bests.

Atlantic Convoy

War Thriller

This is a tight little drama engrossing to the end but suffering from a lack of money and care in production. Scenes are slurred over, which demand some focus. Much of the photography is properly in low key but at times this is overdone. On the other side of the ledger, is a lasting tension and a reality of portrayal, most effective for a morale picture.

John Beal is a former marine, hidden in Iceland, as weather observer, after discharge from the corps in the States for treason. He has an assumed name. Because German submarines sink ships regularly, and Beal knows the weather so thoroughly, marine fliers, led by Bruce Bennett, suspect him, especially after he allows some knowledge of flying, and then pilots an amphibian safely home. Bennett forwards Beal's fingerprints to Washington.

The drama tightens with the harboring of English refugee children, and the death of one because serum which would have saved him went down in a convoy. One of those English, a cabin boy, is a German spy. When Bennett, his suspicions about Beal confirmed, pursues him, cabin boy Clifford Severn hides Beal in a harbor fishing boat which has maintained contact with the submarine. Captain of the boat is the man who swindled Beal out of confidential remote control plans, caused his discharge for treason. He, Severn, and the submarine captain plan a coup, the sinking of an Allied munitions ship nearby, by ramming it with the fishing boat loaded with dynamite. The boat will be remotely controlled, with Beal's aid. Beal rigs up the device; but then an Allied plane begins bombing the boat. Beal captures the captain and is exonerated upon return to harbor. There is a slight love story between Beal and the nurse in charge of the English children, Virginia Field.

Colbert Clark produced from an original screen play by Robert Lee Johnson. Direction is by Lew Landers, who has shown skill in the maintenance of pace and mood in these Columbia war thrillers. The cast is restrained and convincing.

The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe

Costume Drama

The loves of Edgar Allan Poe, according to this latest attempt to portray a literary legend on the screen were, first, Edgar Allan Poe, and then, in chronological order, Mrs. Allan, Elmira Royster, Virginia Clem, the copyright law and strong drink. None of these ever manages to capture the sympathy or sustained interest of the audience.

It is not that Poe's life was without drama, but such of it as scenarists Sam Hoffenstein and Tom Reed have seen fit to use fails to achieve any vital or coherent impression other than that of delicate respect for the mores of a century ago. Poe's driving ambition, his rebellious nature and lack of responsibility are all suggested, but the causes for his uphappiness are shown as an unreasonable foster-father, adherence to principle and cruel fate in the lingering illness of Virginia—referred to in the film as his "childlike" wife.

The cast, including John Shepperd as Poe, and Linda Darnell as Virginia, is beautifully costumed and cannot be blamed for failure to make the stilted dialogue significant. Director Harry Lachman, too, is limited by the script.

As the "loves" of any lesser-known individual, the story would not have been considered screen material, and the addition of some authenticity in lines from "The Raven" and "Annabel Lee," intoned at the climaxes, will not greatly increase the audiences's appreciation.

Los Angeles Spy Hunt

This is Fox's second wartime melodrama about Jap spies. It follows "Secret Agent of Japan," also with Preston Foster, which appeared in March. Extra time has not improved the treatment of this theme. The picture has sales points in its direct references to the enemy and the explanation of mass evacuation of Japanese should interest the Pacific states.

Preston Foster plays a detective in Los Angeles' Little Tokyo, who senses schemes afoot in November, 1941. His clues lead to Takimura (Harold Huber), an importer who has just returned from Tokyo to head the coast spying. Foster suspects a secret radio station. But influential Japanese contrive his transfer to another precinct on the eve of Pearl Harbor.

Foster's friend and informant is killed and the detective lured to the home of Teru, slinky spy. She drugs him, then is shot by her confederates. Foster is charged with the murder. Maris Hanover, a female radio commentator, played by Brenda Joyce, aids his escape from jail and lures the spies to his hideaway at the city morgue. They are trapped by the police, after a confession, and all ends well with hero and heroine, as an epilogue shows the evacuation of Japanese and Nisei from the coastal areas.

There is a framework of fast action in George Bricker's screenplay. But it is lost under snail-pace dialogue and excessive detail. Otto Brower directed this Bryan Foy production.

Previewed to the trade press at New York. They fidgeted at many of the speeches and devices used to carry the story.—JOHN STUART, JR.

Bullets for Bandits

(Columbia)

Western

Bill Elliott, the "Wild Bill Hickok" of the Columbia western series, is faced with an unusual predicament here. A party to a gun fight in a saloon, he believes himself the killer, in self-defense, of a renegade. His physical similarity to the renegade causes him to masquerade as that unworthy to help out the renegade's mother in her dispute with some homesteaders.

It is average western fare, highlighted by a couple of ding-dong fist fights and a gun battle to climax the proceedings. Sharing honors with Elliott is Tex Ritter, who portrays a singing sheriff. When he isn't strumming his guitar and singing, Ritter teams up with "Wild Bill" to rid the countryside of "Clem Jeeter," played by Ralph Theodore, the unscrupulous and self-appointed ruler of the territory.

Other players are Frank Mitchell, who is the comedy relief, and Dorothy Short, for the romantic angle. Leon Barsha produced, and Wallace W. Fox directed the picture.

Seen at the Central theatre, New York, where the film seemed to please the patrons.—P. C. MOONEY, JR.

Release date, Feb. 12, 1942. Running time, 55 minutes. PCA No. 7732. General audience classification.

A-Haunting We Will Go

(20th Century-Fox, 1942-43)

Laurel and Hardy

When a showman has announced to his customers that this brings Stanley Laurel and Oliver Hardy around again he will have done about all there is to do.

The picture places the comedians in distress as stooges in the vaudeville act of Dante, the magician, played by himself, after they have hired out to accompany the cadaver on a train to the scene of burial without knowing that the supposed corpse is a live gangster. The melodramatic side, in common with the comedy phases of the story, is simplified to a degree defeating interest, and the whole affair is thwarted, save perhaps for the very young and the comedians' most loyal fans, by resort to camera tricks and double exposures in pursuit of laughs.

Sol M. Wurtzel is listed as producer, Alfred Werker as director and Lou Breslow as screenplaywright, using a story by himself and Stanley Raub.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, on a Thursday evening to a mainly adult audienee which manifested only minor symptoms of amusement and some of disappointment.—W.R.W.

Men of Texas

(Universal)

Lone Star Saga

Texas in the days of the Reconstruction, when misled patriots attempted to set up again their own republic, is the locale of "Men of Texas," a stirring saga of those torn days. Delivering a patriotic message as timely now as then, the picture treats of the intense loyalty of the people to that State as being finally superseded by their loyalty to the United States as a whole.

Robert Stack, as a Northern newspaperman sent to cover the story of the Reconstruction; Brod Crawford, as the guerilla leader whose patriotism turns to avarice as he plunders the countryside; Anne Gwynne, as the daughter of a Confederate hero, with whom the reporter falls in love; Jackie Cooper, as her brother who finally realizes the real purpose of the gang chief; Leo Carrillo, as a photographer, head a strong cast, whose support principally consists of Ralph Bellamy, Jane Darwell, John Litel and William Farnum.

A natural for theatres whose patrons go for entertainment dealing with the wide open spaces, the film has characteristics which tend to create an interest of wider scope.

George Waggner produced the picture, which Ray Enright directed from an original screenplay by Harold Shumate.

This Is The Enemy

(Artkino)

Documentary Dramas

The primary interest in this is intensely topical. It also has in full the seriousness and the parochial quality characteristic of Soviet pictures.

The film is staccato because it is deliberately episodic. Each of its six parts is a short story about the war, filmed near the fronts by Moscow and Leningrad studios. Its billing depends greatly upon what emphasis is placed on the fact that it is the first feature from Russia made during the war.

The episodes have reality but the lighting is poor and the print viewed was not technically good. With all their attention to detail the Russians slipped in several scenes by depicting the swastika on German soldiers' armbands in counter-clockwise rotation.

Brutal German soldiers in Poland shoot peasants for refusing milk. One survivor joins the Russian border guards and is revenged. A Russian soldier, a Russian nurse and a wounded German soldier lie in a shell hole. The German returns evil for good and he is killed by the vigilant Russian. A Jugoslav boy and girl kill two lewd German soldiers. Thereupon 100 hostages are ordered to dig their own graves, but they attack the soldiers and join the Chetnik irregulars. A German parachutist-saboteur visits his former nurse in Leningrad. He is captured and is most chagrined because a woman and a boy did it.

The film was produced by Lenfilm Studios, Leningrad; Mosfilm Studios, Moscow. English titles are by Charles Clement.

A sympathetic New York audience in a projection room applauded.—F. E. S.

Take My Life

(Toddy-Consolidated)

Negro Action Picture

The Harlem "Tuff Kids," Negro counterparts of the Dead End gang, are presented by Toddy-Consolidated Pictures in a drama hinging on petty thievery and its often drastic consequences. Produced on a relatively modest budget, it manages to sustain suspense through most episodes and the Tuff Kids contribute humorous bits.

The young gang becomes involved in petty thievery under the tutelage of a sharpster, played by Robert Webb. Johnny, their leader and young brother of Dr. Thurman (Monte Hawley), is involved in a "big job" with Webb. A watchman is killed and the boy is convicted of murder and sent to the death house.

The remaining youngsters, Dr. Thurman and his fiancee, a pretty nurse, played by Jeni Le Gon, search desperately for the real murderer. As the kids pursue him Webb's car crashes. Dr. Thurman performs a skillful operation, in the knowledge that the sharpie can save his brother from the chair. With the help of a sparking radio-therapy machine he wrings a confession from the killer and the young boy is saved in the nick of time. It is a harrowing sequence. The picture closes with the Tuff Kids in uniform, determined to atone for their delinquency by loyal service in the Army.

The story by Billie Myers is uneven but it is aided by the acting and Leo Popkin's direction. Clifford Sanforth produced. It is a picture which would appeal principally to Negro audiences.

Reviewed at the Apollo theatre, in New York's Harlem, where a sparse late matinee audience appeared to follow the action with interest, and a number of laughs.—J. S., Jr.

Release date, July 3, 1942. Running time, 77 minutes. General audience classification.

Stage Coach Buckaroo

(Universal)

Golddust on the Stage

The new Johnny Mack Brown western combines singing, humour and action—with comedy getting the best audience response. The exploits of the hero are subordinated to the antics of Fuzzy Knight and the plot is thereby slowed, at times to a full stop.

Brown rides into town at the reins of a stage carrying a wounded man, a frightened girl and no cargo. The girl is a surprise visitor to the town gambler, her father, and is taken into the house of the Dentons, who run the stage. From here until the father is exposed as the leader of the coach robbers, securing information from his unwitting daughter, the story shifts from saloon to piano and gets nowhere. In the final chase, when Brown rides the stage but the girls take the gold in a farm wagon, there is some fine riding, quick shooting and the villains are brought to justice, but even the action fans seemed to prefer the earlier sequences when Knight was crowned with a hornet's nest or lost his girdle posing as a woman passenger on the coach.

Ray Taylor directed the film from a screen play by Al Martin. Wili Cowan was associate producer.

Seen at the New York Theatre where the story never seemed to take hold.—E. A. C.

Release date, Feb. 13, 1942. Running time, 58 minutes. General audience classification.

Clem ..... Fuzzy Knight

Honolulu Lu

(Columbia)

Lupe Entertains

In between chores as the "Mexican Spitfire," Lupe Velez took time out for a song and hula as "Miss Honolulu" and seemed to enjoy it. There are some malicious impersonations, too—of Marlene Dietrich and Katharine Hepburn—which pleased the customers.

The story itself is a bit silly. Lupe descends upon Hawaii—before Pearl Harbor—with her uncle, who poses as nobility in the hope of snaring a dowager. The girl is fed up with the impersonation, however, and decides to earn an honest living in a burlesque show. There she is an immediate sensation with the Navy and becomes their choice for "Miss Honolulu." The Navy puts it over, in spite of stiff society opposition, while the uncle and his prospective bride are both revealed as imposters.

Director Charles Barton allowed the Velez vitality to pace the picture, which was as it should be.

Seen at the Loew's 175th Street Theatre, where a full house sat back and waited for "Screeno."—E. A. C.

regular rounds a warden makes in preparation for an emergency, the film portrays his activities when bombs fall, calling out rescue squads, supervising operations at the local shelter. The ten-minute subject was produced under the supervision of Mervyn LeRoy with the cooperation of members of the OCD.

"Vigilance" is a one-and-a-half-minute trailer, prepared for distribution in the four large West Coast cities of Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The subject is the menace of forest fires to the materials needed for war production, and the necessity of watchfulness on the part of every individual.

The one-and-a-half-minute recruiting trailer for the Coast Guard, illustrating the activities of that branch of the service, is currently being released in the nation's theatres.

Joseph Fields and Jerry Chodorov, who based their stage play of like title on a series of stories by Ruth McKenney, also wrote the script for the picture, following the stage version closely save for a bit of cleansing of lines and situations. It's about two small-town girls who go to New York and take up residence in an apartment recently vacated by a girl who had many and many a caller, casual and otherwise, of male persuasion. They continue to drop around, with comic consequences.

Daughter of an actress who doesn't choose to admit her age, having a matrimonial venture coming up, she pretends to be a youngster of twelve. But the daughter has matrimonial intentions of her own which complicate this arrangement. Affairs work out in such manner that both mother and daughter get their men.

BLONDIE FOR VICTORY (Columbia)

Comedy Series

PRODUCER: Robert Sparks. Directed by Frank R. Strayer.

PLAYERS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Daisy, Majelle White, Stuart Erwin, Jonathan Hale, Danny Mummert.

SYNOPSIS

The latest in the "Blondie" series sees the lady of the house in a defense project, the Housewives of America. SABOTAGE SQUAD (Columbia)

Spy Drama

PRODUCER: Jack Fier. Directed by Lew Landers.

SYNOPSIS

This is a saboteur hunt, with the only clue a condor and dove medal known to be carried by the leader. Pursuing him are two petty thieves and a police lieutenant. The story carries them from jail to a barber shop and a soap factory, key points in the operations of the sabotage ring. The spy is finally caught at the cost of the life of two in pursuit.

WAKE ISLAND (Paramount)

War Melodrama

PRODUCER: Joseph Sistrom. Directed by John Farrow.

PLAYERS: Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, Albert Dekker, Macdonald Carey.

SYNOPSIS

The title card of this will say "story by the U. S. Marine Corps." The story is that which they wrote in terms of bullets and blood on Wake Island from the beginning of its bombing by the Japanese to its capture by the enemy. Military advisers have been in constant touch with proceedings during the filming of the picture and a high degree of authenticity is to be expected.

SUBMARINE ALERT (Paramount)

War Melodrama

PRODUCERS: William Pine and William Thomas. Directed by Frank McDonald.

PLAYERS: Richard Arlen, Wendy Barrie, Roger Pryor, Nils Asther, Patsy Nash, John Miljan.

SYNOPSIS

Producers Pine and Thomas are not airing in overdetail the plot of this number in their sequence of war-slanted melodramas, due to the widespread search for plot kinks of this variety at the moment. It follows, however, in the tradition of "Torpedo Boat" and "Forced Landing," which tells about enough for showmanly needs.

PRODUCT "SHORTAGE"

MARKED concern over the maintenance of an adequate flow of product to serve the screens is to be observed in various sectors of exhibition. That concern is not to be justified in terms of the total output of the studios, but may perchance be found warranted by the conditions of availability, as they have been, and as they may yet continue unless some effective attentions are applied.

For the larger situations in communities where the audience of a picture is in a practical sense limited only by its drawing power—exemplified most conspicuously by the Music Hall in New York—there is no large problem of product flow. In varying degree of accuracy this is true of a preponderance of metropolitan theatres, all over the map. Large populations encourage extended runs so that the playing time can be covered by relatively few releases.

But in the lesser situations and areas of limited tributary population the demand for change of bill is urgent, immediate. There are some thousands of theatres where the same audience, in effect, must be entertained every week, often twice a week.

JUST now comes to mind a certain little quality theatre in a mountain resort town. The potential audience is limited to the several hundred regular visitors and patrons of the hotels and clubs of the immediate region. It is the experience of this theatre that a strong attraction draws 65 per cent of its attendance on the opening night, 35 per cent the next night; and, as a recent experiment with a forced third day showed, a substantial zero per cent thereafter. The best picture on earth can do no business in that house after the second day. That was, incidentally, proved by the best box office picture on earth, so far.

The exhibitor-owner of that mountain town house has a real product problem. He does business annually with companies A, C and F. The seasonal conditions and his limited playing time do not permit other large contracts. He does find, however, that he has to play too many weak productions, while there are more than enough superior productions in the output of companies B, D, E, and maybe G, to fill the gaps in his quality program. Those pictures, however, are not available to him on any terms because he is not able to buy importantly large blocks of their material and they will accept no spot business from him. The result is that he does not get the material and B, D, E and G get no revenues from that town.

That situation is in some respects rather special, but its significant aspects are representative of conditions which in varying degrees affect many theatres, important in national totals.

There are enough competent pictures to serve all of the screens if a method of sales and distribution can be evolved to deliver them where they are needed, and where they can work.

The problem is as confused as it has been from the beginning and those days when the exhibitor bought programs and franchises. Much of the selling in a large sense continues to be franchise selling. The exhibitor's customers buy pictures.

AND while one turns over these eternal problems, a new essay at a plan for control of distribution and related trade practices, termed the Unity Plan, has been placed before the Department of Justice for consideration.

This is the newest version of the much written and rewritten Unity Plan of the many conferences of representatives of the many and several parties at interest. This one is said to be the last and final rewrite by the lawyers.

For reasons not entirely clear to a great many of the showmen who may expect to be governed by this document, should it get official government and court approvals, the content, until this week, had been held a secret. That came about through the acquiescence of the drafting committee to the demand of one member. Others had suggested that the exhibitors might well be informed of the document sent to Washington, but were over-ruled. Meanwhile, copies of the document were in the hands of sales executives in several regions. At reluctant last, came release late this week.

FOR EXPORT

MR. BOSLEY CROWTHER seems to have had a time of it trying to answer a request from Pearl S. Buck, novelist and president of the East and West Association, for a list of motion pictures to be recommended "to audiences across the Pacific as being really representative of American life". He found some, but not so many; which is not surprising.

Miss Buck is quoted: "Gangster pictures, pictures full of Hollywood ideas of luxury, slapstick comedies and Westerns have done their share to puzzle the East."

It is inevitable that the screen should be found to give its great domestic audience shows built on the appeal of the spectacular, the unusual, exotic. That is the stuff of which shows are made.

The screen of America is not introspective. The American is not typically an introvert. The business of the motion picture has been to show us what we like, not what we are like. We probably know as much about that as we can use, anyway.

A very great deal of what other lands perhaps would like to know about us and our lives are to us utter commonplaces, not the stuff of the thrills, mysteries and amazements we want to buy at the box office.

The war causes to be served, and among them those in which Miss Buck is most interested, create demand for pictures to educate various peoples overseas in the nature and spirit of America. That is a special job for special audiences—and export.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Bioff Sings?

UNHANDCUFFED, carrying a portfolio and accompanied by several deputy sheriffs, Willie Bioff, convicted extortioner, has been seen entering and leaving the federal courthouse building in New York a dozen times in the past few months. Bioff, who was presumably sent to Leavenworth with George E. Browne as a fellow prisoner, has been kept in the federal pen in New York close to the federal grand jury investigating the disposition of IATSE funds, it is reliably reported.

According to informed reports, the former "labor leader" is engaged in disclosing his connections with higher-ups in the gangster world in response to the skillful questioning of U. S. Attorney Matthias F. Correa, the prosecutor who secured Bioff's conviction. Questioned frequently by newspaper reporters as to the reason for Bioff's presence in the federal building, Mr. Correa has steadfastly refused to comment "as a matter of policy."

What is known is that Mr. Correa has refused to allow the film extortion case to die, has kept a federal grand jury sitting on the matter for the seven months since Browne and Bioff's conviction, and has called Chicago labor leaders before it. Bioff is talking, it is said, in an effort to win a reduction of his present 10-year sentence.

Quicker Censors

MOTION pictures entering or leaving the country will pass through censorship and customs with a minimum of delay, under new arrangements worked out between Office of Censorship boards of review and the customs bureau, it was learned this week.

Under the wartime rule pictures are examined by the review boards to see that no military information of value to the enemy leaves the country and that no enemy propaganda enters. The Bureau of Customs retains its normal work of assessing and collecting duties and guarding against the entry of immoral films.

To clear films rapidly, the customs service has arranged to measure films for duty and inspect them for moral content simultaneously with their inspection by the boards of review. A customs representative will be assigned to boards at New York, Los Angeles and Rochester.

No Tax for Uniforms

SOLDIERS and sailors will soon be exempted from paying back part of their salary in federal admission taxes at post theatres. The House of Representatives Wednesday approved legislation lifting the tax on theatres and other amusements operated at U. S. Army and Navy posts and stations. The bill, originally suggested by the War Department, went to the White House for President Roosevelt's approval. He was expected to sign it immediately.

New Tax Bill

A SIX-billion dollar tax bill, which would make every employer in the motion picture industry a tax collector, was before the House of Representatives this week for quick passage and transmission to the Senate, where the Finance Committee will wrestle with the measure while Congress takes a brief "fence-building" vacation.

Featuring the bill was an increase from 10 to 15 per cent in the rate on unexposed motion picture and other photographic film and an increase from 10 to 25 per cent on cameras weighing not more than four pounds exclusive of lens and accessories, and lenses, photographic apparatus and equipment.

In dealing with income taxes the Ways and Means Committee reduces the personal exemption and increased the rates, and provided that beginning January 1st, next, employers are to withhold five per cent of each employee's pay, after allowance for marital status and dependents.

The corporation and excess profits taxes also are revised upward, to an extent which is expected to lead the Senate Finance Committee to attempt to rewrite that section of the bill.

No mention is made in the measure of any change in the admission tax, but all branches of the industry will be affected by other levies, including a change in the tax on long-distance telephone calls from five cents for each 50 cents or fraction thereof of the charge to a flat 20 per cent; an increase from six to 10 per cent in the tax on local telephone service; an increase from five to 10 per cent in the tax on railroad and other passage tickets, pullman service, etc., and a new tax of five per cent on freight and express shipments.

The tax on coin-operated amusement devices is to be expanded to take in juke-boxes, but the tax on electric signs is to be abolished because of its low return.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal Pictures, in a statement issued on the eve of Congressional action to further increase taxes on corporations, said there was less danger of creating war millionaires than of impairing the ability of industry to cope with post-war problems under the present tax proposals. Mr. Cowdin, who is also chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers' committee on government finance, described as "absurd and impossible" charges that war manufacturing corporations were making "exorbitant and unconscionable profits."

Genius Trouble

RKO RADIO, which had ousted Orson Welles attaches from its studio a week previously, suspended Pare Lorenz on Monday "because of technical and screenplay difficulties."

Mr. Lorenz had been at work about six months on a film of his own devising known as "Name, Age and Occupation," roaming the continent most of this time, obtaining background material and factual incidents, and returning only recently to the studio to shoot additional footage.

Mr. Lorenz, like Mr. Welles, was given an RKO Radio contract during the regime of George Schaefer as president and Joseph I. Breen as production manager.

It was learned from the studio that Mr. Lorenz' $400,000 budget was exhausted and that he had estimated another $400,000 was needed to complete the film. RKO indicated it had hoped he would return and finish the picture for less money.

Million to Miniver

NICHOLAS M. SCHENCK, president of Loew's; William F. Rodgers, its general sales manager; William Wyler, director; Walter Pidgeon, actor; Greer Garson, actress; Jan Struther, novelist; other MGM executives and members of the New York daily press were to appear on Friday noon, at the Radio City Music Hall studio-office of Gus Eyssell, its managing director, for lunch, and for special plaques.

For MGM's "Mrs. Miniver" on Thursday began its seventh week at that theatre. It is the first film to do so. It is the first picture to gross over $100,000 a week for six weeks.

Miss Garson and Mr. Pidgeon are the film's co-stars; Miss Struther is the author; Mr. Wyler, the director.

Wednesday night it was estimated the picture had been seen at the house by 918,579. MGM said this number represented more people than had ever attended "any motion picture in any theatre in the world." In the sixth week 146,125 persons paid $101,000 to see it.

It added the Hollywood premiere, at the Carthay Circle Theatre, next Wednesday, would be "on an unprecedented scale," as a benefit for the Volunteer Army Canteen Service, and under direct charge of Mrs. Louis B. Mayer.

The Music Hall expected a million persons would have seen the picture before the weekend.

Films and Pretzels

MOTION pictures are supplanting live entertainment in a Philadelphia night club. The floor show this week gave way to 16 mm. films at the Schwartzwald Inn, neighborhood nightspot in the Frankford section. Herman and Fritz Trautz, proprietors of the experiment in combining screen and rathskeller, say the programs will include a full length feature, short subjects, news and comedy reels. The screen show will be presented twice nightly, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

In the Flesh

ARTHUR HORNBLOW'S comment, three weeks ago in New York, that perhaps pictures made without sets, would be better, may soon be tested. The MGM producer was referring to work under the War Production Board order limiting studio expenditure to $5,000 per set.

That producers are not only using less material, and old material, for sets, but also dropping sets for the "real thing," was apparent in New York this week. In that area, director Alfred Hitchcock not only filmed street scenes for his Jack Skirball production, "Shadow of a Doubt," he also hired slum children to play baseball in a background shot.

His camera prowls led him to back alleys near the financial district, Newark tenements and the Jersey meadows where he used the Pulaski Skyway for background by special permission of its guardians, the U. S. Army.

Most of the scenes, involving the Hitchcock chase, were photographed three times, using doubles in small, medium and large sizes. The picture has not yet been cast.

To a New York newspaper reporter, he asserted:

"If you can find the right atmosphere somewhere and film it, why build a set?"

Also travelers to New York this week from the Coast, for location shots on East 52nd Street, were Twentieth Century-Fox's director Irving Pichel, actor Monty Woolley and actress Ida Lupino for "Light of Heart."

Mr. Hitchcock this week carried his cinema technique to Life magazine with a scenario, "Have You Heard," on wartime rumors. It was suggested by Stephen Early, the President's secretary, photographed at Hollywood by Eliot Elisofon under the Hitchcock direction. "A simple sexless story," Life's caption labeled the six-page picture layout, "it shows how patriotic but talkative Americans pass on information, true or false, until finally deadly damage is done." In picture sequence it traces a rumor's spread from a church sermon, through bar and beauty parlor to the sinking of a ship.

Color Spreads

ALREADY 50 per cent ahead of the calendar year 1941 in its use of color, with 27 features filmed, filming or announced by producers for 1942 as of a fortnight back (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 4, Page 12), Hollywood this week announced two more Technicolor productions. Warners on Monday specified color for "This Is the Army," from the Irving Berlin musical, and Columbia announced color for "The Gibson Girl," starring Ginger Rogers.

Easing the Burden

INDIANA exhibitor members of the ATO of Indiana, at their mid-summer convention at Lake Wawasee were cheered by news of a decision reached by the state's attorney general to exempt them from paying the state gross income tax on the full receipts from percentage pictures. It was learned that taxes amounting to $250,000 would be rebated to Indiana theatremen, but that in future, distributors would have to make joint returns with exhibitors to avoid the levy. Jacob Weiss, attorney, who made the fight for the showmen, contended that in playing such pictures exhibitors acted only as "agents."

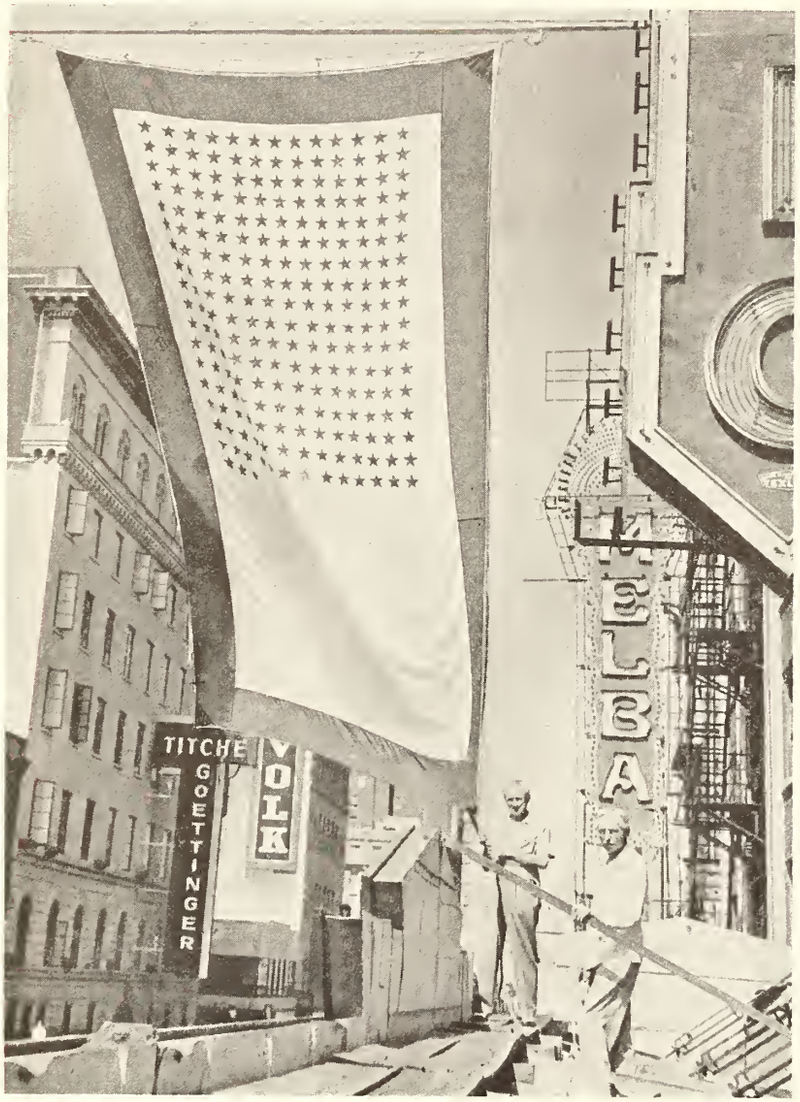
M. A. Rosenberg, president of national Allied, who made his first address to Indiana exhibitors, talked on high film rentals during Thursday's session. Abram Myers, general counsel of Allied, discussed new film buying methods.

Opening day of the convention was devoted to MGM's Exhibitor Forum. For other convention news, see page 32.

Willkie War Tour

WENDELL WILLKIE, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox, ex-Republican presidential nominee, and defense counsel for the motion picture industry when it faced Senate charges of "war mongering," may soon be off to the fighting fronts for a first-hand inspection of the war, it was reported in New York this week. Australia, China, Russia and other United Nations may be visited by him. Mr. Willkie has been active in behalf of several war relief groups. If official permission and transportation is secured for the tour he will be the second 20th Century-Fox emissary to fighting fronts. Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck recently returned from a mission to London in behalf of the Signal Corps motion picture program. A Chungking dispatch to the United Press said that the Chinese would welcome a Willkie visit. Said the newspaper Ta Kung Pao, it would "signify that Americans both inside and outside the Government are concerned with China's welfare."

Called to Arms



ADD industry executives "actively" in the war: Hal Roach. Next Saturday, the United Artists producer reports to Fort MacArthur, California, as a major in the Signal Corps. From there, he will proceed to the Corp's Photographic Center, Astoria, New York City.

Mr. Roach's reserve commission is 18 years old. He received it for services in the last war.

Production at his studio continues under C. W. Thornton. Fred Guiol has charge of the "Streamliners."

STUDIOS TURN TO RED ARMY FOR WAR AND HERO THEMES

At Least a Dozen Titles Now in Work Concern Russia's Effort in War

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Hollywood is turning an attentive eye toward Soviet Russia in its quest for new and dramatic story themes and backgrounds.

The Red army and the fierce resistance of the Russian people in their struggles against Nazi invaders have attracted the attention of at least four of the major studios and half a dozen of the top independents have pictures about the Russian front in the offing.

At least a dozen titles now on future production lists at the studios are about the Soviet Republic and its war effort. Several of Hollywood's top producers are speaking enthusiastically these days about the dramatic possibilities of Russian stories or backgrounds which they have under contemplation. Story departments have paid out large sums for titles or scenarios on Russia.

In fact, coast observers report, the new selling season will not be long underway before a new cycle of pictures about Russia will reach theatre screens in sequel to recent productions on Britain, China, the fighting French and other United nations. Kharkov, Sevastopol and Moscow appear likely to compete with the Burma Road, Britain's skies, and Wake Island as settings for screen war drama.

Metro in Lead with Three Pictures Set in Russia

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is in the fore of the new interest in Russia with at least three pictures on the Soviets soon to be in work. Not since 1926, when Cecil B. De Mille made "The Volga Boatman," has there been such serious interest in Russia. The new crop of pictures will steer far away from the satire of "Madame X," and "Ninotchka's" gay approach to the Soviet system.

Arthur Hornblow will lead the Metro Russian themes with "Song of the Red Army," an original story now being written under Mr. Hornblow's supervision. In New York two weeks ago he said that the picture would be definitely a "big" production with top casting and budget.

"It will be a vigorous picture, full of color," he said, against a canvas of the Russian peasant's battle against the Nazis and the resistance of the Cossacks in the Ukraine.

"Scorched Earth," another MGM original, will be produced by Joseph Pasternak. Leo Mittler, Victor Trivas and Guy Ender are working on the story. A third, untitled picture, will be set among the winter-bound guerilla fighters.

Mr. Pasternak described "Scorched Earth" as the story of a band of Ukrainian musicians who drop their instruments for guns, burn their town and homes and go forth against the Nazis. "It is the story of all freedom-loving people," he said.

Warners Brothers was one of the first producers to swing to the Russian motif with the purchase of "Mission to Moscow," the book by Joseph E. Davies, former U. S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union. It will be a top picture on the Warner 1942-43 schedule and one of the most important on the Russian theme. Walter Huston has been talked of for the lead. The company is hopeful of repeating the success of its previous ambassadorial scenario, "My Four Years in Germany," produced in 1918 from the diary of Ambassador James W. Gerard.

Erskine Caldwell has been signed to prepare the screenplay.

Twentieth Century-Fox Plans Two with Soviet Theme

Twentieth Century-Fox is also preparing two or more pictures about Russia. Last week it announced the purchase of "Road to Moscow," a new screenplay by Roland Dorgles. It too is about guerilla fighters behind the German lines.

"The Russian Marines," a story of the resistance of the Red Navy and land forces in the Crimea and along the shores of the Black Sea is also in preparation at 20th-Fox. Boris Morros will produce in collaboration with S. P. Eagle. The script is by Walter Reisch.

The Westwood studio, headed by Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, is also reported considering a revision of "Ski Patrol," a story of the Russo-Finnish war which it purchased in 1941, then shelved. Plans are under consideration to place the ski troop action on the Nazi-Soviet front.

Colonel Zanuck is reported to have visited Moscow recently on a mission for the Army Signal Corps.

Columbia's B. P. Schulberg also has a Soviet locale under consideration. He plans to make "Caviar for the General" from a play by Lou Meltzer. Reportedly, he would like to cast Greta Garbo in the role of the clever Russian woman who outsmarts a Nazi general and sacrifices herself for the Russian cause and her guerilla lover. He promises an honest picture of Soviet life wth the comment: "If we are going to show the Russians fighting to preserve their way of life we must show what kind of life they consider worth preserving."

The picture will have none of the satiric quality of his previous screen mention of Russia, "He Stayed for Breakfast."

MGM already has taken steps to soften the sting of one of its earlier satires on Russia, "Madame X." Harry Kurnitz, who wrote the original foreword, is now at work on a new introduction to explain that the picture's satire was all in fun.

The independents are also working on Russian themes. Eugene Frencke was the first producer to acquire remake rights to a Soviet film, when he purchased "The Girl From Leningrad" from Artkino, the Soviet film agency in the U. S. He has completed the shooting script and will start production soon for release through an undisclosed major. Merle Oberon and Claudette Colbert are mentioned as lead possibilities.

United Artists' partner, Sir Alexander Korda, has been discussing a screen version "War and Peace" the Tolstoy classic of the Napoleonic invasion. It is still under consideration and may be made in cooperation with the Soviet Government and its official film agencies. Mr. Korda is said to feel there is as close a parallel between the Russian fight of 1812 and now as there was between Nelson's navy of "Lady Hamilton" and contemporary British sea fighters.

Mr. Korda and Nichola Napoli, president of Artkino, are said in Hollywood to have arranged also the distribution of "Rout of the Nazis" through UA. It is about the resistance of Moscow last winter. Edward G. Robinson may do the narration.

United Artists has signed Gregor Rabinovitch, European producer, to head a unit which will make "Russian Girl," also based on the "Girl from Leningrad" theme.

Samuel Goldwyn may set his next comedy, to star Bob Hope, in a hotel room overlooking Red Square. Titled "They Got Me Covered," it is the tale of a bumbling American correspondent.

UA's next "World in Action" short release will be "Inside Fighting Russia." The subject is reviewed in the Product Digest this week.

Republic's forthcoming "Nazi Busters," by Murray Acosta, will tell of the U. S. Merchant Marine's convoy service to Russia.

Producers Releasing Corporation lists "Miss M. from Moscow" on its schedule for 1942-43. It will be a George Merrick production.

The King Brothers, independents, are also in the Soviet picture race with "Sevastopol" scheduled for early release. It is an original story by Henry Blankfort about the Russian women's role in the war against Germany.

Many Circuits Now Show Russian Films

comes close on the heels of new interest among circuits and independent theatres in native Russian product distributed here by Artkino. That company is now enjoying the best booking boom in its carreer, according to reports. At least three distributor affiliated circuits have booked Artkino pictures into some of their houses.

RKO, Warner and Paramount houses have played "Our Russian Front," in both short and feature versions, "Guerilla Brigade," "Our Russian Front" and are now considering "This Is the Enemy," "Red Tanks," "Defense of Moscow" and other titles newly received from Russia. Audience interest in the pictures is described as good in the circuit offices.

Mr. Napoli has been in Hollywood for the past two months arranging production details for "Girl From Leningrad," now withdrawn from U. S. circulation in its original Russian form. He has also offered extensive background and news material to the studios for use in their forthcoming productions about the Soviet Union.

Other less definite Russian screen prospects include a film version of Erskine Caldwell's forthcoming book, tentatively called "Vengeance of the Earth" and a John Steinbeck story of Russia in sequel to "The Moon Is Down." William Wyler, director of "Mrs. Miniver," also has been reported as expressing interest in a parallel screen study of a Russian family in war time. Paramount may make a ski troop film, "In the Rear of the Enemy."

U.S. AND COURT HOLD FATE OF UNITY SELLING PLAN

Lawyers' Draft specifies Blocks of 13; Identification Clause strengthened

Details of the United Motion Picture Industry's proposed amendments to the selling provisions of the consent decree were revealed Wednesday night.

The drafting committee of distribution and exhibitor association attorneys released the text in which they embodied selling changes recommended on March 3rd by the "unity" organization conferences. Its incorporation in the consent decree as a formal amendment to Sections III-A, IV-A and VII of the decree is contingent upon approval by the Department of Justice and Judge Henry W. Goddard.

The fate of the unity plan still rested in Washington at midweek with Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney in charge of the anti-trust division, and with Department of Justice attorneys. Mr. Arnold and Robert Wright, head of the film unit of the anti-trust division, were still studying the proposed changes.

Five to be Trade Shown In Blocks of 13 Films

Pictures may be sold in blocks up to 13, under the plan, for release on and after September 1st. Five pictures out of each group of five or more shall be trade shown.

The remaining pictures in the blocks are to be identified, the plan specifies, by announcement of star or feature players, or by a brief story outline or by a reference to a play or published book or story at the time the license is concluded. Distributors may make a corrected announcement in advance of release. Trade shown and identified pictures for each block are to be announced in the trade press.

The amendment reiterates the decree's prohibition against conditioning features on short subjects and provides cancellation on moral, religious or racial grounds. It also permits the sale of special pictures and westerns in blocks of six, identified by star.

Redress through arbitration is offered exhibitors who claim that pictures deviate from the advance identification. They may cancel on this ground by letter to the home office within 21 days after the first exchange city run, or 14 days after notice of availability, whichever comes first. If distributors deny the deviation within five days the case goes to arbitration. The arbitrator, if he finds there was such deviation, may void a license, as it applies to the picture at issue. It may not then be included in another block.

The text worked out by the drafting committee embodies in substance all the changes in the decree recommended by the sales plan agreed upon by the Unity committee of the whole on March 3rd. It does not include the cancellation clauses calculated according to revenue, or the conciliation and arbitration changes recommended by the Unity group.

Austin Keough, general counsel of Paramount, was chairman of the drafting committee.

UMPI's Amendments to the Consent Decree

The following are the proposed amendments to Sections III-A, IV-A and VII to the Consent Decree as they were submitted to the Department of Justice by the United Motion Picture Industry, and released to the press late this week:

SECTION III-A

(a) Except as provided hereafter in subdivision (f) no distributor defendant shall offer for license or license a feature motion picture[1] to be released between September 1, 1942 and August 31, 1943[2] for public exhibition within the United States of America, at which an admission fee is to be charged, until the feature has been announced in the manner herein specified as part of a group, or announced as a special feature[3] if such feature has not been announced as part of a group.

(b) The announcement of features shall be by a notice published in a trade publication having general circulation among exhibitors, which shall state the titles of all features tradeshown or to be tradeshown and the identification, as hereinafter provided, of all features to be identified.

(c) No announcement of a group of features shall include more than thirteen features. If announcement is made of a group of more than five features, five of such features shall be announced as tradeshown features and shall be tradeshown as hereinafter provided, and the remaining features shall be announcel as identified features and identified as hereinafter provided; and if the announcement is made of a group of five or less features, or of a special feature, then all such features or such special feature shall be tradeshown.

(d) Each feature announced as a tradeshown feature shall be tradeshown within each exchange district in which such public exhibition is to be held. Every trade showing shall be preceded by a notice published in a trade publication having general circulation among exhibitors in such exchange district which shall state the title of the feature and the date and the time when and the place where it will be tradeshown.

(e) Each feature announced as an identified feature shall be identified (1) by the star to appear in the feature, or (2) by featured players to appear in the feature, or (3) by a brief outline of the story upon which the feature is based, if an original story, or (4) if the feature is based upon, suggested by or adapted from a play or published book or story, by a reference to such play or published book or story. In the event that an identified feature as produced deviates substantially from the identification thereof contained in the original announcement, a distributor defendant may make a corrected announcement of such feature properly identified in the same manner as hereinabove provided for the making of the original announcement and such corrected announcement shall then be deemed to be the announcement thereof with respect to license agreements thereafter entered into.

(f) The provisions of this section shall have no application to Westerns, foreigns and reissues.

SECTION IV-A

With respect to features listed in any announcement or corrected announcement made by a distributor defendant as provided in Section III-A:

(a) 1. Such features may be offered for license or licensed by such distributor defendant to an exhibitor in such number, combination, group or groups, as such distributor defendant may from time to time determine, provided, however, that (1) no distributor defendant shall offer for license or shall license more than thirteen features in a single group; (2) the offer for license or license of one group of features shall not be conditioned upon the licensing of another feature or group of features; (3) no feature announced as a tradeshown feature shall be offered for license or licensed until it shall have been tradeshown; and (4) no feature announced as an identified feature shall be licensed unless identified in the license agreement and such identification shall be the same as contained in the announcement or corrected announcement.

2. If an exhibitor to whom a feature has been licensed by a distributor defendant claims that there is a deviation between such feature and the identification thereof contained in the license agreement, he may, at his election, cancel such feature from the license agreement by giving written notice to such distributor defendant at its Home Office of his election to cancel such feature, together with a statement of his reasons therefor, within twenty-one days after the conclusion of its first public exhibition in the city wherein is located the exchange out of which the exhibitor is served, or within 14 days after the mailing by such distributor defendant of the first notice of availability, whichever period expires sooner. In such event the license in so far as it relates to the exhibition of such feature shall be deemed canceled unless within five days after receipt of such notice the distributor defendant shall have mailed to the exhibitor a notice in writing of its denial of such claim and of its intention to arbitrate the controversy. The power of the arbitrator in deciding such controversy shall be limited to the making of (1) a finding as to whether or not such feature is a substantial deviation[4] from

[1]All terms used in Sections III-A and IV-A hereof shall have the same meaning as in Sections III and IV of the Consent Decree.

[2]Except that in the case of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the provisions of this section shall have application only with respect to features released in the United States between August 1, 1942 and July 31, 1943.

[3]For the purpose of this section a special feature means a feature which for a period of time is exhibited at generally advanced first run admission prices and is licensed under an exhibition contract applicable only thereto, or, a feature distributed by a distributor defendant pursuant to an agreement requiring such feature to be licensed individually by a license applicable only to such feature.

[4]In the case of a substitution of a star for the star, by which a feature is identified in the license agreement, the arbitrator shall find a substantial deviation.

Kuykendall Sees Plan Only As 'First Step'

Edward Kuykendall, national president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in a bulletin to the members on Tuesday told them that while the new UMPI sales plan was some improvement over the consent decree requirements and would "fill out until the rest of the decree terminates next year" they should look ahead to a "permanent and genuine solution" of block booking, picture selection and other trade practices.

Appeasement and extended bargaining between distributors and exhibitors in unity conferences, he indicated, is the wrong approach to trade problems. A real solution, he wrote, will only be reached by making a genuine effort to provide reasonable selection of pictures to exhibitors, particularly for theatres in country towns and in last runs in the large cities, now unable to bargain for selective contracts.

"We hope the distributors, all of them, not just the consent decree distributors alone, recognize the need for such action on their part," he said.

Meanwhile, he warned against renewed public controversy over block booking or attempts to solve trade problems before courts or government agencies.

The negotiation of trade practices and competitive and bargaining differences can never be assumed by any unity movement, he said.

The best that can be achieved in this field of conflicting, competitive and frankly selfish interests is to reconcile the divergent demands by negotiation, compromise and agreement on what is fair and just; to redress genuine grievances and prevent injustices, and to regulate our own business ourselves so that the abuses that cause innumerable lawsuits and statutory regulations will be removed before they destroy our business," Mr. Kuykendall wrote.

New Victory Shorts

Paramount has disclosed the names of two of its four new "Victory" short subjects: "A Letter from Bataan," with Susan Hayward and Richard Arlen; and "We Refuse to Die," with Ellen Drew and Barry Sullivan. The latter is about Lidice, Czech town razed by the Germans.

Hungerford with B. & K.

Tom Hungerford, who resigned as district manager for Essaness Theatres several weeks ago, has joined Balaban & Katz and at present is managing their Harding theatre, Chicago.

Seattle Promotions

Charlotte Tabor and Lydia Ramsey, the former of Paramount and the latter of MGM, have been promoted to bookers in their Seattle exchanges. They had been assistants.

the identification contained in the license agreement; and if the finding be in the affirmative (2) an award cancelling such license in so far as it relates to such feature.

3. No feature for which the license is cancelled pursuant to the provisions of subdivision 2 of Section IV-A or of Section VII of this Decree, or pursuant to any cancellation privilege contained in any license agreement, shall be included within another group subsequently offered to the exhibitor making such cancellation.

4. With respect to Westerns to be released between September 1, 1942 and August 31, 1943[5] for public exhibition within the United States of America, at which an admission fee is to be charged, a distributor defendant may offer for license and license such Westerns without tradeshow or announcement, but shall not offer for license or license more than six Westerns in a single group. Each Western in each group shall be identified in the license agreement by the star appearing therein or by the series of which it is a part. The offer for license or licensing of one group of Westerns shall not be conditioned upon the licensing of another Western or group of Westerns.

5. The provisions of sub-paragraph (a) of this Section and the provisions of sub-paragraph (b) of this Section insofar as they provide for the arbitration of a claimed violation of any provision of said sub-paragraph (a), shall apply only with respect to licenses entered into prior to September 1, 1943 for the exhibition of features released prior to such date and subsequent to August 31, 1942, except that with respect to RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation such provisions shall have application only with respect to licenses entered into prior to August 1, 1943 for the exhibition of features released prior to such date and subsequent to July 31, 1942.

(b) No distributor defendant shall require an exhibitor to license short subjects, newsreels, trailers, or serials (hereinafter collectively referred to as shorts) as a condition of licensing features. No distributor defendant shall require an exhibitor to license reissues, westerns, or foreigns (hereinafter collectively referred to as foreigns) as a condition of licensing other features.

Where a license has been entered into, controversies arising upon a complaint by an exhibitor that the licensing to him of one group of features was conditioned by the distributor upon the licensing of another feature or foreigns of features or the licensing of shorts or foreigns or that a distributor defendant has licensed as part of a group a feature previously cancelled by such exhibitor or that the licensing to him of one group of Westerns was conditioned by the distributor defendant upon the licensing of another Western or group of Westerns shall be subject to arbitration. An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any such claim unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at its Home Office a notice in writing of such claim and of the grounds thereof, not later than two days after receipt by the exhibitor of the distributor's written approval of the exhibitors' signed application or applications for such features, Westerns, shorts or foreigns. The power of the arbitrator in deciding any such controversy shall be limited to making (1) a finding as to whether or not the licensing of such features was so conditioned or that such cancelled feature was so licensed; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, (2) an award cancelling the license for (or to the extent that it may relate to) such other feature or group of features, or such shorts or foreigns or such previously cancelled feature or such other Western or group of Westerns.

Where no license has been entered into, controversies arising upon a complaint by an exhibitor that a distributor defendant has offered for license to him more than thirteen features in a single group or that the offer of a license to him of one group of features was conditioned upon the licensing of another feature or group of features, or the licensing of shorts or foreigns or that a distributor defendant has offered for license as part of a group a feature previously cancelled by such exhibitor or that a distributor defendant has offered for license to him more than six Westerns in a single group, or that the offer of a license to him of one group of Westerns was conditioned upon the licensing of another Western or group of Westerns, shall be subject to arbitration. An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any claim that an offer so to license such features was so made or conditioned unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at its Home Office a notice in writing of such claim and of the grounds therefor not later than five days after the exhibitor claims the alleged offer was made. The power of the arbitrator in deciding any such controversy shall be limited to making (1) a finding as to whether or not the offer to license such features or Westerns was so made or conditioned; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, (2) an award imposing upon the distributor making such offer a penalty in an amount not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00). Such penalty shall be payable into the arbitration fund referred to in subdivision 8 of Section XXII hereof.

SECTION VII

Controversies arising upon the complaint of an exhibitor that a feature licensed to him by a distributor defendant for exhibition in a particular theatre is generally offensive in the localty served by such theatre on moral, religious or racial grounds shall be subject to arbitration. An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any such claim unless written notice of his election to cancel such feature, together with a statement of his reasons therefor, shall have been mailed to the distributor defendant at its Home Office not later than twenty-one days after the conclusion of its first public exhibition in the city wherein is located the exchange out of which the exhibitor is served. In such event the license in so far as it relates to the exhibition of such feature in the theatre specified in the notice shall be deemed cancelled unless within five days after receipt of such notice, the distributor defendant shall have mailed to the exhibitor a notice in writing of its denial of such claim and of its intention to arbitrate the controversy. The power of the arbitrator in deciding any such controversy shall be limited to making (1) a finding as to whether or not the feature is generally offensive in the locality served by the exhibitor's theatre on moral, religious or racial grounds; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, (2) an award cancelling the license in so far as it relates to the exhibition of such feature in said theatre.

[5]Except that in the case of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the provisions of this section shall have application only with respect to Westerns released in the United States between August 1, 1942 and July 31, 1943.

128 MARQUEE PLAYERS HAD 472 ROLES IN SEASON

77 Men Averaged Four Parts Each; 51 Women Had 3-Role Average

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

The 128 top name value players of Hollywood have appeared in a total of 472 roles during the season just ending or in pictures which have been filmed or are being filmed for the 1942-43 programs.

Of the 77 men in the 128 marquee names, each has an average of four roles.

Of the 51 women, each has an average of three roles, either in pictures released since the start of the 1941-42 season in September or in pictures finished or in work at present for the new season.

The leading men have been busier than the women, taking a total of 314 roles to the distaff side's 158 in the tabulations.

Title of Hollywood's busiest top name player goes to George Sanders, who is in front with 11 roles completed. (For purposes of this survey, assignments now being accomplished are figured as completed.)

In addition to roles on his home lot, 20th Century-Fox, he has worked for Walter Wanger, United Artists, RKO, and M-G-M.

Next in line for the busiest actor laurels is Brian Donlevy, with nine roles completed. In addition to working at Paramount, where he is under contract, he worked at Edward Small-United Artists, Universal, Columbia and M-G-M.

Henry Fonda follows closely with eight roles—at 20th Century-Fox, Warners, RKO and Columbia.

Four Actors Had Seven Roles Each

Four actors are tied for fourth money with seven roles each—Edward Arnold, Gene Autry, Preston Foster, and William Gargan.

The two busiest actresses—Ann Sheridan and Paulette Goddard—have six roles apieces.

On the other hand, six men have six roles each. They are Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Chester Morris, Basil Rathbone, John Wayne and Robert Young.

Fifteen men and seven women have five roles each; 18 men and 13 women, four roles each; 15 men and eight women, three roles each; 14 men and 14 women, two roles each; two men and seven women, one role each.

Ninety-nine of the total of 128 already have had a total of 261 roles announced for them as the current season comes to a close and the new one begins. The figures will change from the day to day as the companies announce their new production plans.

But the best laid plans of mice and men, and studios, aft gang haywire. Exigencies of wartime economies, speeding up of the Selective Service procedure, and voluntary enlistments in the armed forces undoubtedly will change many production plans.

Here are the leaders in the number of assignments already announced.

Gene Autry, number six in the Money Making Stars as voted by exhibitors in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame poll as well as number one western star, has nine to do, one of them being "Bells of Capistrano," the second of the two high budget specials for the 1941-'42 season. The others are his six westerns with Smiley Burnette and two high budget specials for the new year.

Ann Sheridan, Bob Hope, Randolph Scott each are announced for seven. Humphrey Bogart, Richard Dix, Judy Garland have six titles each lined up for them. Olivia de Havilland, Errol Flynn, Dorothy Lamour, Edward G. Robinson and Lana Turner are scheduled for five each.

Following is a tabulation of the assignments completed and announced for the 128 players in alphabetical order. Some of the pictures have been released, and some of those finished are on next season's release schedule. As noted previously, roles in pictures now shooting have been listed as "finished" for purposes of this survey.

Minnesota Ruling kills Booking Law Appeal

Decision on Unconstitutionality of Blocks-of-Five Ban Is Upheld

A Minnesota county court ruling on Saturday at St. Paul appeared to be the final knell to the hopes of Northwest Allied leaders for the enforcement of a state law directed against the consent decree, and the small block method of selling pictures.

Judge Albin S. Pearson, of the Ramsey County district court, in a brief ruling denied a motion by James F. Lynch, county attorney, for a new trial of the case against the consenting distributors which had tested the anti-decree law's constitutionality. The prosecutor also asked amended findings by the court.

With the denial of the motions, a pending stay of execution of judgment ended and the court entered its judgment clearing Paramount, 20th-Fox, and RKO of violating the state law by selling pictures in blocks-of-five or less. Judge Pearson also signed a restraining order preventing officials from enforcing the anti-decree law. This implements the ruling that the law itself was unconstitutional.

Appeal Seen Unlikely

Although the State may appeal the case within six month, St. Paul film circles considered this action extremely unlikely. They pointed out that the state was without an appropriation to finance such an extended rehearing of the case. Northwest Allied, and other exhibitors who might raise funds to sponsor the appeal have shown little interest in it. Exhibitors in the area are reported to be generally willing to try the blocks-of-twelve formula proposed by the United Motion Picture Industry as a decree amendment.

The Minnesota law was sponsored by Northwest Allied soon after the consent decree was signed. It was passed by the state legislature after an aggressive exhibitor campaign and signed by Governor Harold Stassen in April 1941. It required distributors to offer a full season's product at one time, with a 10 per cent cancellation privilege.

Test Case Sought By Distributors

A civil action by the consenting distributors, and United Artists, which sold pictures singly in the territory, for an injunction to restrain enforcement of the law was dismissed by Judge Hugo Hanft in the spring of 1941.

Thereafter several distributors sought a test case by deliberate violation of the blocks-of-five prohibition, and criminal action was instituted by the Ramsey County prosecutor. Other distributors suspended selling in the state until product shortages became acute, whereupon they were granted relief from the decree selling limit by Judge Goddard in New York district federal court.

The case against the distributors came to trial last winter and on April 14th Judge Pearson found the law unconstitutional. Final judgment was delayed by a 60-day stay to the State and applications for a new trial.

Interstate Show Setting Records

The Interstate Circuit's "College Capers of '42," a stage show conceived and produced by the circuit, has been so successful, according to word from circuit headquarters in Dallas, that it has been decided to stage the show in Dallas. The opening is set for July 25th at the Majestic theatre.

The circuit conceived the idea of the show six months ago and about a month before the colleges and universities closed for the summer, recruited 60 boys and girls and took them to Galveston, where a two-week rehearsal was held. The circuit spent approximately $10,000 on production, costumes, stage sets, etc.

The show opened at the State theatre in Galveston for three days and broke all house records. At the Metropolitan in Houston last week, although the city was practically isolated by floods, it is said to have surpassed the business of any stage attraction in recent years.

The circuit's object in conducting this experiment is two-fold: first, to offer talented undergraduates a summer of practical stage experience, and, second, to create a good will contact with the various educational institutions.

Muto Heads Washington Publicity Committee

The eastern Public Relations Committee will be represented in Washington by a committee of industry leaders there headed by Anthony Muto, of 20th-Fox Movietone newsreel. Glendon Allvine, executive secretary of the eastern group, conferred with Washington distribution and theatre men at a lundcheon meeting on Monday. Arthur De Bra was named representative of the MPPDA on the board and Earl Wingart was appointed assistant to Mr. Allvine.

Other additions to the list of regional contacts organized by the committee include Helen Garrity, Intermountain theatres, Salt Lake City; Allan Sparrow, Loew's Richmond, and Russell A. Boviam of Loew's, Columbus.

Philadelphia Associates Honor Epstein at Dinner

The Motion Picture Associates of Philadelphia honored their retiring president, Ely Epstein of RKO, at a dinner Monday at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Philadelphia. Over 100 members of the association were present. Saul Krugman of United Artists called the banquet to order. Sam Gross of 20th Century-Fox was toastmaster. Chairman for the dinner was Al Davis, of 20th Century-Fox.

Roy Roswell Curtiss Dies

Roy Roswell Curtiss, Seattle theatre man, died Tuesday in Portland, Oregon, at 55. He was formerly treasurer of the Empress, President and Metropolitan theatres.

Mellett, Lewis Retain Posts In OWI Setup

Lowell Mellett, former Coordinator of Government Films and head of the Office of Government Reports, and William B. Lewis, formerly Coordinator of Government Radio and assistant to Archibald MacLeish as head of the Office of Facts and Figures, will continue in charge of motion pictures and radio, respectively, in the new Office of War Information.

Mr. Mellett will be chief of the Bureau of Motion Pictures and Mr. Lewis head of the Radio Bureau in the domestic branch of the OWI, it was announced by Elmer Davis, director.

A formal outline of the organization of the OWI has been sent to all Government agencies, in which the work of the film and radio sections is outlined, as follows:

The chief of the Bureau of Motion Pictures will serve as the central point of contact between the motion picture industry and Federal officials to the end that the industry, both theatrical and non-theatrical, may make the maximum contribution to keeping the American public fully informed on vital aspects of the war. Official pictures of the Government as a rule will be produced under his direction, but they may be produced by individual departments and agencies after review, clearance and approval of the OWI.

Because radio time is limited, the OWI will review and clear all proposed radio programs sponsored by Federal departments and agencies, whether they bear directly upon war information or not; will allocate available time for such programs, and will serve as the central point of clearance and contact for the broadcasting industry in its relationships with Federal departments and agencies concerning such Government programs. Federal departments and agencies desiring to disseminate information by radio will make the necessary arrangements through the chief of the radio bureau; the chief of the bureau also will be responsible for consulting the appropriate policy officers and subject-matter authorities in arranging final clearance of such programs.

Name Travis Coast WPB Representative

Merwin Travis, chief of the motion picture and photographic unit of the War Production Board, has been assigned to Hollywood by Harold Hopper, head of the production priorities division. Mr. Travis will organize the west coast office established by Mr. Hopper last month with a view to offering speedy action on producers' priority applications. Mr. Travis is expected to designate a permanent Coast agent, returning to Washington after the office is running smoothly.

Army Film Unit Move To Coast Is Unconfirmed

The War Department this week refused to confirm reports widely circulated in Hollywood that the training film activities of the Signal Corps motion picture unit are to be transferred to Hollywood. The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science is now producing training films for the Signal Corps. The motion picture unit's headquarters are at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Astoria, L. I.

CANADIAN TAX INCREASE HITS THEATRE RECEIPTS

Levies on Wage Earners Bring Slump in Gross Pending Readjustment

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Canada is experiencing an after-budget feeling which, coupled with warm weather, has adversely affected the receipts of theatres generally. The exhibitors escaped an increase in the Federal amusement tax of 20 per cent, but the comment has been that there might as well have been an increase because the theatres went into a slump anyway, due to the general effect of the new tax provisions on salaried and wage-earning persons—which meant practically everybody.

Last year the Dominion Government imposed the new tax on theatre grosses and the exhibitors passed it on to the public in the form of higher admissions. It took some weeks for the patrons to regard the jump with any degree of sympathetic acceptance and receipts suffered appreciably in the meantime.

Income Tax Increased, Expenditures Curtailed

This time, the amusement tax was left alone by there has been a drastic jump in most other Federal levies, with emphasis on many articles of merchandise and services which are called luxuries but have long been regarded as modern-day necessities. Then there has been the steep increase in income taxes with provision for enforced loans to the exchequer to be collected each payday at the source. Many salaries have suddenly been reduced, insofar as the recipients are concerned, by at least 25 per cent, with no opportunities to earn more to make up the difference through the freezing of wages and the stabilizing of jobs under the heading of National Selective Service.

The jolt has been accompanied by the thought that the average person must curtail expenditure because of reduced income—which is just what the Government intended. At the same time, there has been a mass rush to purchase remaining stocks of everyday articles in stores before the new taxes could be clamped on. With one thing or the other, theatre attendance has been curtailed and probably will be down until the public readjusts itself to the new tempo.

Distributors Delaying Release of Big Films

With an era of curtailment thrust upon theatre patrons there is an inclination on the part of distributors to delay the release of important pictures until the public regains its composure, as was the case when the amusement tax became effective 13 months ago. The distributors waited for signs of a public comeback before releasing big films. There has been no objection because the people have been clamoring for all-out effort in the war and it is accepted that stiff taxation is a part of it.

At the same time, there is a new lease of life for dormant Russian films which had been lying in the vaults for all of three years because of official frowns and the disapproval of the press toward anything that might smack of the Soviet. A new blessing was given Russian pictures by the Ontario Board of Motion Picture Censors and this was the signal for private word from the most critical of the press that the same features which had been frowned upon in the days before the Soviet was drawn into the war would now be accorded kind attention. Even the big circuits are now featuring such pictures as "Our Russian Front" and "Our Russian Allies."

In spite of stiff taxes and the temporary reaction of the public, the theatre companies pursue the policy of full cooperation with the Government in war activities. For instance, in "Army Week," which was Canada's first event of the kind and which did not help the box office, the theatres cooperated extensively. There were lobby displays, marquee greetings to the men in uniform, posters, admission price concessions to men in uniform and special advertising in the newspapers befitting the occasion.

ONTARIO WILL BAN DISPLAY LIGHTING

All display lighting in Ontario, including signs and marquee illumination, will be prohibited under an order to be issued by the Power Controller of the Dominion Government not later than October 1st, the Hydro-Electric Commission, Toronto, has revealed.

The ban will be a war measure to conserve power for diversion to essential industries. Under it, interior lighting arrangements also are to be restricted and street lighting will be turned off certain hours nightly.

The scarcity of licensed operators is providing a distressing situation for exhibitors in the Eastern Provinces. Particularly, this has become serious in Nova Scotia where, despite the efforts of the exhibitors to assure an adequate supply of apprentices, there has been little cooperation, they maintain, from other sources. The only apparent relief is to admit women to the projection booths, and indications are this must be done.

Operators have been drafted for the armed forces, making it necessary for most of those continuing to work extra time.

One operator has not had a weekday off in three years, being in the booth every day but Sunday. An apprentice, expected to take some burden off him when licensed, enlisted in the air force. If the overworked operator becomes ill or is injured, there is every indication the very busy theatre will have to suspend.

Apprentices in recent years have found it very difficult to get licenses, although exhibitors felt they were well qualified. This discouraged the candidates and narrowed the supply. Some theatre owners contend they are being unjustly penalized because of cooperation on this policy between the board and the union. They have been advocating the introduction of women into apprenticeships, and the establishment and maintenance of a school for projection training. With the closing of the theatres visualized unless bars are dropped, they charge there is no allowance for enlistments, draft, illness, accidents or deaths.

Winnipeg Houses Support War Effort

by ED BAKER
in Winnipeg

This city's theatres cooperated to the utmost during Army Week. Flags, bunting, spotlights, posters, military trailers, all were theatre features.

Special price concessions to those in the armed forces were given during the week, June 29th through July 5th. A reminder that theatres always are willing to cooperate in this type of celebration was issued by A. M. Knowles, secretary of the Manitoba Motion Picture Association. He noted that last year, Winnipeg theatres staged a War Savings Stamps drive, and matinees for the salvage corps; and that free use of theatres is permitted Sundays to entertain the soldiers.

Max Heppner, theatre owner, has two sons in active service: Flying Officer Selwyn Heppner, overseas; and Lieutenant Lyon Heppner, with the Canadian anti-aircraft artillery in the Atlantic Command.

All soldiers, and members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps in uniform were recent guests of the Lyceum Theatre.

The Beacon saluted the soldiers by sounding the Last Post, in conjunction with a stage tableau.

Theatre executives active in contributing to the effectiveness of Army Week were J. Pearson, president of the Manitoba Motion Picture Exhibitors Association; E. Zorn, western manager of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation; R. Hurwitz, supervisor for the S. Weiner theatres; Harry Morton, Mr. Heppner, J. Miles, K. Beach, S. Rosenblatt, R. Bessler, H. Shulman, J. Lacey, N. Miles.

Bicycles Replace Autos in Canada

Bicycles are replacing automobiles and trucks in maintaining contact among theatres, exchanges and supply houses in the Canadian Maritime Provinces, as a result of the rationing of gasoline and tires. Executives and staff members of theatres and exchanges likewise are using bicycles where they previously used autos for short-distance transportation.

Australia Depinet Drive

A 13-week sales drive has been started in Australia and New Zealand by Ralph Doyle, managing director, honoring Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures.

New Houses in Honduras

The Gallardo Bros., Mexican distributors, will soon open two theatres in Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras. Both houses will specialize in showings of Mexican films.

FIGHT ON RENTALS STIRS INDUSTRY IN ENGLAND

Distributor Aim Increase in Return, with Revised Booking System Likely

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The smoke of war, lingering over the battlefields in the Near East, and the urgent mood of this grave and gloomy day, so far have failed to dim the light of domestic battle in the British industry eye. First shots already have been fired and skirmishes made in the new tussle, forecast in these columns, between the British exhibitor and his distributor counterpart. Odds are that a great deal of verbal gunpowder will be exploded, battle cries launched, and energy expended, over the elementary but essential factor of pounds, shillings and pence.

Issue is about to be joined, it would seem, over the whole field of film rentals. Recent hurried and assiduous councils of the Kinematograph Renters' Society have been arranged over this pivotal matter. As this goes across by Clipper, plans are materialized for the K.R.S. to go exhaustively into the whole question of film hire, aiming at a complete cleanup, although not necessarily an elimination, of flat rate rentals, and the obliteration of one-day bookings. The distributors, in short, are bent on Spring cleaning their whole trading machinery, with a view to extracting the reasonable maximum from a market which is, even in the face of the war situation, increasingly fruitful.

The moves so far are in the elementary stage of discussion and planning. The mood none the less is determined. Vis-a-vis this General Staff strategy, the exhibitor, as banded within the C.E.A., is no less determined to concede nothing which will in the remotest way interfere with his currently profitable operations. Gunpowder is most certainly in the air, and the issue will not be joined without heavy artillery fire from either side. Whether the K.R.S. armament will have the requisite armour-piercing power to impel a C.E.A. retreat is extremely dubious.

Not Getting Fair Share, Distributors Contend

The facts emerge, it would seem, out of the considerable increase in the value of the motion picture market. It has already been recorded that a reasonable estimate of last year's trading, a year which included five months of intense and disastrous bombing, showed an increase in British picture house takings of £15,000,000 over the previous 12-month average of £45,000,000. Out of this, it is claimed, distributors are not getting their fair share. They are now bent on getting it.

The prime trouble, state the distributors, is that flat rate bookings, in a considerable number of positions, are not returning them anything like the appropriate share to which they are entitled. Sometimes, it is stated, the rental paid is equivalent to but five per cent of the total receipts. Figures as low as £2 to £5 are being paid for pictures which net well over £100. A system of investigation operated by the K.R.S. secretary, known more facetiously as Frank Hill's Gestapo, has revealed facts about certain situations, irregularities, disproportions and flagrancies which have provoked an even keener spirit of reform among the distributor group.

"We are being robbed unmercifully on flat rates," is the succinct summing up of one distributor.

Just how the change will be evolved, and by what exact process the percentage citadel will be fortified and preserved, it is as yet early to suggest. There are, within the K.R.S., distributors who are not in a position to insist upon percentages. Neither their product nor their market would permit it. It would seem clear that no matter what extension of the percentage system is planned, the distributors do not aim at altering the entire basis of the business, but rather at eliminating as far as possible situations which embarrass them, and widening the potential field of commerce as far as is physically possible.

Although it is an opinion held in the K.R.S. camp that the problem is only soluble individually, that no communal action is necessary, an effort is being made to devise a policy.

As a three-pronged signpost to discussions certain plans have been propounded. They and others will form the basis of future deliberations.

The first aims at a piecemeal approach to the problem, using the K.R.S. information as to specific individual situations.

The second suggests the distributor should grade his films, booking some only on percentage, and the remainder flat, and that he should not deviate from this.

The third aims at a trading system by which the renter would undertake to sell flat only after the booking of certain product on percentage.

All these have dangers within them, particularly the suggestion of grading, a system which was the cause of a K.R.S. retreat in no uncertain disarray some years back.

Exhibitors To Fight for Present Rental System

Naturally the exhibitors will fight to the utmost against any extension of the percentage system, or against any moves which would seem to shake the firm ground upon which they now stand.

They would seem determined, too, upon maintaining the present system of booking dated and second-rate product for Sunday shows, against which, too, the K.R.S. is currently going forth to battle. Once again the distributors, despite their claim that they are acting in the public interest, pleading that the Sunday film patron its not being given a square deal, are more probably considering the matter with an exclusively economic eye, are bent in fact on getting a greater share from the vastly increased Sunday trade which has been the picture house's good fortune during the war years.

Met with an adamantine refusal on the part of the C.E.A. even to discuss the matter, the K.R.S. have made a new strategical move and are bent on tackling the matter on the lines of one-day bookings. Sunday films are, in the vast majority of cases, booked for that day only, at rentals less than very low. The K.R.S. is now set to examine the possibility of eliminating one-day bookings entirely. Although not all the distributors are in favour of the idea it has considerable support and may well be tried by members of the K.R.S.

Theatres Cite Public Support on Sundays

It is the exhibitor's insistence that the public's continued patronage of the Sunday picture house is the most potent argument against the distributor's plea of public itnerest. The facts probably are that the public will pay to see films on a Sunday no matter what they may be although the odds are that they would pay more and in greater numbers for current product. In Manchester, a recently created Sunday market, picture houses show the same films on both Saturdays and Sundays.

On the economic ground, while distributors protest that one-day bookings, such as obtain for Sunday films, entail a great amount of unnecessary work and expense, the exhibitors claim that with big audiences and low rentals for Sunday they can make up what they don't gain, thanks to distributor practice, during the rest of the week.

In both cases, in that of film rentals generally and percentage versus flat, and in that of Sunday trading, it would seem to be a mere matter of who is going to get most out of the till. The exhibitor is determined to retain his share and the distributor bent on increasing his extraction. The problem can hardly be solved without high politics being embroiled. Out of that the battle will be joined.

BRITISH THEATRES TO CUT ELECTRICITY

Under a voluntary agreement, British theatres will use 25 per cent less electricity during the forthcoming year. The reduction will be the exhibitors' contribution to the Board of Trade's fuel economy campaign, and the board has been so advised by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

Bucquet to London

Harold Bucquet, MGM director, is en route to London where he will direct "Sabotage Agent" which will mark Robert Donat's first screen appearance since "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Mr. Bucquet has just directed "The War Against Mrs. Hadley." In London he will join Irving Asher, who will produce the new war film and who has been in London for several months arranging preliminary phases for the shooting of this production.

Exhibitors Add RubberMatinees to War Effort

More "scrap rubber matinees," conducted by exhibitors throughout the country to stimulate the salvage campaign launched several weeks ago by President Roosevelt, were reported this week by showmen in the field.

At the Commercial Theatre, Chicago, last Wednesday, a rubber salvage show was given in the morning for children up to 12 years of age. Engraved pen and pencil sets were presented to the boy and girl contributing the largest amount of rubber.

Some 2,700 children turned in more than a ton of rubber at the first rubber matinee held in the territory at Warner's Stanley, in Camden, N. J., last week. Similar shows in behalf of the salvage drive are being conducted by the circuit's Lyric in Camden and Stanley in Atlantic City.

Approximately 5,000 pounds of scrap rubber were collected by more than 1,200 children and adults who attended the special matinee held July 3rd at Birmingham's Alabama theatre. A minimum of two pounds of rubber for each person was the admission price. According to Francis Falkenberg, theatre manager, a 12-year-old girl, Dickie Bell, contributed the largest amount of rubber—675 pounds of scrap. She appeared at the theatre in a truck and four ushers were required to unload her haul, it was reported.

The Ritz theatre, Indianapolis, announced this week it was contributing all of its rubber matting and flooring to the local scrap pile. The floor space where rubber was used will be carpeted, it was said.

Civilian Defense Projects Pressed

Industry activity in civilian defense and air raid precaution continues unabated at this seventh month of war. William L. Taub, Washington defense executive, was in Hollywood this week for conferences with motion picture leaders on defense measures.

At a special meeting of exhibitors and distributors in Pittsburgh last Thursday, cooperation with the program of War Activities Committee in the Western Pennsylvania area was accelerated. The group met at the office of Moe Silver, district co-chairman of the committee. Efficiency of the local organization will be increased and theatres not now participating in WAC's activities will be visited individually by a specially designated committee, it was decided.

On the solicitation committee are: Mr. Silver and M. A. Rosenberg, Allied president, co-chairmen; Ira Cohn, Pete Dana, Sam Fineberg, Mark Goldman, Herbert Greenblatt, David Kimelman, Arthur Levy, Mort Magill, John J. Maloney, F. D. Moore, Ben Amdur, James G. Palmer, Martin C. Burnett, Harry Feinstein, Joseph Feldman, Archie Fineman, Manuel Greenwald, William Finkel, Dr. C. E. Herman, Kenneth Hoel, Perry S. Nathan, J. K. Robertson, Gabe Rubin and Ben Steerman.

A. H. Blank, chairman of the War Activities Committee for Iowa, announced last week that Iowa is the first state in which exhibitors are enrolled 100 per cent in the industry's war effort. Mr. Blank reported 10 Iowa exhibitors who had not been participating, last Thursday had pledged their full cooperation.

Fred Wehrenberg and Harry C. Arthur were named co-chairman of the permanent WAC group for St. Louis last Thursday. The announcement followed a meeting in that city the previous day at which 500 exhibitors heard Francis S. Harmon, WAC coordinator, declare that motion picture film is almost the chemical equivalent of gun powder and that every care should be used in handling it so as to avoid waste in materials directly necessary in warfare. Mr. Harmon also cautioned that worn-out projection parts which cause wear on film should be replaced at once as it is easier to get parts than it is to obtain film, he said.

AIR RAID SIREN IN DETROIT HOUSE

Eastown Theatre, in Detroit, is the first motion picture house in that area to install its own air raid siren as a contribution to community defense measures, it was reported this week. The theatre is operated by the Wisper & Westman Circuit. Altec Service Company is installing four large directional horns on the roof of the theatre.

The siren can be heard for about three miles and will give warnings to a population estimated at 250,000 within the area. It will be under direct control of the city's air raid defense system.

Chicago Employees Get Handbook

Employees of all Chicago theatres this week received copies of a theatre defense handbook, 3,000 of which are being distributed throughout the area. Elmer Immerman, of Balaban & Katz; G. J. Singer, Warner theatres; G. E. Miller, Essanees circuit and Abe Cohen of the Shubert circuit, are on the committee which was in charge of preparing the defense manual for film house personnel.

The first "dusk to dawn" blackout in Baltimore was held on Wednesday, with exhibitors reported prepared for the event. Downtown first-run houses pooled their resources and combined their newspaper advertisements a day or two prior to the blackout, emphasizing the fact that they would be open for business as usual during the test.

Theatre managers and staffs met last week in the Fargo Theatre, Fargo, N. D., for a conference called by civilian defense authorities. According to Walter Dunkelberger, chief projectionist at the Isis theatre in Fargo and officer in charge of morale units for the Cass County Civilian Emergency Council, this was "the first move on the part of any business enterprise in this territory to assume full responsibility for share in OCD work. We think their efforts should be held up as an example for others in the industry to follow," Mr. Dunkelberger declared.

He reported that Ed Kraus, manager of the Fargo, and city manager for Minnesota Amusement Company, offered to accept full responsibility for rigid enforcement of OCD emergency regulations and also offered to send staff members to air raid warden training units, thus releasing present wardens to serve in other sectors.

For the first time since May 15th, exhibitors in Oregon and Washington who use fuel oil to operate cooling systems, received an unrestricted supply of oil last Friday. Because of an improved transportation situation, the War Production Board which had been enforcing a 50 per cent reduction in fuel oil deliveries to consumers in the two Northwestern states, lifted the ban and authorized delivery of all oil desired for heating or cooling.

Reel Cooperation With Censors Is Praised

Captain George Ernest, administrative officer in charge of reviewing films in New York, this week paid tribute to the close cooperation afforded the Government by the newsreels.

The New York office reviews newsreels, commercial shorts, and organized industry shorts produced in the East. A Los Angeles board reviews the product of the organized industry. Only film for export comes under the board's scrutiny.

"Of the thousands of feet we have reviewed since we began, the first week of June, we have had to eliminate an exceedingly small amount," Captain Ernest said. "The newsreels, with which we are primarily concerned, are working so closely with us that there's been no trouble at all."

Two examiners, who with three board members are on call 24 hours daily, "handle the reviewing nicely," Captain Ernest said. He pointed out that the 24-hour call is because of the need of shipping newsreels promptly.

"They can call us up any hour, and we'll be right there. We do our best not to delay them; we realize the importance of timeliness," he asserted.

Captain Ernest also noted the board "does not like to use the scissors." It has a sense of proportion, he commented. "If a film should turn up that has a great many scenes conveying military knowledge, we would return it, rather than ruin it," he added.

Films passing the scrutiny of the New York board are shipped mainly to Latin-America and to England. They are seen in newsreel, commercial, and customers' projection rooms.

Captain Ernest is administrative officer of the board, whose other members are Richard R. Smith, former book publisher, chairman; and Perry Arnold, formerly of the Associated Press.

The Los Angeles board is headed by Watterson Rothacker, former vice-president of Quigley Publications.

Information "Valuable To Enemy" Is Defined

The Office of Censorship, in establishing reviewing boards in Los Angeles and New York for films intended for other countries, laid down a basic principle to guide the boards: "Will this material be of value to the enemy?"

It then specified, as follows:

"Classes of information prohibited for export in photographic form unless approved by appropriate government agencies having supervision over the subjects include all aerial or detailed close-up views of war production plants, docks, shipyards, railroad terminals, dams, power plants, storage tanks, reservoirs, radio towers, arsenals, munitions dumps, forts and all other military installations, including air fields and military depots. Detailed close-up shots of all air fields, cities or terrain showing distinguishing buldings or landmarks in relation to each other or to the general landscape, and detailed pictures of new-type planes, tanks or guns also are prohibited.

"Photographs of identifiable beaches and coastlines of such a character as to aid an enemy landing party on any seacoast of the United States or American territory come within the ban. This restriction does not apply to conventional beach views." Other classes of prohibited pictorial information for export include movements of land, air or sea forces and merchant ships, when the identification, origin or destination is indicated; detailed views of military or naval equipment and activities, or movements of ships in coastal waters.

SCREEN CREDIT CUTS KILLED BY CONTRACT PROBLEMS

Film Conservation Group Cites Sales Importance Despite Actor Approval

Elimination of screen credits recommended by the Hollywood Flm Conservation Committee some weeks ago as an annual saving of 10,000,000 feet of film stock, went into the discard at Hollywood Tuesday night. The meeting of the voluntary economy organization decided that difficulties of adjusting contractual stipulations outweighed in importance the saving which could be effected.

Earlier in the week the Screen Actors Guild had been one of the first talent organizations which agreed to accept the proposal if other guilds did likewise.

A spokesman for the committee said the tabling of the recommendation was not due to opposition from any guild but was based on a general agreement that the screening of credits possesses a measure of sales value.

The meeting Tuesday discussed a variety of suggestions for technological economies in studios and laboratories. The decision to release full-length reels instead of gauging the length so that projector change-overs occur at advantageous points in story or dialogue was described as a minor saving which would add up to a major economy.

The Screen Actors' official publication, issued Monday, in supporting the suggestion, declared, "Although actors have the most to lose through such deletions, since theirs is the identity with which audiences are most concerned, they have indicated a willingness to accept the the recommendation if all other credits are similarly cut."

At a meeting of the Conservation Committee in Hollywood last week, the Actors together with the Writers and Directors guilds, asked for additional time in which to consider the credit elimination plan. Other suggestions proposed by the committee included pre-editing by producers, writers and directors of all scripts before productions start in order to eliminate unnecessary shooting; the interchange of studio stock material and reduction in stills.

The film industry will be forced to reduce its use of raw stock 20 to 50 per cent, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America believes. The organization's bulletin, issued Tuesday to members, stressed that the reduction will probably be in release prints, which, it said, accounted for 95 per cent of the raw stock manufactured, Hollywood using the other 5 per cent.

Kuykendall Suggests Cut in Duals as Saving

Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, further suggested in the letter to members that the elimination of double features "may be worth considering" as a solution to the conservation problem. "If double features were eliminated it would at the same time be necessary to prohibit theatres from giving more daily performances than they now do."

Action on the proposal to reduce the amount of raw stock consumed in the manufacture of screen trailers is continuing in New York, it was reported this week. At least one major company has volunteered to make a 20 per cent cut in total footage used for its trailers, it is understood. Reductions suggested by other distributors are said to range upwards from five per cent.

Meanwhile, distributors and film carriers in the Washington exchange area met Monday with members of the Washington office of the MPPDA to discuss ways and means of complying with recent regulations of the Office of Defense Transportation, designed to reduce truck mileage.

Carriers Weigh Transport Problems

Several possible methods of saving mileage were discussed at the conference, including cooperation between truck lines to avoid duplication of service and the elimination of special trips and call-backs.

A special committee, with John Allen, MGM branch manager, as chairman, was appointed to consider the problem and the various suggestions offered and to report back with a definite conservation plan.

The need for meeting promptly the requirements of the Office of Defense Transportation was stressed at the meeting.

Last week, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, ODT officials instructed all common carriers of film and other delivery services using trucks, tires and gasoline, to pare at least 25 per cent from their weekly itineraries.

Following the order, industry executives met to discuss ways and means of effecting the cut. In Des Moines, over the weekend, exhibitor representatives and officials of the three local film trucking firms met with branch managers and bookers of the 20th Century-Fox exchange to map plans for rearranging film deliveries and pickups. Leo F. Wolcott of Eldora and Will Eddy of Indianola, Ia., represented exhibitors.

It is believed that the required mileage savings expected of film carriers can be accomplished by combining duplicate runs, by readjustment of exhibitors' bookings where they are out of line with other local exhibitors and by taking out of circulation for one or two days a week trucks that now operate every night except Sunday.

C. R. Allen, Cleveland ODT field manager, who has final jurisdiction over 26 Northern Ohio counties and Erie County, Pa., last Thursday issued the following statement concerning road regulations covering return loads extended to July 15th:

"The 25-mile radius regulations have been in effect in their entirety since July 1st including 25 per cent mileage reduction and one daily delivery. In my opinion, any film truck making two daily deliveries, as some are allegedly doing, are operating in violation of the ODT official order, with driver and film shippers equally responsible for such violations." Mr. Allen further declared he would deny any special applications asked by distributors and would grant no special privileges to the motion picture industry.

Says Industry Asks Exemption

According to the Cleveland ODT official, the industry is claiming exemption of ODT ruling under the U. S. Code No. 383 which applies to handling inflammable and dangerous articles.

An appeal from distributors, exhibitors and carriers of Michigan, meanwhile, for relief on the enforcement of ODT rulings on film deliveries was carried to Washington last week by David Newman, attorney for Cooperative Theatres of Michigan.

In the current bulletin of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America Edward A. Kuykendall, president, discusses the ODT regulations on film deliveries and points out that the ruling "does not require or ask that film trucks or trucks that carry nothing but film, either over the highways or in the city, cut their mileage or reduce their present service in any way, other than to eliminate unnecessary waste by proper care and maintenance of equipment."

Main Burden to Fall on Exhibitor

Concerning conservation of raw film stock, Mr. Kuykendall says: "There is reason to believe the industry faces a cut of from 20 to 50 per cent in the raw stock it can get under priorities. Cutting the number of prints will reduce the distributor's print costs but will delay the liquidation of his exhibition contracts and the returns on his pictures. But again," the MPTOA president asserts, "the main and ultimate burden and hardship is on the exhibitor, particularly the subsequent run theatres and country town and last run exhibitors."

Mr. Kuykendall considers the possibility "if double features were prohibited to save film it would be necessary at the same time to prohibit the theatres from giving more performances per day than they do now. This would really cut the use of film, would reduce the theatres' hours of operation and operating expense but would enable the theatre to accommodate just as big an attendance as now, but with a two-hour show instead of a four-hour performance. Maybe this is worth considering," he concludes, "as it would present a chance to get rid of double features everywhere. . . ."

"SELFISH INTERESTS" BALK EQUIPMENT POOL

Efforts of the Federal Communications Commission to establish an equipment pool from which broadcasters could secure repair and maintenance parts not procurable elsewhere have been delayed by "selfish interests" within the industry, it was charged Monday by Chairman James L. Fly.

Mr. Fly did not elaborate upon his assertion that difficulty was being encountered in securing 100 per cent cooperation.

'Cinema Palace' Formula Refurbished for Roxy

A. J. Balaban To Carry Out Idea of Complete Entertainment at Theatre

A "new" Roxy Theatre will blossom on New York's White Way, with the coming to its helm of A. J. Balaban, founder of the Balaban and Katz circuit. So that showman promised in New York this week, where he was in last-minute contract negotiations. He is a brother of Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, and John, president of Balaban and Katz.

The "new" house will also reinstitute showmanship in a Broadway sector where for years theatres have remained static in policy, Mr. Balaban asserted.

He commented that the Paramount has its type of patron; the Music Hall, others; the Strand, the Capitol, the State, all have steady patrons made by their steady policies. There have been no innovation of late.

Specifically, shortly after his contract is signed, Mr. Balaban will close the Roxy for a week. It will reopen with a refurbished lobby rotunda—special curtains, different decorations, a "class" orchestra, selected and placed, and governed with showmanship. The theatre orchestra will be in a different location. Where, he had not decided. It will be enlarged, revamped. Paul Ash, its director, will again be "glamorized." Showmanship, Mr. Balaban's guiding principle, will be applied also to this orchestra, in every detail; placement, dress, deportment, music, emphasis, personnel. Finally, the reopening will bring a different stage show. It will be more expensive. The acts will be selected for quality; there will be "class" acts to draw patrons who habitually have shunned the Roxy because its acts have been merely vaudeville. On "ordinary" acts, care and money will be expended.

These are but a few of the plans set for the Roxy, the name of which may even be changed, perhaps to "The New Roxy."

But it is all contingent upon pictures, Mr. Balaban emphasized.

No 20th-Fox Films For Music Hall

"I must have big pictures," he said; "I must have all 20th-Fox pictures. After all, this is a 20th-Fox house. I will be working for them. I will be trying to make their big house a bigger house; a worthy first run show window on Broadway; the type of theatre every other company has.

"And I cannot allow 20th-Fox pictures to be booked, for instance, into the Music Hall, a block away—competing with me.

"There are no miracle men in this business," he continued, "and while I know what I am about to do will bring the company longer runs, and hundreds of thousands of dollars more in returns from their pictures, thus justifying the additional expense, I cannot do it without cooperation from the company and its studio."

Mr. Balaban said last week he understood he had the pledge of cooperation from the company.

Of the new Roxy policy, he said, in referring to its competitors, that it would not ape them. "We are merely going to combine the best in all policies," he remarked.

"You might refer to it as a 'more distinguished' Paramount policy; a 'more lively' Music Hall policy. You could refer to it that way, although it is not precisely our manner of approaching the problem. What we are essentially doing is critically examining our patrons, and asking ourselves what they want, why there are not more of them, what types attend, what types do not attend.

"We are going to try to achieve, as nearly as possible, a universally appealing program. Other houses draw types of patrons. We want all types, and do not think it impossible to get them. There is no reason why the young and the old, the city family and suburbanites, the married and the transients, should not be able to find in our shows novelty, liveliness, and quality."

Mr. Balaban's directorship is to bring him $1,000 per week, against 10 per cent of the net profits. The deal was first talked about two years ago; it is only lately Mr. Balaban considered it.

It is to be recalled that 20th-Fox is currently headed by Spyros Skouras, for years the country's major theatre operator.

Mr. Balaban has never "retired" from the film industry, a belief general in the east. Although he disposed of his Balaban and Katz and Paramount holdings, he has remained an operator of theatres, which currently are the Esquire, Chicago; the Libertyville, near Chicago; the Coed, Champaign, Ill.; the Melrose Park, Melrose Park, Ill.

He has long dreamed of an "amusement center," wherein would be all "proved" entertainment. For some months he had been dickering for the Civic Center, Chicago. With his present New York interest, that dream is transferred.

Lately, Mr. Balaban has been aiding the U.S.O. Camp Shows, Inc., with Abe Lastvogel.

Roxy Opened in 1927; Rothafel Its Director

William Fox opened the 5,886-seat Roxy theatre in New York, March, 1927. Its managing director was the late showman, S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel. Its musical director was Erno Rapee. Its policy was elaborate stage shows, a large orchestra playing "classical" music, and good pictures.

Mr. Rothafel and Mr. Fox soon disagreed; and the former departed, becoming managing director of the Radio City Music Hall and Center Theatre, in 1931, when they opened.

After Roxy's departure, the Roxy continued as a Fox property until 1932, when receivers took over, and Fanchon and Marco assumed direction. Twentieth Century-Fox, the reorganized film company, acquired the theatre from the receivers about five years ago.

Balaban Subject of Biography Shortly

A. J. Balaban, 53-year-old showman, will be publicized nationally shortly by the publication of "Continuous Performance," his life story, written by his wife, Carrie. Putnam is the publisher. September 1st is the publication date.

The biography, written in the first person, as "told to his wife, by A. J. Balaban," covers in essence the motion picture industry, both in the number of people of importance who appear, and in time; for Mr. Balaban started more than 30 years ago, in the Kedzie Avenue, Chicago, nickelodeon theatre, founding not only a chain of theatres, but a type of entertainment.

There will be two editions: one, autographed, at $10; the other, for general circulation, at $3.50.

Chilean Film Unit Organized

A new motion picture producing company, initially capitalized at 9,000,000 pesos, was recently organized in Chile, according to the United States Department of Commerce. The Fomento Corporation is reported to have invested 4,000,000 pesos in the enterprise, the remainder having been supplied by private capital.

The new company, Chilefilms, will absorb the Instituto de Cinematografia Educativa of the University of Chile, which is now in charge of making newsreels to record important governmental functions. The Institute has a library of approximately 200 documentary and educational films, as well as cameras and a developing laboratory. Chilefilms is expected to purchase additional equipment in the United States and in Argentina.

Present plans call for the construction of a number of buildings, including two insulated studios. Twenty thousand square meters of land surrounding the studios will be available for outdoor photography.

The Department also reports the opening of a modern theatre, the Astoria, in Colon, Canal Zone, as the result of a great increase in motion picture attendance in that city. First run pictures produced in the United States are being shown, and members of the armed forces are admitted at special rates. The theatre has 1,178 orchestra, and 214 balcony seats.

Liggett Supervisor

Jules E. "Sonny" Liggett has been named sales supervisor of the New York exchange of Universal. Sam Finkel is now New York City salesman, and Harold Dudoff upstate and Long Island salesman.

Reappoint McFall

W. O. McFall, former field supervisor for Warners' checking service, has been reappointed in his territory, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. The checking service, reinstated several months ago, is having many additions.

Relax Boston Law

Boston is to have Sunday legitimate shows for the first time. The opening move was made by Police Commissioner Timility who permitted two theatres to stage special benefit performances, followed by the lifting of the ban.

Toughest transportation nut put up to any Hollywood studio in years is that being mulled today by William Guthrie, head of Warner Brothers' location department. His problem is to get a camera crew into Russia to film backgrounds for use in "Mission to Moscow," filmization of the book by Joseph E. Davies, former U. S. Ambassador to the Soviet.

Five routes thus far are under consideration by Guthrie. And none of them offers any Cook's tour for the crew that draws the hazardous assignment. They are:

1. Pan-American Clipper to Natal, Brazil, thence to Africa by bomber ferry, thence into Russia through Iran.
2. Direct flight from an Alaskan base to Siberia.
3. Bomber ferry to England, to join a British convoy to Murmansk.
4. American convoy from New York direct to Murmansk.
5. Military plane to China, thence into Russia by plane or over the caravan route through Mongolia.

The CBS "Listening Post," at headquarters in New York, is a center of interest to those whose business takes them past the glass-enclosed room where foreign broadcasts are recorded. Lord Haw Haw, British-accented lie-spouting Nazi propagandist, is a steady favorite because of his entertainingly obvious exaggerations, but a Jap announcer from Tokyo stole the spotlight the other day when he "disclosed" that a shot fired at Oregon's Pacific coast had struck the Yankee Stadium!

Many years ago, when Ernie Adams was a famous musical comedy star on Broadway, he and Miller Huggins, late N. Y. Yankees' manager, were pals.

Huggins always used to tell Ernie Adams that he'd love to trade jobs with him and Adams always insisted that he'd give anything to be Miller Huggins.

Time marches on!

When Samuel Goldwyn began "The Pride of the Yankees," based on the life of Lou Gehrig, his casting director searched for a man to play Huggins.

He happened to pick—Ernie Adams, now a Hollywood character actor.

Indianapolis Rotarians got an inkling of what a many-sided affair the movie business is, when Arthur W. Baker, manager of the Circle Theatre there, gave them an address on "Everybody's Hobby," at the club's luncheon, the other day.

He set the club members to thinking that the show business is much more complicated than the more prosaic trades when he asked them: "What would you do if you had to make a product to satisfy your sons and your daughters, your wife and your mother-in-law, and the folks next door, not to mention Europe and Asia, South America, Africa and Australia?"

The longest word in the English language is "pneumancultramicroscopicsilicovolcanokoniosia.' We have the word of twelve-year-old Richard Earnhart, of Paso, Texas, for that one. Anyway, pneumancultramicroscopicsilicovolcanokoniosia is a disease.

She's confused now, though, since one of Frank Walker's letter carriers placed the following letter on her Round Table desk, the other morning:

"Gentlemen:

"Please send me the book 'Harmony in Marriage.' After inquiring at several different book stores, I was given your address. I am enclosing seventy-five cents to cover the cost of the book, so please ship the book to me at the earliest possible date.

"Your prompt assistance will be appreciated, as I am quite anxious to have this educational book.

Some unusual props, made in Hollywood for motion pictures, have gone into the national rubber reserve pile. The items:

One pure rubber python, 40 feet long, a foot thick, weighing 300 pounds; two half-pythons used for film close-ups, each 20 feet long, totaling 300 pounds together; two rubber cobras, 15 feet long, weighing 25 pounds each.

The Alexander Korda Studios turned over the rubber pythons and cobras; they were used in Korda's "The Jungle Book," for close shots too dangerous to permit the use of live reptiles.

While the large python was worth only $3.00 as rubber scrap, at the government's price of a penny a pound, it cost $8,000 to build for movie use, because of the mechanical devices installed to make it writhe like the real thing.

When it comes to helping win the war, exhibitors of Hartford, Conn., are entirely willing to forget all boxoffice rivalries and that is standing United. Every theatre in town—from the "A's" to the "Z's"—is cooperating. Each night every manager in town gathers at some one theatre. The Treasury Department furnishes a speaker, who appears on the theatre stage, makes a plea and introduces each manager. The visiting showmen then—amid a lot of friendly clowning—work the aisles, taking bond orders. The first night, at the Allyn theatre, in ten minutes, $2,000 in bonds were sold. Some $35,000 in extra bond sales per week will be developed, it is expected.

A perennial came again, last Sunday, to The Plaza, beneath our thirtieth floor window at Rockefeller Center.

For the eight time in as many years Rockefeller Plaza, the north-south street bisecting the development, was closed for one day to pedestrian as well as vehicular travel to prevent its becoming public property.

With its barricades of rope and its uniformed guards, the street was a target for camera enthusiasts. Countless photographs were taken by sight-seers. An oft-repeated comment, according to the guards, was that the old saw about small towns rolling up their sidewalks is a canard but in New York it is not.

From Forty-eighth to Fifty-first Street, in compliance with an agreement with Columbia University, owner of the site, Rockefeller Center officials roped off the way at 6 A.M. yesterday. At 6 P.M. the barricades were removed and Columbia's adherence to Resolution No. 67 of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York, adopted December 15, 1933, was legally executed.

U. S. TO HIT AXIS DIRECTLY IN FILMS TO AMERICAS

Revised Inter-American Affairs Setup Calls for Factual Counter-attack

The U. S. Government soon will be naming its enemies by name on South American screens, and pointing out, without indirection, the threat they hold to the entire Western Hemisphere.

The program of the films division of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, drastically reshaped since Pearl Harbor, soon will be answering Axis motion picture propaganda with a direct factual counter-attack. This will be directed through both the commercial screen and special non-theatrical outlets in South America.

To do this the motion picture division, now under the direction of Francis Alstock, has enlisted the talents of a score of top Hollywood screen writers. It will produce their scripts at major studios through the Motion Picture Society for the Americas and the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Cameras will start rolling within a few weeks, the motion picture division said, at several major studios. The Government will contract for the production of its scripts on a cost-plus basis. Generally, studios will receive an allowance of approximately 20 per cent over actual negative cost to pay for studio overhead and supervision of production on these special Government short subjects.

The completed pictures, according to Mr. Alstock, will be available in most instances to established distributors for commercial circulation to theatres in Latin America, and possibly this country. Also they will be shown in South America in 16 mm Spanish and Portuguese versions through the distribution system which the Coordinator has set up in cooperation with the State Department and local South American committees.

Titles Show Departure From Cultural Themes

With such titles as "Hitler's Plans for the Americas," "Italy Is Sorry," "If Hitler Should Die," "Army Nurse," "What Are Heroes Made Of," and screen reports on the Army, Navy and air might of the United States, the new screen fare of the Coordinator's office is a sharp departure from its previous selections of pictures for "cultural interchange" with the other American republics.

Pictures on public health, agriculture, medicine, dentistry and educational subjects are still included on the Coordinator's film program but they are in a less conspicuous place. Subject matter currently in preparation is considerably stronger propaganda than the reels on cows, molecules and basketball which were first sent southward.

The U. S. emphasis, from the latest lists of titles made available from the Coordinator's office, appears to have shifted towards a greater recognition of the production abilities of the established motion picture industry. There are fewer titles prepared from commercial or industrial film files or from the screen product of U. S. agencies.

Health and medical or dental films now exhibit, consistently, the approval and active cooperation of such bodies as the American Medical Association, dental associations, U. S. Public Health Service, Pan American Sanitary Commission and other non-commercial organizations.

Shipments of films processed with Spanish and Portuguese sound tracks have lagged since December as the film division continued its reorientation. They have consisted principally of scientific and medical pictures sent in response to South American requests, several educational pictures and Spanish and Portuguese versions of MGM's "Main Street on the March" and reels on the Gilbert and Marshall Islands attack, South America's admirals, "Power and the Land," "This Amazing America" and "Unseen Worlds," on microscopy.

"Nominal" Fees for Writers of Scripts

The "ideological" reels which will soon go into production were written by Hollywood writers under the direction of Kenneth MacGowan and Philip Dunne. The writers received what are described as "nominal" fees for their scripts. Among the titles now ready are:

WHAT ARE HEROES MADE OF, by Robert Lees and Fred Rinaldo; about American war heroes.

NOBEL PRIZE WINNERS IN EXILE, by Edmund Dorfmann and Paul Alley; to be produced by Mr. Dorfmann.

MEXICAN SIX-MONTH GROSS $3,500,000

Mexican theatres grossed $3,500,000 during the first six months of 1942, according to Treasury Department estimates. The figure, considered large for Mexico, compares with $315,000 for the country's legitimate theatres. Attendance was off from January to May because of public uncertainty as to the war situation, but increased price scales compensated for lowered attendance figures.

ENLIST PUBLIC ON RENTALS EASTERN ALLIED URGES

Regional Directors Advise Units to Evolve Plan for Publicity on Fight

Exhibitors may answer increasing distributor demands for advanced admissions with a direct appeal to the public, the Eastern Regional Conference of National Allied warned last week following a meeting at New Haven. The session, held in conjunction with the convention of Connecticut Allied on June 8th devoted a large portion of its discussion to film rentals and demands for special terms and admission scales on top pictures.

A resolution passed by the regional directors of the associations represented recommended that "each Allied unit evolve a plan to take the story of the distributors' demands for increased admission prices direct to the public."

Trailers, newspaper advertising, publicity and local "educational" campaigns were among the methods of telling their case recommended to the New Haven delegates.

Action on the suggested public appeal, and other aspects of the rental situation was postponed until the next regional conference. This will be held at Philadelphia early in September.

Meanwhile the executive committee of National Allied issued a call for a mid-summer meeting of the national Board of Directors on July 22nd at Pittsburgh. The meetings, which are expected to last two days, will be held at the William Penn.

A notice to directors, sent from the Allied headquarters in Washington by Abram Myers, general counsel, listed rental problems at the head of the five point program suggested for the Pittsburgh meeting.

Among the problems which the executive committee felt "warranted the early attention of the board" were:

"(a) extraordinary prices and terms demanded for outstanding productions this season.

"(b) Prospect of still further increases next season.

"(c) Curtailment of film delivery service.

"(d) Handling of priorities without reference to the exhibitors.

"(e) Ignoring of UMPI in connection with setting up various public relations groups and other violations of the Chicago pact."

The committee also listed discussion of the "nuisance ailments" recently cited by M. A. Rosenberg, national president of Allied. In particular it referred to blind checking and admission price increases.

Better Showmanship Urged at Forums

Warning that the industry faced in wartime the stiffest competition and the most difficult times it has ever encountered, Henderson Richey, exhibitor relations executive for MGM, told the Exhibitors' Forum held by the company at Milwaukee on Monday that the theatreman must use his merchandising skill to the utmost in behalf of both the war effort and the industry.

"With well-known stars heeding the call of this emergency, it is going to become the job of the showmen of America to merchandise new faces and new personalities," Mr. Richey told the 300 Wisconsin and Northern Illinois exhibitors at the forum.

This job of selling the stars of tomorrow, and keeping box office receipts up, is only one of the many selling jobs exhibitors face, he said. Rations, print reductions, less product, and transportation woes will tax exhibitors' ingenuity, he said.

"It appears to be that our job ahead is, taking into consideration all of the handicaps, all of the restrictions, to use the tools at hand to improve our present methods of merchandising, and so bring into play that ingenuity and showmanship upon which was builded the success of our business," Mr. Richey asserted.

Other Milwaukee speakers included Mayor John L. John, who said the industry had proved its indispensable status; Arthur F. Hall, national advertising manager of the Milwaukee Journal; William R. Ferguson, Samuel Shirley of MGM; Edward Salzberg, Bluefield, W. Va., exhibitor and Seymour Morris, publicity head for the Schine circuit.

DONATES THEATRE FOR WAR SERVICE

The Ewing Theatre in Bloomington, Ill., has been donated, fully equipped, by Mrs. Roma Ewing, for the use of the Mid-West Motive Trades Institute, for the instruction of Government students, for the duration of the war. The theatre will be used every day except Saturday. Members of the local operators' union have donated their services for the showing of the Government films.

Indiana Owners in Two Day Session

Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana held its fifth annual mid-summer convention at Lake Wawasee from Tuesday through Wednesday. The session drew many important figures in the industry. One hundred fifty showmen attended.

President Roy E. Harrold introduced a schedule of speakers including Francis S. Harmon, New York, head of the War Activities Committee; Si H. Fabian, executive vice-chairman and treasurer of the committee, Arthur Mayer, member of the committee, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel and chairman of the board of National Allied.

Speakers at a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exhibitors' forum at the convention were H. M. Richey, exhibitor relations contact for Loew's; and the following Metro executives: J. E. Flynn, Chicago, division sales manager; Harris P. Wolfberg, St. Louis, district manager, and Foster B. Gauker, Indianapolis branch manager. Mr. Harrold and Don B. Rossiter, executive secretary of ATOI, also were scheduled speakers, as was Don G. Hayes, advertising manager of the Indianapolis Star.

Among those who attended were M. A. Rosenberg, president of national Allied; Jack Kirsch, Allied of Illinois; Ray Branch, Allied of Michigan; Bill Ainsworth, president; Harry Perlewitz, business manager, and Augie Berkholtz, director, all of ITPA of Wisconsin; Pete Wood, secretary of ITO of Ohio; David Palfreyman, New York, MPPDA; Charles Boasberg, Cleveland manager for RKO; Claude F. Lee, public relations representative of Paramount, and Pete Rosian, Cincinnati, manager for Universal. Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Palfreyman also addressed the gathering.

Stamp Committees Meet in Jersey

A luncheon meeting for North Jersey war bond and stamp committees was held at the Newark Athletic Club Tuesday under the auspices of Harry Lowenstein of Allied of New Jersey and Don Jacocks of the Warner exchange. Si Fabian for the War Activities Committee and Commissioner John E. Manning of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, spoke on the theatre stamp sales.

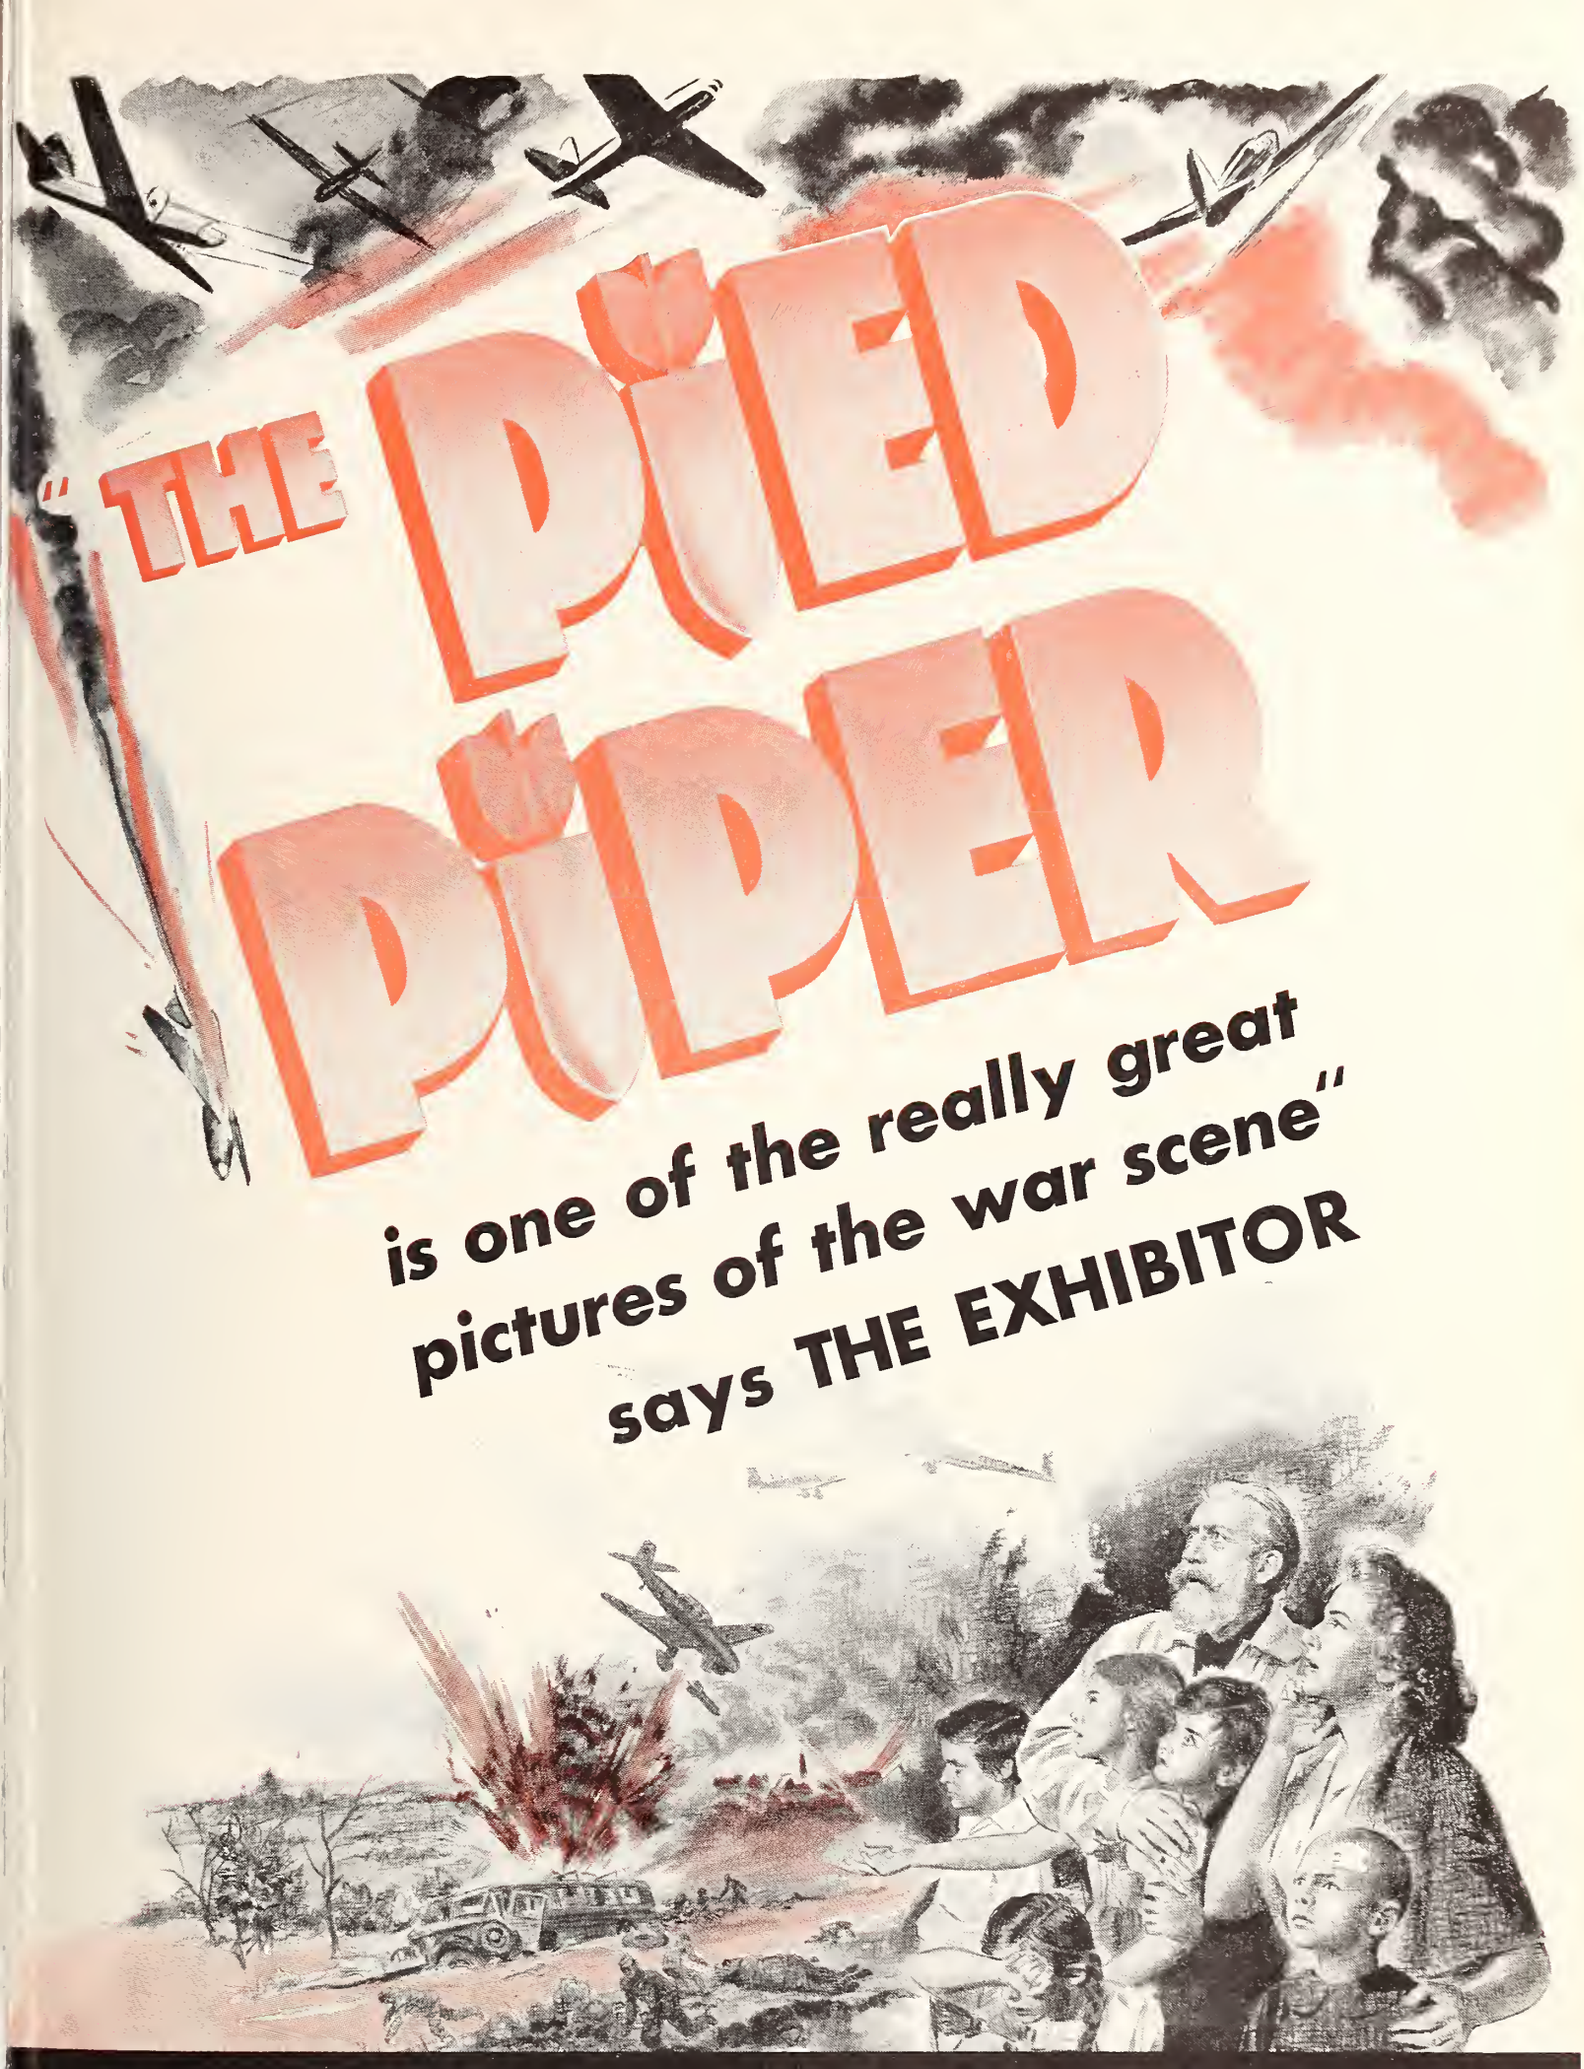
New Jersey Allied will conduct a river outing to Bear Mountain on July 28th. The group will lunch at the Bear Mountain Inn.

The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners has again deferred plans for its annual convention pending a final decision on the Unity sales plan and the working out of coast transportation difficulties. Robert Poole, executive secretary, indicated that the meeting might not be held until Autumn, or a gathering of regional representatives might be substituted.

5 Chicago Managers Win Warner Awards

Robert Busch of the Jeffery Theatre; Irving Lipnick, Shore; Eli Arkin, Avalon; Steve Fitzgerald, Stratford, and Ervin Sedlack, Frolic Theatre, all Chicago, were the five Warner managers named winners for the third quarter in the company's quarterly merit awards.

Awards are based on consistent economy, efficiency and showmanship. The manager having the largest number of points at the end of the final quarter will be given a trip to New York and a bonus check. Arkin is the only manager so far to win two citations.



Philadelphia Film Row Affected by Project

Approximately half of Philadelphia's "Film Row" will be forced to move as a result of a decision by the city and State Highway Department to begin work immediately on the widening of Vine Street.

Condemnation of property will affect only occupants of buildings on the south side of the street. They will seek new locations nearby. It was expected that the project, authorized last year, would not be begun until after the war.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

Victory Committee Reports Progress

Seven hundred and twenty-three film players donated 3,198 appearances to the nation's need during the past six months and journeyed 788,895 miles to avail themselves of the privilege.

The foregoing statistics are among those revealed in the Hollywood Victory Committee's report for the first half of 1942, delivered to Colonel Marvin Young, aide to Brigadier-General F. H. Osborn, who arrived in Hollywood from Washington last weekend.

The mileage, negotiated by plane, train, automobile, bus and motorcycle, is equivalent to some 31 circlings of the globe at the equator and is rated no more than a good start on the total distance to be covered by the end of the year.

Points of appearance have included Navy and Marine Corps bases, Army posts and military installations throughout America, Alaska, the islands of the Caribbean, not to mention battleships, and cities of all sizes from border to border and coast to coast.

Purposes of the appearance have been the entertainment of the troops, the selling of war bonds, including the Canadian, and the stimulation of contributions to the Red Cross, the Infantile Paralysis campaign, the Army and Navy Relief funds, the British, Russian, Chinese and Dutch relief rallies, singly and collectively, and a wide range of charitable causes.

Estimated Audience Is 35,000,000

No figure representing the number of persons played to has been hazarded, but the estimate of 35,000,000 as the number who will be contacted by the 30 players now touring 120 cities supplies basis for computation.

Neither is there a figure to represent the average daily activity, but it is revealed that on a recent Saturday a network broadcast was in progress in Navy interest from San Diego while a leading actress was making an appearance in Washington, D. C., and eight others were entertaining the Coast Guard at an unrevealed base. At the same time 11 players were furnishing entertainment at an Infantry camp, 10 were performing for the Artillery, four were making radio transcriptions in a Hollywood studio and six were on bondselling tours. That night a variety show and a Treasury Department program went out over the air.

In submitting his report on the organization's half-year, H. V. C. Chairman Kenneth Thomson said, "The sole purpose of the Victory Committee is to serve as a clearing house for all requests for free star appearances, so that the greatest good for America's war effort can come out of Hollywood's great talent pool, which is so eager to serve.

"The committee itself is a cross-section of motion pictures and radio, its 50 members representing every branch of those two industries in Hollywood. All of Hollywood has guaranteed the committee its complete cooperation. Practically every name personality has signed a pledge to consider charity or patriotic appearances only when they are approved by the Victory Committee.

"Hundreds of requests monthly clear through our offices, many of them for a series of appearances. All are given full and sympathetic consideration, and we have approved practically 50 per cent of the requests received. As a general practice, we approve only those requests from national government agencies, and from such national organizations as the USO, Community Chest, Red Cross, Navy Relief Society, Army Emergency Relief, Russian War Relief and China War Relief, in addition to such important requests of a local nature as can be approved without too great a drain on the talent pool available.

"The stars of Hollywood have served eagerly. They have gone wherever we have asked them to go, have worked unbelievably long hours, have endured actual hardships gladly, with the restrictions of time and endurance the only limits to their efforts."

What to do publicity-wise about a reopening of a picture which everything conceivable has been done about the first time around was demonstrated by the Los Angeles Daily News recently when "Sergeant York" came back to town to start again its way through the mill from first-run on down. The Daily News reprinted its original review in full under an italic line giving date of first publication.

Autry Swaps Mounts

Gene Autry saddled old Champ for the last time, for the duration, and rode into "Bells of Capistrano" at the close of a week which witnessed the start of 17 features and raised the production level to 56. On completion of the picture the cowboy star whom exhibitors voted fourth among Money-Making Stars of the screen year before last and sixth last year will swap his horse for a plane, reporting August 1st for duty as a non-commissioned officer in the Air Corps. Autry's enlistment cancels out eight pictures he was to make for Republic's 1942-43 schedule. "Bells of Capistrano", like "Call of the Canyon" and "Stardust on the Sage", which are completed but unreleased, is a 1941-42 commitment.

WARNERS LIST 38 THIS YEAR; PRC PLANNING 42 FEATURES

Five Regional Meets Set by PRC, While WB Will Hold Six Local Parleys

Product announcements for this season and next were made this week by Producers Releasing Corp. and Warner Bros. PRC has set 42 pictures for 1942-43. Eleven of 24 features previously announced are set as to cast, six are already completed or in production, and six more are to go into production before the new season officially opens.

Warners announced that its release schedule for the current season will total 38, including 35 new features, two reissues and "Target for Tonight," the British documentary. The Warner schedule is reported to be the smallest numerically in the company's history.

Leon Fromkess, vice-president in charge of production of PRC, declared this week that the company will maintain its record of 100 per cent delivery "as promised," and that the program will be budgeted at higher figures than heretofore.

In summarizing the new product, O. Henry Briggs, president of PRC, said, "Our program is well-balanced. The product is keyed to pure entertainment. Our problem is identical with that of the exhibitor," he declared, "to conform as closely as possible to the trends of the times by providing entertainment that dramatizes realistically the events that are paramount in the world today, and at the same time provide a sufficient quota of pictures that will prove diverting and maintain the public morale."

Of the 42 PRC productions announced, six are listed as V-Specials, as follows: "A Night for Crime," starring Glenda Farrell, with Lyle Talbot, Lina Basquette and Ralph Sanford; "The Lady From Chungking," starring Anna May Wong; "Fury of the Jungle," starring Buster Crabbe; "The Yanks Are Coming," with Henry King and his orchestra and Jackie Heller; "Queen of Burlesque" and "Corregidor."

18 Westerns Are On PRC Schedule

In the second group are the Pacemakers, of which there are 10, as follows: "The Devil's Sister," starring Anna May Wong; "Tomorrow We Live," with Ricardo Cortez and Jean Parker; "Queen of Broadway," starring Rochelle Hudson; "Dead Men Walk" and "The Black Raven," both starring George Zucco; "Raiders of the Pacific," "Boys of the Road," "Secrets of a Co-Ed" and "Madagascar."

In the Spitfire group are eight: "Baby Face Morgan," with Robert Armstrong, Richard Cromwell, Mary Carlisle and Chick Chandler; "Permit to Kill," "Atlantic Wolf Pack," "The Ghost and the Guest," "Prison Ship," "Miss M. from Moscow," "Among the Missing," "Alaska Outpost."

The 18 Westerns are: six Adventures of "Billy the Kid," starring Buster Crabbe with Al (Fuzzy) St. John; six Lone Riders, starring Bob Livingston, with Smoky Moore and Don Barclay; six Texas Rangers, with Art Davis, Tex O'Brien and Al St. John.

First of a series of five regional sales meetings of PRC will be held in New York this Sunday, July 19th, and Monday, July 20th. Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales, will preside. Franchise holders, branch managers and salesmen from New York, Boston, New Haven, Philadelphia, Albany, Buffalo and Washington will attend.

Mr. Greenblatt announced that subsequent regional meetings will follow in Chicago, July 25th-27th; Atlanta, August 1st-3rd; Dallas, August 8th-10th, and San Francisco, August 15th-17th. Leo J. McCarthy, assistant sales manager in charge of the Western division, will accompany Mr. Greenblatt to the Chicago and San Francisco conferences.

FOUR FEATURES END WARNER '41-'42 LIST

Four releases between now and September 1st will complete Warner Bros. current season schedule of 38 pictures, according to a company announcement issued in New York this week. They are: "Wings for the Eagle," scheduled for release July 18th; "Escape from Crime," July 25th; "Gay Sisters," August 1st, and "Spy Ship," August 15th. There is no August 8th release.

Warners Plan Six Regionals

Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager for Warner Bros., presiding at a three-day district managers' meeting at the home office last week announced that the company will hold six regional meetings this year instead of the customary national sales convention.

The meetings will be conducted by Mr. Kalmenson as follows:

Eastern and Metropolitan districts, headed by Sam Lefkowitz and Norman Ayers, respectively, and including the New York, Albany, Boston, Buffalo and New Haven branches, July 23rd-24th in Boston.

Central and Mid-Atlantic, Harry Seed and Robert Smeltzer, including Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C., July 27th-28th in Pittsburgh.

Midwest and Prairie, William S. Shartin and Hall Walsh, including Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis, July 30th-31st in Chicago.

Southern, Ralph L. McCoy, including Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Memphis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, August 3rd-4th in Memphis.

West Coast, Henry Herbel, including Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, and Seattle, August 10th-11th in San Francisco.

Canadian, Wolfe Cohen, latter part of August.

Home office executives who will attend the regional conferences include Joseph Bernhard, Roy Haines, Norman H. Moray, Arthur Sachson, A. W. Schwalberg and Mort Blumenstock, S. Charles Einfeld also will come east from the coast for the meetings.

Particular attention to localities affected by war conditions will be stressed at the conferences, in addition to discussion of new season sales policies. Winners of the recently completed annual sales drive also will be announced, and the prizes presented to the respective district managers, branch managers, bookers, salesmen and others participating in the sales campaign. Award money in the amount of $25,000 will be distributed.

At last Thursday's session of the home office district meetings, Mr. Kalmenson assured managers that promotions from the ranks would continue to be the company policy.

Joseph Bernhard, vice-president and general manager, discussed production aims and sales possibilities for the coming season. He pointed out that under war conditions, people are getting a maximum of pleasure out of motion pictures and that exhibitors generally seem to be inclined toward maximum playing time. Sam Schneider also addressed the meeting, dealing specifically with financial matters as they pertain to current conditions. The sessions continued on Friday and the meeting concluded Saturday.

W. Stewart MacDonald, assistant treasurer, presided at the three-day conference of Warner Bros. theatre contact managers and field supervisors at the Hotel Lincoln, which was addressed by Mr. Bernard, Harry M. Kalmine, assistant general manager of Warner Theatres; Leonard Schlesinger, James M. Brennan, Harry Goldberg and other home office executives. A golf tournament was held Sunday at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club.

They arrived on the west coast last Thursday and are expected to return to New York by the end of this week.

U.S. Product Facing Opposition in India

U.A., Paramount Managers Here Cite Import Cut, Finance Restrictions

That the Government of India is less than friendly to American film companies was the opinion expressed Tuesday by the sales managers there of two companies, Paramount and United Artists. The men, arrived in New York Monday, and interviewed separately, agreed Tuesday that the 50 per cent slash in American film imports, arbitrarily imposed, and the Indian Government's action in financial matters, made the situation difficult.

Frank Kennebeck, the Paramount manager, commented on the Indian refusal to allow transmission to America of more than 50 per cent of remittable income. He explained that "remittable income" is that remaining after deduction of expenses. However, he noted, the 50 per cent remaining was not allowed to be touched by the Americans.

Carlos Moore, United Artists' representative, also assailed the Indian import restrictions, and he remarked that endeavors to place American film agents on the "essential" list, as were other American industrial representatives, failed.

Both agreed the reasons lay in the Indian Government's newly exercised independence, motivated by frustrated nationalism; and by the corollary desire to build the native Indian film industry, which by now has become a serious threat to American pictures.

Of 1,300 theatres, 900 play Indian films exclusively. Another 100 split their playing time. Only 300 can be claimed as definite "possibilities" for American pictures.

The Americans found reassuring the position of these 300 houses, however, since they are in key cities. Additionally, both reported tremendous business—not despite the war, but because of it; for war activities and increasing numbers of troops have caused theatres to be crowded. Mr. Kennebeck estimated business at 15 per cent above normal when he left on May 21st.

No Business Reported in Burma Since December

He added, of Burma, that there had been no business reported there since December 23rd. Twelve prints were lost to the Japanese, and presumably they may be showing them, he asserted.

Conditions in India are really "wartime conditions"; there is no "fooling" about the blackouts; they are "complete," the men agreed. The gasoline rationing is more severe than ours, they noted—three gallons per month.

However, effects of the latter on theatres are slight, Mr. Moore reassured, because automobiles were almost exclusively the prerogative of wealthier Britons. Rubber is plentiful, it was noted.

Transportation difficulties were besetting American exchanges during May, the men agreed. Shipments were delayed. Those that normally took one month, took two and three. Priorities had to be obtained on railroads. Mr. Kennebeck told of receiving 48 telegrams from exhibitors in one day complaining because they had not received prints.

However, the UA and Paramount executives both said they had no print shortage. Backlogs were built by both. Mr. Moore estimated he left sufficient prints to carry on for one year. Mr. Kennebeck said he left eight films as a reserve.

On the Indian antipathy to American financial and cultural arrangements, both men agreed that the Indian Government had seriously crippled the rapidly growing, and in some respects able, Indian film industry, by commandeering all raw stock in India, for "propaganda" purposes, and for training the Indian Army.

Cutting of Allotments May Cripple Industry

Although they did not know the statistics of the situation, and were not able to say how much would be released to the many Indian film companies, they noted the enormous length of such films, some running to 16 reels and more, and also immensely popular because of their length. Slashing of film allotments, in a country at war and dependent upon imported raw stock, is certain to cripple the Indian industry, the two men felt.

Of the 50 per cent restriction on imported American films, it was remarked this was based upon what the Indians called a "typical year," that which ended August 31, 1939; that is, the amount allowed is 50 per cent of that imported during that year. However, Mr. Moore complained that the year chosen was particularly bad for the American companies.

Mr. Kennebeck said that before he left the Indian Government was allowing a 12 per cent increase in imports of second prints.

This October 31st, one million rupees will have been "frozen" in India, Mr. Kennebeck estimated. The blocking law went into effect October 31st, 1941. The one million rupees is approximately $333,000.

Admissions in Indian theatres run from two cents to 75 cents, depending on the class of patronage and theatres, of which there are many. All soldiers are admitted at half price. In many of the theatres, there are no seats; and, after running a five-hour native show for a native audience, a hose is turned on the floor where they sat, and a new audience is allowed in.

There are three shows daily, in the key city houses, upon which the American film companies base their estimates on how a picture will fare. The last show is at 11:30, dictated by the late eating habits of the country, it was added.

Both offices were based at Bombay. Paramount closed its Calcutta office, Mr. Kennebeck's explanation being that at the time the Japanese appeared ready to walk in from Burma. United Artists' office there remained open, Mr. Moore asserted. The companies moved their films in both cities to safe places outside.

Mr. Kennebeck, an Omaha native, was to stay in New York this week, then join his family there.

Mr. Moore awaited the arrival from Latin America of Walter Gould, United Artists foreign sales manager.

India Is Seen as Post-War Mart

If the United Nations can keep the Japanese out of India, that country will emerge as one of the richest nations in the world for the motion picture industry after the war, according to Alanson Tyrrell, Indian representative for the RCA Manufacturing Co., Camden, N. J., who has been stranded here since the outbreak the war.

India, he said, has more motion picture producing studios than Hollywood. Just now, according to advices that RCA has received, picture business is more "as usual" in India than any other place in the world. RCA does a big business in Photophone recording and reproducing equipment, as well as theatre supplies, in India, where theatres, like the masses, can't be counted accurately. Of the many studios in India, 20 are RCA-equipped. Native made pictures are at a new high, due to their quality and quantity, while American and British motion pictures have fallen off 40 per cent, according to Mr. Tyrrell.

"More and more theatres are being given over to native pictures in India," he said. "Good pictures sometimes run a full year or more in one theatre, playing to packed houses. That's because everybody in town will see the picture before its run is out—and there are a lot of people."

Bombay itself has about 20 theatres, he said. Pictures themselves run long. Double features, if anybody in India ever heard of them, are not necessary. "Go to one showing of one picture and you'll stay the afternoon," said Mr. Tyrrell. "The people of India take their religion seriously and everything is tied up with religion, even the films. That's where the Axis may capitalize on something unless the United Nations are careful. Axis propaganda of all kinds is being pumped into India and that sort of thing may get into the films. And if so, a grown-up medium will tell hordes of easily-persuaded people."

Circuit 'Reap' Deals Closed

Paramount has closed deals with both the Skouras and Century circuits in New York for exhibition of "Reap the Wild Wind" at advanced prices, Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, announced this week.

The picture previously had been sold to Loew's New York Metropolitan circuit, also at advanced prices. Paramount's current season deals with the three circuits were delayed for months, due to inability to agree on terms, with the result that a number of early season blocks were sold away from Skouras and Century.

Deals for all remaining available Paramount product, however, were closed with Skouras and Century circuits recently, and full product deals were closed with Loew's several months ago.

At his retirement in 1939 after 21 years as head of the Jefferson and the East Texas company, the firm operated over 70 theatres in the Southwest. He was a member of the company's directorate up to the time of his death.

NEW STUDIO TIEUP LOOMS IN EXCHANGE STRIKE

Networks In Dispute with AFM on Recording Ban; SPG Gets CIO Charter

The major studios, which have weathered many strike threats, are faced with another, in the country's eighth month of war. The strike of office workers at five Los Angeles exchanges has developed into a potential threat of a studio tieup.

The Screen Office Employees Guild, which called out workers last week in the exchanges of Paramount, United Artists, RKO, Columbia and MGM, met Monday night to lay the groundwork for a studio strike, in which other unions presumably would be enlisted, under the aegis of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions.

Late Tuesday pickets were withdrawn by the office guild from five exchanges on Los Angeles' film row as a truce was called pending further discussions with distributors. Guild leaders were to meet Thursday evening with E. J. Mannix of MGM and Pat Casey, distributors' representatives.

The conference embraces painters, office employees, scenic artists, machinists, cartoonists, and the IATSE laboratory technicians' union, totaling about 7,000 workers.

The exchange strike resulted from an impasse over contract negotiations. The studio strike was threatened if companies hire "strike-breakers" in the exchanges.

Paul Watkins, attorney representing the exchanges, last week asserted the "guild appeared unable to recognize operating and financial problems of the exchanges. It issued an ultimatum to which the exchanges would not conform, and the strike followed. It is extremely unfortunate, particularly in view of the pledges by leaders of the American Federation of Labor, that their disputes would be settled through orderly processes, and not by strike."

From New York and negotiating for the exchanges were J. S. McLeod, MGM; A. W. Schwalberg, Warners; C. J. Scollard, Paramount.

The office workers' union has been seeking a contract embodying minimum wages, union shop, sick leave guarantees, vacations with pay, severance pay, classification of workers by duties. The wage increases asked were said to represent 40 per cent to the companies.

Ban on Recordings Hits Broadcasters

In another field—radio—this week there was brewing a finish fight between the powerful American Federation of Musicians and the broadcasters. Essentially concerning the edict by James Caesar Petrillo, musicians' union chief, that members make no more transcriptions of recordings after July 31st, it developed ramifications this week that pointed the way to a possible national strike against radio.

The Minneapolis-St. Paul musicians' local is in stalemated negotiations with station KSTP there, a National Broadcasting Company affiliate; and it was believed Mr. Petrillo might use the dispute as a lever in whatever counteraction broadcasters may take against his recording edict.

The AFM may order all late-hour NBC network dance programs off the air, to aid its Minneapolis local. The action probably would force the network to cease servicing that affiliate, and therefore make it come to terms with the union.

The National Association of Broadcasters' board met in Chicago Tuesday and Wednesday. What action they contemplated against Mr. Petrillo's ban on record manufacture was not disclosed before the meeting.

An interested visitor to Chicago, those two days was Mr. Petrillo, who left New York headquarters Sunday.

The musicians' chief came before the general public prominently last week by banning the Saturday afternoon broadcasts over NBC of the high school orchestra from the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich.

The broadcasts had been held every summer for 12 years. The first concert this season was scheduled last Saturday, NBC notified the camp's director Friday evening, that it had been cancelled.

Reportedly, Mr. Petrillo objected because the musicians were not professional. Press opinion on the Petrillo moves was reflected last week by the Chicago Sun, saying: "Your way is no way to run a union, Mr. Petrillo. You're right back where other men were when they threw rocks at reapers."

Publicists Guild Gets CIO Charter

The Screen Publicists Guild, New York, on Thursday, July 9th, received a charter from the CIO's United Office and Professional Workers of America, as Local 114.

It also elected Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., of 20th Century-Fox, its president, succeeding Joseph Gould, now in the Army. Lewis Merrill, president of the UOPWA, presented the charter to the guild, remarking: "We can all achieve our own objectives, and serve our country best, by doing them together."

Another speaker was Saul Mills, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. Greater New York Industrial Union Council, which the Guild joined this week.

306-Empire Merger Talks Broken Off

Negotiations for amalgamation of Local 306, New York projectionists' union, and the Empire State Motion Picture Operators' Union, its rival, were broken off last week by the latter's board.

The negotiations have been carried on intermittently for years, and were recently resumed under the sponsorship of the State Labor Relations Board.

Empire board members charged Local 306 attempted negotiations with the Century circuit during the labor board conferences. Century is the Empire union's largest situation. It was also felt the labor board should rule on two Empire complaints, that its members were discharged and replaced by local 306 men. The instances cited were the Center, Long Island City, and the Yorktown, mid-Manhattan.

The withdrawal of Empire from merger negotiations brought a rejoinder late last week from Herman Gelber, Local 306 president, one of whose election platform planks had been the settlement of the Empire-306 dispute.

He said: "Despite the difficulty of the negotiations, we carried them through to a point where we saw success in the offing. From the action of Empire we can only conclude that it is not a free agent and that it is still being dictated to by certain exhibitors who have always claimed that they own the union. It is these exhibitors who are interested in preventing the merger for their selfish ends."

Readers Guild Plea For Transfer Denied

The Screen Readers Guild application to the National Labor Relations Board, that its certification as collective bargaining agent for readers in the New York offices of the majors, be transferred to the CIO's Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, was denied last week by the board, which commented that the readers' union failed to prove that a majority of the readers in the offices either participated in, or voted on, the negotiations which resulted in affiliation of the union with the CIO.

David Golden, president of the SRG before it was dissolved so that its members might join the CIO's SOPEG, said Monday he would attempt to obtain a rehearing before the NLRB. Mr. Golden is temporary chairman and organizer for the SOPEG.

The latter last week asked NLRB recognition as the bargainer for clerical workers at the 20th Century-Fox New York exchange.

David Grapes was elected president and business manager of the York, Pennsylvania, theatre employees union, Local BM-118. Other officers are: Edward Casey, vice-president; Jeanette Hibner, secretary; R. P. Reamer, treasurer, and Marguerite Elicker, financial secretary. The union voted to purchase a $500 war bond.

Average War Bond Sale $854 Monthly

WAC Asks Speed on June Returns; Loew's Seen Reaching $1,000,000

Average sale of War Bonds is running over $854 per theatre per month, it is reported. Of the 15,000 theatres participating in the industry's War Bond and Stamp drive, 4,900 reported June sales of $4,183,268 as of Monday, according to the War Activities Committee, national headquarters for the campaign.

WAC officials urged all exhibitors to rush their June reports to headquarters so that a complete record may be sent to Washington.

Loew's theatres expected to hit the $1,000,000 mark on Tuesday, the company reported last Saturday, on the basis of totals already recorded for bond and stamp sales. To stimulate the campaign on Tuesday night Loew's houses gave as a "bonus" to every purchaser of a $25 bond or more a courtesy ticket to the next attraction at each theatre. For the first five weeks of the drive, ending July 1st, the circuit reported total sales of $772,757, of which $426,000 was in bonds and the remainder in stamps.

The circuit last week was designated an official issuing agent for War Bonds, Series E, by the Federal Reserve Bank, and has stocked $250,000 of bonds of various denominations, according to a company announcement. The move followed appointment last month by the Federal Reserve of Skouras Theatres, the first film houses to become bond issuing agents. Sales at 66 Skouras theatres rose to more than $125,000 weekly, it was said, when immediate bond delivery rather than pledges was made available to patrons.

Pittsfield War Bond Show Nets $190,000

At the reopening of the Capitol Theatre in Pittsfield, Mass., last week, a war bond "premiere" brought $190,000 in bonds. Two divan tickets were given with the purchase of each $1,000 bond and the house was scaled down to balcony seats with $25 bond purchases. The Capitol is operated by Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., of which Nathan Goldstein is president.

Last Thursday night in Jersey City, the Skouras theatres held a city-wide rally in cooperation with the local Treasury Department office to stimulate war bond sales. Lowell Thomas was the principal speaker at the rally, held in Journal Square in front of the Skouras State. A gala parade featuring representatives of 28 United Nations followed the rally. City officials, veterans' groups, the local press and other organizations participated in the event.

Tri-States circuit, Des Moines, announced this week sale of $42,000 in bonds and stamps in 50 theatres of the circuit during the first four weeks of the drive.

Hartford theatres sold $135,622 in bonds and stamps during the May 31st-July 5th period. In the first three weeks of the campaign, 30 Rochester houses sold $14,491 in bonds and stamps, according to Jay Golden and Lester Pollock, co-chairmen of the local drive. Downtown theatres accounted for $12,391 of the total.

Nearly $200,000 in bonds were sold in a three-way tieup conducted by the Orpheum Theatre, San Francisco, station KQW and the San Francisco Chronicle last week in connection with the preview of Universal's "Eagle Squadron." A feature of the program was a KQW lobby quiz of producer Walter Wanger, director Arthur Lubin, and players Leif Erickson, Evelyn Ankers and Margaret Hayes.

Members of the Better Films Council of Sheboygan, Wis., and the Mariner Girl Scouts of that city sold $1,381.85 in bonds and stamps during June in the Sheboygan Rex and Majestic, local Warner theatres.

Si Fabian and John E. Manning, State Commissioner of Internal Revenue, on Tuesday spoke on the subject of promoting war bond sales at a luncheon meeting of New Jersey Allied, at the Newark Athletic Club, Newark. Harry H. Lowenstein presided.

Local 751, Treasurers and Ticket Sellers Union of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, purchased $2,500 worth of war bonds through the American Theatre Wing War Service, it was announced this week in New York by Antoinette Perry, chairman of the Wing board of directors.

BUFFALO HOUSES TO PUSH VICTORY FILMS

Representatives of more than 400 theatres in the Buffalo area pledged that they would present a Victory Film at every show, at a meeting at the Buffalo Variety Club, addressed by Harry Brandt of the War Activities Committee. Brandt cited the "poor record" of the local industry in prosecuting the war effort in theatres, and called attention to the responsibility of the film trade in the war situation.

Army-Navy Fund Hits $2,077,900

More than 12,000 theatres raised $2,077,900 in collections for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief Fund in the industry's recent campaign, it was reported this week in New York by Nicholas M. Schenck, national chairman. This total surpasses any money-collection drive ever made in the motion picture theatres of the country, it was said. The next highest figure was recorded for the 1942 Infantile Paralysis Fund, which reached a total of $1,450,000.

When E. A. Schiller, treasurer for Southern California theatres on the Army-Navy drive, sent in a check for $149,900, the fund's total went over the $2,000,000 mark.

Mr. Schenck said that several hundred theatres still have failed to report their collections and he urged that they do so at once as the fund cannot be dispersed until all checks are in. It is expected that the final total will be close to $2,250,000.

Walter Winchell donated to the Navy Relief Fund the $5,000 he received for making a trailer for "Tales of Manhattan," the 20th Century-Fox film, it was reported in New York last week.

A check for $1,120 was presented to Navy Relief last Wednesday by the Columbian Club, social organization of Columbia Pictures. Seth Raisler, president, presented the check to Lieut. Comdr. John H. Auerbach of the Third Naval District, at the home office. The money represented net proceeds of the club's 12th annual dinner dance, arranged in cooperation with Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Lieut. Comdr. Auerbach and other Naval officers.

Times Square Rally For China Relief

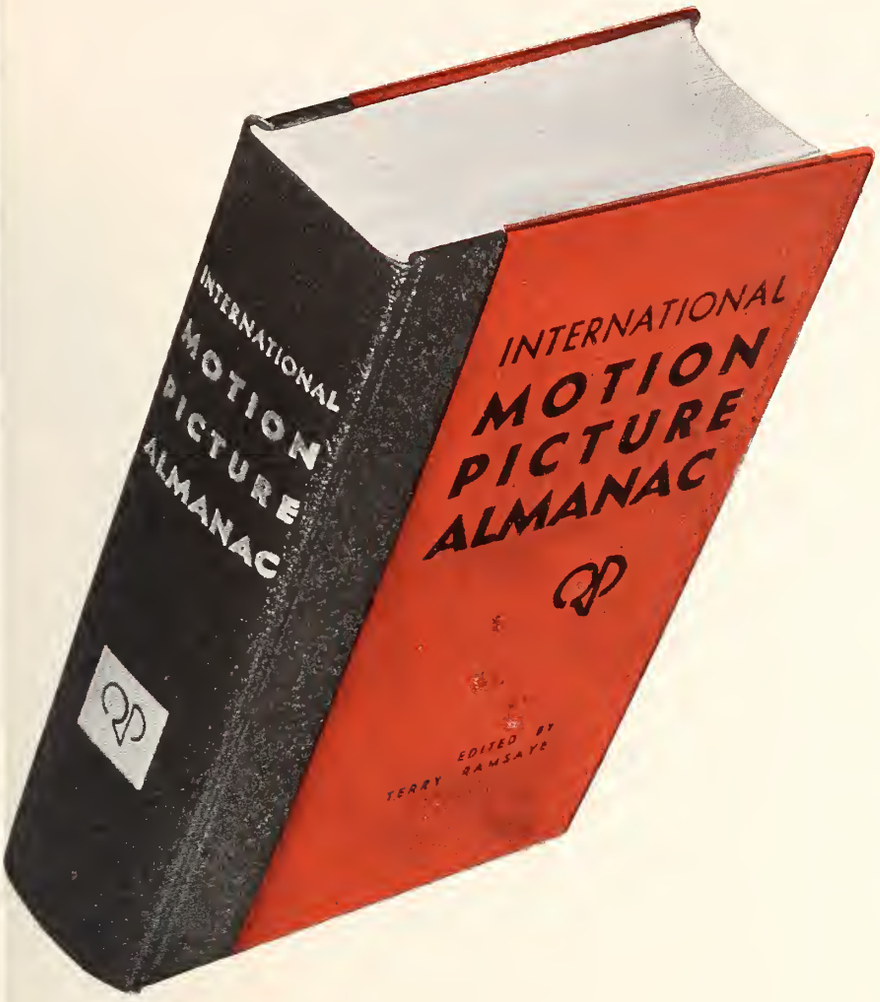
Several thousand persons, including many home office employees of film companies, attended the noon rally for United China Relief last Thursday in New York's Times Square. The rally was sponsored by the Film War Service Council, composed of local film industry unions.

James G. Blaine, chairman of Civilian Defense Volunteers of New York and treasurer of United China Relief, was the principal speaker. He declared that China has helped the United Nations by immobilizing Japan, and said "we are fighting for a fundamental issue, the freedom of man." Herman Gelber, chairman of the Council and president of Local 306, also spoke. Among the entertainers who appeared was Eddie Matthews of the cast of "Porgy and Bess."

Must Avoid Waste of Film, Harmon Tells Exhibitors

Motion picture film is almost the chemical equivalent of gunpowder and should be handled with every possible care to avoid waste of materials directly useful in warfare, Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee, told 500 St. Louis exhibitors and theatre employees at a meeting last week.

Worn-out parts in projection machine which are causing unnecessary wear on film should be replaced at once, Harmon said, as it is easier to get materials for those parts than for film.



War Show Draws 292,486 in Week

More than $161,000 was paid by 292,486 persons to the Army War Show in its six-day stand at the Pitt Stadium, Pittsburgh, with $5,900 paid by more than 23,500 visitors to the show's static exhibit of paraphernalia, armaments and trophies at Ruskin Field there. Attendance and gross figures in Pittsburgh exceeded the show's previous marks in Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Crowds attracted to Pittsburgh by the War Show helped theatre attendance. Downtown at the Stanley, Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra drew $34,500, second-highest gross in the theatre's history. Loew's Penn, with "Juke Girl," grossed an above-average $17,500.

Film Men In Drive

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston has appointed Harry McDonald, RKO Theatres divisional manager to head the theatre committee on the drive for United States Navy enlistments. The drive will continue through July. Martin J. Mullin of the M & P Theatres, Harold Stoneman of the Interstate Theatres Corporation, and Howard Burkhardt of Loew's Theatres, have been named by Mayor Tobin to assist Mr. McDonald.

UA Executives Conferring on Product Plans

While rumors ranging from establishment of its own production company to formation of a talent pool and to outright purchase of a studio property swept Hollywood, United Artists executives and owners postponed until late this week continuation of conferences which opened last week Friday at Pickfair. Up to midweek no official declarations had eventuated and responsible parties refrained by agreement from indicating the trend of discussions.

Prior to the opening of the meetings last week it is known that company executives arriving from New York had consulted individually with contributor producers regarding possibilities of an early start on productions which have been pledged. Although Hunt Stromberg is down for four pictures to be delivered during the coming year and David O. Selznick has been mentioned as hopeful of delivering two, no cameras have been actually turning on feature product for UA release for several weeks.

Among the difficulties reported confronting Mr. Stromberg, William and James Cagney and others pledged to deliver product to UA is the scarcity of star talent formerly available in the open market but now, in most cases, obtainable only on a loan basis, with the major studios turning down cash offers in favor of trade deals which give them the use of talent controlled by other plants. General knowledge of this condition has given rise to the rumors of UA plans to create a talent pool but individual UA personalities unofficially deny any such project is under consideration.

Basis of the other rumors mentioned above is the continuing although officially unconfirmed understanding that independent producers in the UA group, in common with others, are delaying the start of production until presidential and treasury tax recommendations placing ceilings on individual incomes have attained finalistic disposal.

Some independents have pointed out informally that the making of a half million dollar bank loan for production of a film from which a maximum of say $25,000 can be retained as profit is not a prospect conducting to production of more than one picture a year, nor hurrying with that one. The talk of starting a production company and of buying a studio property is believed to have stemmed from this line of reasoning.

Mayer Heads Columbia Studio Publicity

Howard J. Mayer, Chicago publicity and newspaper man, has been appointed Columbia studio publicity director, succeeding Lance Heath, resigned.

Seattle Golf August 6

The annual picnic of the Northwest Film Club, Seattle, will be held this year on August 6th at Lake Wilderness. Plans are now being made for the event, which will include an afternoon session of competitive sports, followed by dinner and an evening of dancing and entertainment.

Actors Equity Orders Vote on Free Shows

The Actors Equity council this week ordered a secret ballot taken when a producer requests a cast to contribute its services for a benefit performance.

The new order, it was said, resulted from charges filed against Maurice Evans in connection with a benefit performance of "Macbeth." Equity members are not required to appear without pay unless they consent to do so and a majority of the company must consent before any appearance without compensation. In the Evans case five members of the "Macbeth" company claimed that the producer brought pressure to bear to induce their consent.

Nazis Operating in Ukraine

A new company to operate the motion picture theatres in the Ukraine has recently been formed by the Reich Commissariat. The United States Department of Commerce reports that this information is gathered from the German press.

The new organization, to be known as Ukraine-Filmgesellschaft (Ukrainian Film Company), will function as a subsidiary of the Zentrale Filmgesellschaft Ost (Central Film Company for the East) and will manage all the property of the former Soviet industry, it is stated.

At present approximately 50 motion picture theatres are giving performances in that area. It is said that the films to be furnished by the new Nazi company will have Ukrainian subtitles.

No Ad Postage Increase

The House Ways and Means Committee has abandoned its plan to incorporate increased postage rates for advertising and circular (third class) mail in the new tax bill which it is to submit to the House. Plans for increased postage on second class mail (publications) also were dropped. Apprised by Postmaster General Frank C. Walker that new postage schedules could not be prepared before next January, the committee voted to turn the proposal over to the House Post Office Committee for consideration when new rates are submitted.

Shift Warner Managers

The following changes have been made by Warner Bros. Theatres in the Philadelphia territory: Harry C. Olmsted, manager of the Capitol, York, Pa., goes to the Warner, Reading, succeeding William B. Huffman, who was transferred to the Warner, Atlantic City. Gilbert Fradeneck, manager of the Rialto, York, becomes manager of the Capitol there. Lou Colontuono, assistant manager of the Logan in Philadelphia, goes to the first run Fox in a similar capacity.

Sees Ohio Fairs Active

Former Ohio Governor Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, honorary president of the Ohio Fair Managers' Association, estimates that "more than 80" of the 92 Ohio fairs will be held this year, despite suggestions for elimination by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Director of Transportation. The fairs will yield the Government "probably $1,000,000 in Federal taxes on gate receipts," Mr. Cooper declared.

Peeler in Ad Post

P. P. Peeler has been appointed manager of the Florida theatre and will handle the advertising of the Florida State Circuit theatres in St. Petersburg. He succeeds Walter Tremor, transferred to Atlanta.

Successor to Autry Sought

Republic is searching for a successor to Gene Autry, cowboy star, who has enlisted in the Army Air Corps and will report August 1st for induction as a non-commissioned officer. The studio began its search three weeks ago, as soon as it was known that Autry planned to enlist.

James R. Grainger, Republic president, was not prepared this week to make any announcement concerning what effect the enlistment would have on the new season's program. It is known, however, that the star's absence from the studio for the duration deprived the production schedule of four western specials and four program pictures.

Republic has ready for release an Autry special. "The Call of the Canyon," and a program western, "Stardust on the Sage." Another Autry special, "The Bells of Capistrano," is now in production.

Meanwhile, the studio has been giving more attention to its other cowboy star, Roy Rogers. Now in his fourth year at Republic, Rogers has been making eight singing westerns a year for the studio. This year the company designated two of his future yearly quota as specials, which is the same arrangement under which Autry has been working.

Rogers, who is 29 years old, is classified as 3A. He is married and has an adopted child. Other dependents are his mother and father.

Autry, meanwhile, has sold his rodeo stock to the Lightning C Ranch of Dublin, Tex., and with the presentation of his own rodeo at Soldiers Field, Chicago, this month will leave the rodeo field as a producer.

The future activity of Smiley Burnette, Autry's comedy associate, was said to be in doubt at the studio.

Chicago Club Meets

The second anniversary luncheon and final meeting of the season of the Reelfellows Club of Chicago was held at the Congress Hotel there last week. A family picnic for members will be held July 26th and meetings will be resumed in the Fall.

Sabottka Promoted

Herbert Sabottka, who has managed a number of theatres for the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, has returned to the home office in Seattle, and it is understood he will be city manager there for the circuit.

Tschauder Heads Club

Max Tschauder, president of the Springfield Theatres Association, Springfield, Ill., and city manager there for Frisina Amusement Company, has been elected president of the Springfield Lions Club.

Gradess Promoted

Milt Gradess has been promoted to head of the poster and advertising accessories division of the Universal exchange in Philadelphia. He succeeds George Finkelstein, who resigned to enter a defense industry.

Commonwealth Acquires

The Commonwealth Amusement Corporation has taken over the Youngclaus interests in the Lyric and Sterling theatres, Superior, Nebraska. The circuit's Victory Theatre, Eudora, Kansas, opened last week, with Fred Lawn managing.

Johnson Buys Out Knuth

Ed Johnson, Spokane, has bought out Jake Knuth, his partner in the Motor-In Theatre, on the Seattle-Tacoma highway. Mr. Knuth is reported opening another house.

Following the engagement of "Mrs. Miniver," the MGM record-breaking picture at the Music Hall, which probably will remain for an eighth week, the next attractions will be: "Bambi," Walt Disney's cartoon feature, released by RKO; "Talk of the Town," Columbia film starring Jean Arthur, Cary Grant and Ronald Coleman, and "Tales of Manhattan," 20th-Fox.

WAR 'COMPETITION' FACTOR IN CLEARANCE DISMISSAL

Arbitrator Urges 'Permanent Clearance' for the Duration in Los Angeles

War became a direct factor in a motion picture arbitration award for the first time this week when H. Eugene Breitenbach dismissed the sixth Los Angeles case, a clearance action by Sidney Pink and Joseph Moritz for the Century theatre, third run Los Angeles house.

Citing present and probable future competitive effects of blackouts, tire and gas rationing, and impending reductions in the number of prints, Mr. Breitenbach asserted that to reduce the Century's clearance behind the Manchester theatre would be unfair and unreasonable and would result in excessive demand for prints 21 days after first run. For the duration, "permanent clearance should be established and operated, subject to the vicissitudes of war," he wrote.

The Century's request for a reduction from 35 cent availability, 35 days after first run, to 40 cent availability 21 days after first run was dismissed. Costs were divided among the complainant, the five defending distributors and the Manchester, Figueroa and Strand theatres, intervenors.

In addition to the war factor and the burden on distributors which a clearance reduction would impose, the arbitrator found that the competition between the Century and Manchester and the earlier run Figueroa and Strand was sufficient to justify protection.

Public transportation is sufficient to maintain this competition even in the face of wartime auto curtailments, he added. At the same time this transportation difficulty adds to the problems of distributors in shuttling prints over the extensive Los Angeles area. A reduction for the Century, he wrote, would prompt theatres in the citys 20 other clearance zones to seek similar relief, greatly overtaxing the supply of 15 prints already serving more than 20 theatres on 21-day availability.

"Multiply the Los Angeles problem by the number of similar key city problems throughout the country, and it appears that the resulting increase in print cost alone would be prohibitive," the arbitrator wrote.

"Moreover, it is common knowledge that the war-time restrictions on critical materials, such as film, may drastically limit the number of prints which each distributor may be allowed to make, and may render essential the curtailment of the number of simultaneous showings. The solution of the print problem would not be rendered less difficult by the advancement of playing positions in any situation not absolutely necessary.

"The emergency blackouts may require persons to stay closer to their homes. Although the evidence does not clearly disclose that such a trend already exists, in any event, the inconvenience of not being able to see motion pictures close at hand and at the earliest date possible, is a very slight sacrifice in time of war. The problem presented by this proceeding at any rate is the establishment of a policy for permanent clearance that will be fair and just to all parties," Mr. Breitenbach concluded.

BUYS THEATRE, COMPLAINT ENDS

The specific run complaint of the Liberty Operating Company, operator of the Liberty, Akron, Ohio, against Loew's, Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers ended in a satisfactory denouement last week. The Liberty was purchased by owners of the Highland theatre which figured as the intervenor in the case. The complaint was withdrawn from the Cleveland arbitration board by all parties concerned "without prejudice" to renew it, according to announcement on Monday by the American Arbitration Association.

The Liberty had claimed that it formerly had first-run product for the West Side of Akron until the Highland was built and that films then went to the Highland first. The Liberty sought to have its former schedule restored.

Representing the Highland were Meyer Fine and P. E. Essick. Robert C. Menches acted for the Liberty. A new corporation for the theatre will be formed, it was said.

San Francisco

The Cerrito theatre, in El Cerrito, Calif., won a declaration of maximum reasonable clearance in the fifth San Francisco case on July 6th from Murray Draper, arbitrator.

He directed 20th Century-Fox, MGM and Paramount to grant not more than one day's clearance to the State theatre, in Richmond, and directed that any clearance between first run Oakland and the Albany theatre, in Albany, Calif., and the Oaks and Rivoli theatres in Berkeley be fixed at the availability dates now specified in contracts "less, however, the number of days by which 81 days exceeds the number of days from Oakland first run closing to such Cerrito availability date as may result from application of the Richmond maximum."

The award was unusual in that it computed the one day clearance behind Richmond from the opening date at the State theatre. Costs were assessed against the three defendant distributors.

Mr. Draper found that the State had been unfairly moved ahead of the Cerrito in February, 1942. The custom of fixing clearance from closing date he ruled was insufficient in the case, and finding that there was no specific prohibition in the decree fixed the Cerrito margin after the State opening, declaring:

"Real justice can be done only by restoring Cerrito to its playing position ahead of State. Since I believe this to be beyond my authority, I feel that State's maximum clearance over Cerrito should be reduced to the barest minimum. This would be one day after opening, rather than closing, of a feature at State."

New York

New York's 28th case, the Drake Amusement Corp. versus the Big Five, filed last December, and seeking reduction of clearance from seven to 1-3 days after the Rockaway and Lynbrook, first run houses, was dismissed this week by Arbitrator Arnold Brock. Costs were equally divided. Intervenors were Columbia and Strand, Far Rockaway; Lynbrook, Lynbrook; Grove, Freeport, Fantasy, Rockville Center, and Rivoli Hempstead.

The arbitrator found that none of the existing clearances were unreasonable and that none should be reduced. He also found that the complainant had not been unreasonably delayed in play off of pictures or in pictures becoming available to him, and, accordingly, denied the demand for overall clearance. He also noted that intervenors had presented evidence of a highly competitive situation.

Los Angeles

The San Val Drive-In, in Burbank, Los Angeles, L A.'s sixth case, won a victory over first run houses in Burbank last week. J. M. Rust, arbitrator, ordered clearance of the Burbank theatres over the San Val reduced from 63 to 28 days. Mr. Rust rejected the contention of the Major, Loma and Magnolia theatres, operated by Minor Estates, that they increased prices from 28 to 33 cents, declaring his ruling was based on conditions existing March 5th when the complaint was filed.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia's 20th case was filed on Monday by the Plaza theatre at Milford, Delaware. A clearance action entered by the Sidney Theatre Company, it named the 20th-Fox, RKO, MGM and Paramount and first run Wilmington theatres 70 miles away, asserting that they held an unreasonable clearance. The Warner, Queen, Rialto, Grand and Aldine theatres were cited. The complaint says the distributors refuse to license on a reasonable basis.

St. Louis

Hearing on the clearance complaint of Victor Thien, owner of the Palm theatre in St. Louis, subsequent run house, against Loew's, began last Wednesday, with former Circuit Judge Thomas C. Hennings, Sr., as arbitrator.

Mr. Thien was the only witness at the first session and he testified new runs that have been created have enabled his competitors to play ahead of him. He asks that the clearance between his theatre and the Will Rogers, which has intervened, be reduced from 7 days to one.

Mr. Thien won a clearance complaint against the other four distributors on an appeal—a decision which is regarded by Thien's lawyer, Ben Tepper.

Louis M. Sosna, Mexico, Mo., exhibitor, on Monday appealed the award of Ethan A. Shepley dismissing three distributors from his some run complaint. Mr. Shepley, in the eighth St. Louis demand and Mr. Sosna's third arbitration action, dismissed RKO, Paramount and Fox, ordering Warner Brothers to grant some run to the Sosna theatre.

Chicago

The Oriental Theatre case, Chicago's sixth, was postponed again on Monday, from July 15 to July 28th, by agreement of the parties.

Army Extends Run of "This Is the Army"

New York will see "This Is the Army," Irving Berlin's successful 1942 version of his 1918 all-soldier hit, "Yip, Yip Yaphank," for at least six months, according to information from Washington.

The revue opened at the Broadway theatre July 4th for a limited engagement of four weeks but the demand for tickets and the show's earning power have been so great that War Department officials have decided to extend the engagement beyond the original schedule.

"This Is the Army" is said to have ended its first week on Broadway with a gross of $87,000 and more than $50,000 in advance receipts. Motion picture rights to the revue have been bought by Warner Bros. with an initial payment of $250,000. The company announced this week that the film version would be in color.

Personnel Changes

Gene DuBarry, manager at the Lincoln, New Haven, for several years, is now at the Capitol, Milford, Conn. John Ricciuti, for many years connected with Harry Gibbs in independent distribution, is assistant booker at the Paramount exchange in New Haven. Al Montefalco, formerly of the Roxy, New Britain, Conn., is working for George LeWitt, at the Strand, Plainville, Conn., succeeding John Polka, now in the Army.

MGM Sets Film

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has assigned Gordon Kahn to work on an original screen play, "The Invisible Front," using for background the short wave propaganda broadcasts to Axis countries by the United Nations. Sam Marx will produce.

Production Up In Sweden

The Swedish film industry continues to make progress, according to the United State Department of Commerce.

Approximately 25 Swedish-produced feature films were shown for the first time during the last quarter of 1941, the Department reports. Several were based on famous Swedish literary works—one of the most notable being "The Struggle Goes On," a story of medical life.

In addition, the filming of short subjects has gained a prominent position in the industry, and many of these covering a variety of subjects were released.

The Department reports that foreign films are still popular in Sweden. The showing of United States productions does not appear to have decreased, and several British, German and French films also were seen in the past season. Because of world conditions, it has been difficult for Swedish producers to maintain normal trade.

An agreement has recently been reached by Swedish and Norwegian producers with regard to payment for Swedish films shown in Norway in 1941. This agreement, it is understood, also provides for a direct exchange of films between the two countries.

Music Hall Celebrates "Miniver" Record

A luncheon to celebrate the record run of MGM's film, "Mrs. Miniver," at the Radio City Music Hall, was held by the management on Friday at the theatre, with Walter Pidgeon, costar with Greer Garson in the film, Jan Struther, author of the book on which the picture is based, and William Wyler, director of the wartime drama, as guests of honor. Gus Eyssell, managing director of the Music Hall, was host at the luncheon.

Mr. Pidgeon was expected to arrive in New York from Hollywood on Wednesday. Mr. Wyler, now a major in the Army, was to arrive from Washington Friday morning, and Miss Struther was scheduled to return to the city the same day from a tour of leading cities in which she was guest at various "Miniver" premieres.

New Theatre Planned

Among other contracts let by the Government for new buildings at Fort Des Moines, located near Des Moines, Ia., is that for a new theatre, construction to be completed by September 15th. The Fort is being reconditioned and new buildings erected to expand facilities for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, the first to be ready to house approximately 1,000 women by July 20th when the first class of WAAC officer candidates arrives for training.

Open Nashville House

The Crescent Amusement Company's new suburban Nashville, Tenn., theatre block, costing an estimated $400,000, was opened last week. The development includes the Melrose theatre, seating 1,000, seven stores, and a 16 lane bowling alley to be operated by Crescent. The theatre is within a mile of two war housing projects and an Army aviation classification center.

Build Air Corps Theatre

A motion picture theatre is under construction at Lee Field, near Meridian, Miss., to augment present facilities for the entertainment of the soldiers stationed at the Meridian air base. Work should be completed by the middle of August, according to B. R. Snow, area engineer in charge.

With Ray Milland and Betty Field as the Cugats, and Patricia Morison as Myra (the old flame who won't be put out) it's one of the year's gayest pictures!

Warners Show New Inter-faith Film in Capitol

Warner Bros. this week brought to the screen of its circuit theatres in Washington, D. C., the 10-minute film, "The World We Want to Live In," produced by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The picture is being distributed gratis. The Warner showings represent the first bookings into motion picture theatres which the film has had since it was produced last December shortly after Pearl Harbor. Distribution until now has been entirely through churches, schools, colleges, trade unions, patriotic and civilian defense organizations.

At conference headquarters in New York this week, a spokesman revealed that efforts are now being made to arrange similar theatre bookings, without charge, to other circuits, including Paramount and Loew's.

Wendell L. Willkie, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox, Alfred E. Smith and Eddie Cantor appear in the one-reeler, warning against the propaganda of dictators and urging Americans to fight against the dangers of religious and racial prejudice propagated by the Axis. Mr. Willkie warns: "And remember this: The people who have lost their freedom in other parts of the world made the mistake of listening to those who told them that they could attack religious freedom and still have the other freedoms. It just can't be done."

Since the Conference was organized in 1928, this is the first time the medium of the screen has been utilized to promote inter-faith good will, because, it was pointed out by a representative of the organization, "the screen is the most vital force for education."

Seen by Exhibitors in Connecticut in June

The film was viewed in June at the joint meeting of the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, in New Haven. Following the screening, a discussion was held by exhibitors as to the method and time of distributing the picture in New England. I. J. Hoffman, B. E. Hoffman and Dr. J. B. Fishman arranged the showing in cooperation with Herbert L. Seamans, regional director of the National Conference in New Haven.

In addition to Mr. Willkie, Mr. Smith and Mr. Cantor, others who make a plea for tolerance in the picture are ex-Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Rabbi David deSola Poole and Father Ford.

It is estimated that more than 500,000 persons already have seen the 16 mm version of "World" at non-theatrical showings, excluding the hundreds of soldiers who have viewed it at Army post theatres, by arrangement with Army chaplains.

The picture originally was produced in a 17-minute version, but was cut to 10 minutes in order to fit more readily into organization and theatre programs. At present there are 10 prints of the 35 mm. version and 15 prints of the 16 mm. Raymond Rich Associates, New York advertising and publicity firm, produced the film for the National Conference.

"ARE YOU SKIDDING?"

"Is the hot weather making your 'regulars' head for the beaches?" asks L. B., midwestern exhibitor. "If it is—book the kind of picture they WANT in summer. Give 'em light laughs; chuckles; fun; brisk comedy—like 'Are Husbands Necessary'!"

Paramount's "Are Husbands Necessary" is the picture Boxoffice says will "send any audience away with a light heart." Certified summer boxoffice!

'Laffmovie,' New House, Plays Comedy Only

The "Laffmovie," a new type of specialty theatre devoted exclusively to motion picture comedy, has been opened in New York by James Mage, until the war a circuit operator in Europe.

Audience response during the first two weeks of operations was described on Monday as excellent by Mr. Mage. The theatre, he asserted, has provided the answer to a desire for a straight bill of "escapist" entertainment. At a noon matinee on Monday the theatre, on 42nd Street west of Broadway, was playing to better than 60 per cent of capacity.

The laugh movie presents a two-hour bill of straight comedy continuously from 8 A.M. until after midnight. One feature is combined with a group of short subjects. All are strictly laugh material. Even the serious note of a newsreel is excluded from the show. Price scales range from 11 to 30 cents.

Mr. Mage, who came to this country 10 months ago, was the head of the Cinephone circuit, with theatres in Paris, Brussels and London. He originated the "all laughter" theatres in Paris before the war, successfully operating two "Cinerie." He has opened the New York house in the old Eltinge theatre, formerly a subsequent run house with a legitimate and burlesque history.

The "Laffmovies" will be expanded to other cities in the near future, Mr. Mage said, citing the success of a New York house as proof of audience appeal.

He compared the theatre to specialty shops in competition with the diversified offerings of a department store. For a mixed bill motion picture audiences will continue to patronize the larger theatres, he said. But there also is need for theatres specializing in news, comedy, mystery, westerns or other types of entertainment, he asserted.

Patronage at the house, which opened on July 1st, has been of a general and diversified type, Mr. Mage said. Women and youngsters have constituted a large part of matinee audiences, while the house has drawn good general audiences for evening and late shows from the Broadway transients.

He has advertised the theatre in New York papers, stressing the "Laffmovie" idea rather than a particular bill. Mr. Mage expressed the belief that the house would build up a steady clientele, as did his Paris ventures.

On Monday the bill included Laurel and Hardy in "Great Guns," a Disney cartoon, the Three Stooges, and Paramount's "Speaking of Animals." Other bookings have included "The Awful Truth," Chaplain reissues, Edgar Kennedy, and other standard comedy short releases. The bill changes each Wednesday.

Wilcox Discusses Plans with RKO

Herbert Wilcox was in New York this week to discuss with N. Peter Rathvon, president of RKO and Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Radio Pictures, plans for his next production starring Anna Neagle, which will be made in Hollywood prior to their return to England.

Mr. Wilcox said that the story will have a Canadian and London background dealing with the momentous events of today. Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox just completed a tour of nine Canadian cities from coast to coast with the Celebrity Parade, collecting in excess of $250,000 for the Air Marshal Bishop Fund in aid of the Air Cadet League of Canada. "They Flew Alone," the latest production of Mr. Wilcox and Miss Neagle, is now being prepared for early release by RKO.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO SING: Virginia Weidler, Ray McDonald—Small musical show which pleased on family night. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main—We all like Wallace Beery. It's a swell picture and our theatre was packed for both shows. Running time, 101 minutes. Played June 12-13.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Logger and mill worker patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Business was below average. Now that Mickey Rooney is married people think he should stop playing these love sick kid parts. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—A good crowd for this time of year enjoyed the humor in this one a lot. This Hardy picture goes back to stressing humor and home life, the thing that made the series popular in the first place. Many patrons thought it the best of the series in a long time. Running time, 93 minutes. Played July 1-2.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Very good picture. Did better on this one than on "Babes on Broadway." Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 14-15.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Logger and mill worker patronage.

HONKY TONK: Lana Turner, Clark Gable—Good Gable picture that just did ordinary business. No comment from patrons, good or bad. Played June 19-20.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—This was a very entertaining picture that held the interest of our audience right up to the finish. Taylor and the entire cast turned in splendid work. Business fair. Played June 21-22.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—The best gangster picture I have run so far. Read in another trade paper where an exhibitor in Idaho had turned it down, on the say-so of that particular trade paper, on account of the liquor and cigarette smoking. This exhibitor missed a good bet on this one, and probably lost money on what he had in its place.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

KATHLEEN: Shirley Temple, Herbert Marshall—This was better than any of Shirley's earlier pictures, especially the last few she made with Fox. My people were anxious to see Shirley again, from the way they turned out. Did not hear anything but good for this picture.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

SMILIN' THROUGH: Jeanette MacDonald, Gene Raymond—It's the same old story that's been done so many times before but this is the best ever. Drew patrons over terrible roads and all were loud in praise for it. Played June 22-23.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This is a small town natural. People came for this one that I have not seen in my house before or since.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

TWO-FACED WOMAN: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas—This is no good for small towns, too sexy and draggy.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Judy Garland—Lavish musical played late and just did average business. Played June 26-27.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Here is a picture that did nice business and was a treat to run. We had an excellent print and it is in my opinion the most beautiful color job to date. The grandeur and magnificence drew gasps of delight from the audience and though the story and acting are very mediocre it pleased and drew 100 per cent. Played July 3-4.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

GOLDEN GLOVES: Richard Denning, Jean Cagney—A pretty good feature for its type. Running time, 69 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

LIGHT OF THE WESTERN STARS: Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayer—A good western. Has a good amount of action for a western. Running time, 60 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen—A flop here. Fairly good comedy. Running time, 82 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MY FAVORITE BLONDE: Bob Hope, Madeleine Carroll—We did average business on this picture. The audience reaction was that it was the poorest Bob Hope picture in some time. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MYSTERY SEA RAIDER: Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon—A good action feature for its kind. Better than I expected. Running time, 77 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE DESERT: Bill Boyd, Andy Clyde—This is not up to Boyd's standard; he had better stick to the good old USA instead of running around with a bunch of Arabs in the desert. He is out of place with the Sheiks, etc.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

RAIDER OF THE TIMBERLINE: Bill Boyd, Andy Clyde—This was just an average Western. My people don't go for Boyd very much.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—Here's a good one from Paramount at last. This should suit any of the critics. Here's hoping Paramount will keep them coming like this one.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

Republic

JESSE JAMES AT BAY: Roy Rogers, "Gabby" Hayes—Just a fair western.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This old 1940 Autry did fair business and pleased Autry fans. But there are many people who won't come out to see Autry here. Played June 15-16.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE OZARKS: Weaver Brothers, Elviry—Another good small town picture from Republic.—J. M. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—This was a natural for a small town such as mine. They turned out in droves for this one. Judy was all right, too.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

TWO GUN SHERIFF: Don Barry—Pleased the Friday-Saturday action fans. Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Parmount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

OBLIGING YOUNG LADY: Joan Carroll, Edmond O'Brien—This is good for any case of blues. Kept the whole house in a continuous laugh.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

PARACHUTE BATTALION: Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly—This was very timely and went over well. Good for top half of double bill. Played June 26-27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

VALLEY OF THE SUN: Lucille Ball, James Craig—Nice action-full western with lots and lots of comedy. Most audiences will get a kick out of it. It paid its own way and that's all I can expect in the summer here. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth—Good feature. Would have enjoyed it more if it was shorter. Running time, 125 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

CONFIRM OR DENY: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett—Double billed with U. A.'s "Fiesta." Good comments. Only thing wrong was the weather, heat wave. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 25-27.—C. A. Smith, Regent Theatre, Chapleau, Ontario, Can. Railroader patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST: Alice Faye, John Payne—A musical that flopped. Story fair. Running time, 90 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN AT LARGE: Marjorie Weaver, George Reeves—Just fair. Business not much on this one. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Logger and mill worker patronage.

MARRY THE BOSS'S DAUGHTER: Brenda Joyce, Bruce Edwards—Strictly "unessential." Not even strong enough for a small town double bill. Played June 26-27.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI: Maureen O'Hara, John Payne—Book this one by all means, and give it extra playing time, the best money maker in many years. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 16-18.—Rex Theatre, Masontown, Pa.

United Artists

CORSICAN BROTHERS: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.,

Ruth Warrick—This is a good action picture. My gross beat "Babes on Broadway." Everybody satisfied on account of an entirely different story.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. General patronage.

ELEPHANT BOY: Sabu—80 minutes of practically wasted film. No good. Running time, 80 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

MY SON, MY SON: Madeleine Carroll, Brian Aherne—Very poor and long feature. Was not enjoyed very well by my customers. Running time, 116 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

BURY ME NOT ON THE LONE PRAIRIE: Johnny Mack Brown—A good western. Hope they can keep them as good as they have been so far. Running time, 59 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

NICE GIRL?: Deanna Durbin—The second Durbin played here. Hit an all time low on the first one and this one went even lower. Don't know why but they just won't come to see a Durbin picture here. Played June 29-30.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Thetare, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

LETTER, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—Miss Davis is a flop in these roles. Story just mediocre.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW: Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman—This was a howling success so far as customers' reaction was concerned. The gags weren't new but no one complained and there were no kicks of any sort, which is unusual. Played June 24-25.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

Paramount

HANDS OF VICTORY: Headliners—Just a filler on hand reading. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MECHANICAL MONSTERS: Superman Color Cartoons—Superman cartoons are very silly. 'Tis a little like Popeye, but Popeye is funny, while Superman is supposed to be serious. Even the kids make fun of it and the animation is terrible. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

PARACHUTE ATHLETES: Sportlights—Entertaining reel showing our boys in training to become parachute jumpers. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

INDIA AT WAR: March of Time—This is the second part of the material on India and does a good job of finishing off the ideas started in the first one. It might be a good idea in a few spots to play both of the India issues together. I think a class spot could get away with it in good shape. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

INFORMATION, PLEASE, NO. 3: Cornelia Otis Skinner is guest again in an issue with an extra dose of comedy. They like them quite well. Running time, 11 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WILFUL WILLIE: Terrytoons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

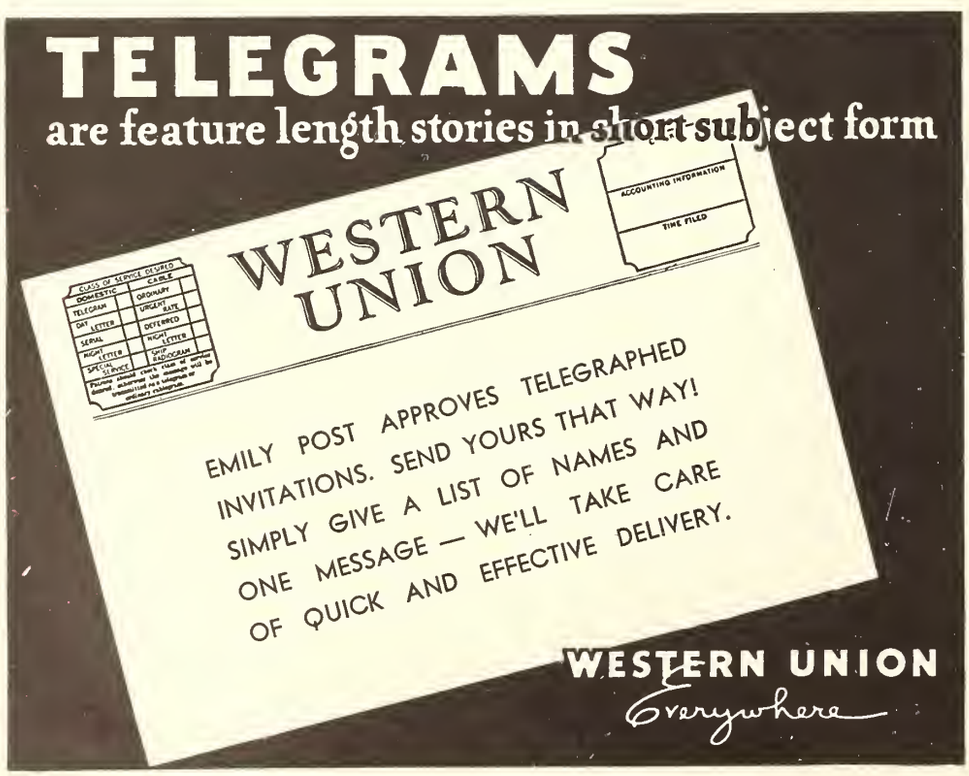
FIGHTING FIRE BOMBS: Official U. S. Victory Films—Worth showing to those who want to learn something. It is just what the title indicates. Running time, 6 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.



FOOD FOR FREEDOM: Official U. S. Victory Films—Still okay as a filler. Running time, 3 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MR. GARDENIA JONES: Official U. S. Victory Films—This plug for the U. S. O. is a nice little picture in its own right and features Ronald Reagan, Fay Bainter, Laraine Day, and Charles Winniger. It has some story material and is worth playing everywhere. Running time, 12 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred N. Y. Small college town patronage.

POTS TO PLANES: Official U. S. Victory Films—Played this rather old, but is still okay and helped fill time. Running time, 3 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Vitaphone

LIGHTS FANTASTIC: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—The lighted billboards on Broadway come to life with attempts at humor that did not go over very well here. Joe's Restaurant was the only one they laughed at. It was a good basic idea. Try again, Mr. Schlesinger. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

QUIGLEY AWARDS

The Quigley Awards for the Second Quarter of 1942 have been handed to the winners and so we can look back and consider what they mean. Each of the men who has received a Plaque, a Medal or a Citation has a symbol which says to all who may see it, "Here is a showman". Of course, there are many showmen who do not receive visible evidence of their capabilities but are nevertheless worthy of the term. But they are needlessly hiding their lights under a bushel.

This was the first judging under your editor's stewardship; it is impossible to let the occasion pass without noting our thanks to the judges who so diligently took the time to scan each and every campaign submitted before picking the three Plaque winners and five Medal winners. Messrs. Lou Metzger, Ernest Emerling and Michael Edelstein gave a lot of their valuable time to the judging. One cannot help but be impressed by the importance with which these judges look upon the Quigley Awards.

The Quigley Awards are open to anyone who meets the simple requirements. They were printed in full on page 48 of the issue of July 11. Circuit or independent theatre, big city or small town, it makes no difference. You may be a manager of one theatre or a publicity man for several. No special presentation of material is required—in fact, it is discouraged. A simple letter stating your accomplishments, together with clippings or photos showing what you have done, will merit the consideration of the judges.

Good Publicity

The executives of the motion picture industry are a cosmopolitan group of individuals. A study of the International Motion Picture Almanac's biographical section reveals that birthplaces and origins are as widely varied as those of any other industry. Likely as not, some sales manager or advertising chief was born right in your town.

Lew Carroll, an exploiteer for Universal, on duty in Portland, Maine, thought he could get some good publicity on the fact that the vice-president and general sales manager of the company, William A. Scully, was a Portland man who had made good in a big way and so could benefit his home town.

So Lew successfully "sold" the hard-boiled but regular city editor of the Portland Sunday Telegram and Press Herald a story with photo of Bill Scully's career in the industry, plus a timely note or two on how it was that Portland was getting the first playdate on "Lady In a Jam" which Carroll was publicizing and also noting the additional information that "Eagle Squadron" would shortly be shown there.

A Plaque Winner Has His Say

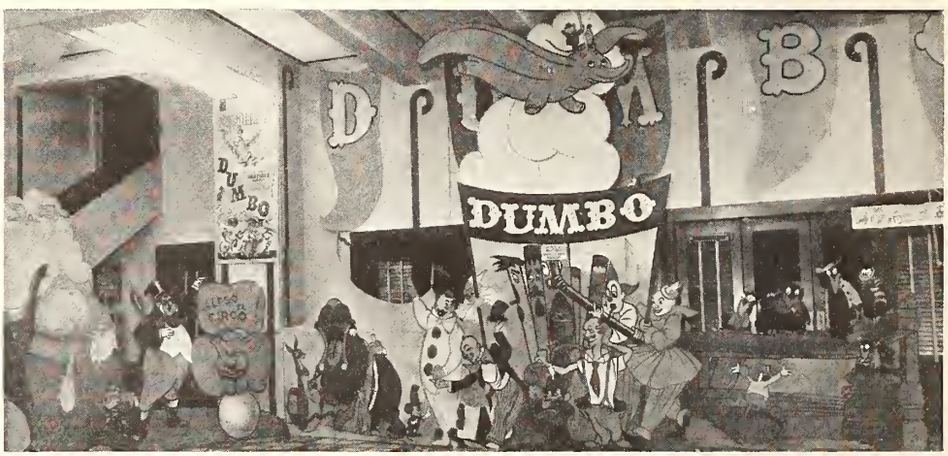
Clayton Cornell, of the State Theatre, Tupper Lake, N. Y., who won a Quigley Award Plaque in the Second Quarter, sums up the feeling of many Round Tablers when he says: "I hasten to express my pride in winning this Award. It is most gratifying to see the fruits of one's effort in any endeavor and my ambition for the current year has been realized in part because of the Judges' selection. I would like to add that a major reason for my participation in the Quigley Awards contest is, perhaps, a selfish one, in that I glean much knowledge and information from the contents of the Round Table section and the efforts of the membership. Again, I am proud to have been selected for this Award."

Joiners

The "Joiners" Club is growing rapidly. A few weeks ago, we suggested the desirability of the managers joining as many organizations as possible, mentioning the fact that the most successful showmen are members of many different types of groups.

Among the latest to report their activities in civic affairs are Max Tschauder and David Jones, both of Springfield, Illinois. The former is city manager for Frisina Theatres in Springfield and is the new president of the Lions Club; Jones, advertising chief for the Kerasotes houses in Springfield, is the new president of the Springfield Junior Chamber of Commerce. So in the city in which Abraham Lincoln, one of the greatest showmen of all time in his own way, rose to fame and fortune, two more showmen are leaders. —BOB WILE

ORIGINALITY



Resourcefulness Is the Keynote for Many Showmen Today

Millard Ochs, manager of the Strand Theatre, Akron, ran a dance contest in connection with his engagement of "Syncopation". Gene Krupa happened to be in town playing at an opposition house, so he presented prizes to the winners. That's Millard second from left. The soldier-boy winner is a local lad home on furlough.

Lester Pollock held a preview screening at Loew's Rochester of "Mrs. Miniver". Left to right are Rabbi Bernstein, Mayor Dicker, Pollock and Sol Heumann, prominent citizen of the city.

This lobby display, showing a lot of ingenuity, appeared in the Cantarell Theatre, Merida, Yucatan, Mexico.

Bert Levi, display director of a famous Buenos Aires shoe store, is an energetic and publicity-minded fellow. Here's the display he worked out in conjunction with Arturo Placentini, Paramount publicity man, on "Aloma of the South Seas".

Twin Bed Window Sells "Twin Beds"

The main window of one of the largest furniture stores in town was promoted by George L. Rabb at the Suffolk Theatre, in Holyoke, Mass., to help exploit his engagement of "Twin Beds." About 50 scene stills were spotted about the window with two large signs tied directly to the picture title and the store's twin bed sale. Five times each day an announcement on the opening was landed over the cooperating merchant's radio program.

Through a tieup with the Royal Crown Cola people, Rabb promoted the drivers in the area to post on the windows of all stores they service photos of Joan Bennett with Cola copy and theatre imprint. Five and dime chain also featured a window display of Calox Tooth Powder and stills, plus a cutout head of Joan Bennett tied directly to the picture. Imprinted bags were distributed at counters, exchange heralds passed out along the main streets and assorted stills placed in various windows about town.

Special Window Display Sells "York" for Grady

What proved to be a decided "stopper" was the window display arranged by E. C. Grady in advance of his date on "Sergeant York" at the Vic Theatre, in East Chicago, Ind. The center of the display featured a large American Flag, which was flanked on the one side with a life size cutout of Gary Cooper in the uniform in which he appeared in the picture. Also featured at the base was a replica of the battle scene, where the Germans surrender to York. Atop the display was the title in cutout letters with a large "Y."

Effective Street Ballyhoo Sells "Butch Minds Baby"

A sure-fire stopper for a street ballyhoo was that used ahead of "Butch Minds the Baby" at the Manos Theatre, in Hollidaysburg, Pa., by Charles Coussoule. Stationed in front of the theatre was a perambulator in which was placed a baby doll. On guard right next to the carriage was a large live dog with his name "Butch" on a card around his neck. Card, planted atop the carriage read: "Butch Minds the Baby."

MacArthur Buttons Offered on "Gentlemen from West Point"

Tri-State Theatres are dedicating their openings of the 20th Century-Fox feature "Ten Gentlemen From West Point" to General Douglas MacArthur, and starting with the Capitol Theatre, Sioux City, Ia., engagement, are distributing thousands of lapel badges with the MacArthur button. Don Shane, manager of the Sioux City Capitol Theatre and Wally Allen are responsible for this stunt.

Frye's "Dope" Capsules

5,000 little gelatine capsules marked "DOPE" and five thousand "X" laugh ration cards were distributed in Memphis, Tenn., by B. E. Frye to herald the arrival of "The Magnificent Dope" at the Loew Palace.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

MRS. MINIVER (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer): Early runs of this picture indicate that the most successful approach is a dignified one, devoid of sensationalism or circusy stunts. Reviews in national publications have been uniformly splendid; some time in advance, therefore, start using blow-ups of them in the lobby. Use quotes from reviews in ads, programs, trailers, etc. An idea inaugurated by M-G-M for the New York engagement may well be copied elsewhere—supply cards to patrons on which they can vote for the ten best pictures of all time. The cards are self-addressed to the theatre and on the reverse side bear places for writing the names of ten pictures; there are a number listed on the card from which voters may make selection. The Mrs. Miniver Rose is a hybrid rose which should be matured next month. Local greenhouses' cooperation can be enlisted at that time. However, any rose may be named the Mrs. Miniver Rose and can be presented to selected feminine patrons on the opening night. The press book has a suggested cooperative ad which should not be too difficult to promote. The book, by Jan Struthers, offers numberless opportunities for promotions; all of the readers of the Mrs. Miniver stories should be made familiar with the picture. A pocket-book edition of the stories has been published; cooperation of newsstands can be enlisted to push this. A Group Discussion Guide has been published by the Educational and Recreational Guide Committee and is available for those theatres playing the picture in the fall when the schools reopen. The outstanding scenes in the picture can be played up by special scene still layouts in the newspaper; among them are the sequence depicting Mrs. Miniver with a Nazi flier in her kitchen and the one showing life in a bomb shelter.

UNITED WE STAND (Twentieth Century-Fox): Due to the unusual nature of this picture—it is a compilation of newsreels of the past 25 years—cooperation of the newspapers should be a bit easier than usual on this film; photos of outstanding news events of the past 25 years can be published, with prizes for readers correctly identifying the particular event depicted. An outline of the flags of each of the 28 United Nations can be printed on special heralds or in the newspapers for use as a coloring contest for the younger element. This would be educational and would probably, therefore, be encouraged by school authorities. Lowell Thomas is the narrator of the subject; it might be feasible to obtain a spot announcement after his nightly broadcast. Lobby boards, newspaper ads, programs and all other advertising material can stress the fact that the cast of the picture consists of Kings, Emperors, Presidents, Dictators, Generals and Prime Ministers.

Governor Aids Search for "Woman of the Year"

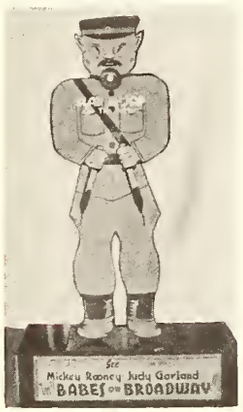
Approaching the president of one of the outstanding women's clubs in North Little Rock, Ark., Sam B. Kirby, advertising manager of the Malco theatres there for the engagement of "Woman of the Year" at the Rialto, sold the organization on the idea of nominating the local Woman of the Year.

The Committee submitted a list of 12 names which Kirby personally called, informing them of their nomination and inviting them to be on hand at the theatre a certain night, at which time Governor Homer M. Adkins introduced each woman selected and told what social, charitable or civic endeavor each was interested in. Each of the 12 women were presented with a Citation, while the "Woman of the Year" was awarded an engraved cup and a corsage from Katharine Hepburn.

Both newspapers, although convervative, gave considerable space to the stunt, and Kirby reports that telegrams were sent to the theatre from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Hepburn. Radio coverage included an interview with the winner following her public stage presentation during which the picture title was mentioned.

"Wife Takes a Flyer" Gets Teaser Campaign

Using a small hand mimeograph machine, John LaDue for his date on "The Wife Takes a Flyer" at the Paramount, in Glens Falls, N. Y., printed up pay envelopes with copy on the outside reading: "We dare you to give this to your husband or boy friend unopened." Inside the envelope was a card with this message: "Please, honey, be sure to take me to see that swell comedy hit 'The Wife Takes a Flyer' starring Joan Bennett and Franchot Tone." The envelopes were distributed to women only on the streets, in office buildings, factories, markets, etc.



WAR SHOWMANSHIP

Award Contenders Sell Bonds and Stamps, Run Rubber Matinees

War Showmanship has been largely devoted to the sale of War Stamps and Bonds, although recent weeks have brought, from contenders for the Quigley War Showmanship Award, evidence of rubber matinees and other types of effort devoted to the War.

On this page are detailed some recent entries for the Quigley War Showmanship Award.

Pete Kempf, assistant manager of the Guthrie Theatres, Guthrie, Okla., knew that everyone would enjoy hitting a Jap on the nose, so he used his ingenuity as well as his artistic skill to provide a means for so doing. The accompanying photo shows the little Jap figure, just about life size built out of two-inch material and solid enough to withstand the kick of a mule. It was painted with bright enamel colors and given a coat of varnish. The bullseye pad on the chin was padded and a button placed inside. When the figure was "socked on the button," a horn mounted in the base was sounded. The figure was mounted on a swinging base on top of the box with a spring on each side. When the Jap was hit, he swung back and forth in the same manner as a boxing dummy.

Impressive was the United We Stand Rally held in Times Square and conducted jointly by the New York War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department and the exploitation staff of 20th Century-Fox for the premiere of "United We Stand" at the RKO Palace Theatre. Three hundred girls in costume representing the 28 United Nations attended the patriotic rally and then marched to the theatre led by the Fort Jay Army Band.

Gold Star Mothers sell War Stamps and Bonds in the lobby of the Strand Theatre, Akron, Ohio, managed by Millard Ochs.

Minton Gets Out Manual For "Pearl Harbor"

In advance of the dates on "Remember Pearl Harbor" at the Jefferson Amusement Company East Texas theatres, Fred Minton, director of publicity, distributed a special mimeographed seven-page manual addressed to managers and packed with exploitation ideas. The booklet was compiled by Irving Rust, of the Dallas booking department.

Among the suggestions offered are displays of army rifles, machine guns, grenades, incendiary bombs, etc., for war effect, the marquees to be draped with red, white and blue bunting and a display of the American and Allied Nations flags.

Juke boxes or combination phonograph-radio machines played military marches and patriotic numbers, particularly the modern tune "Remember Pearl Harbor." Tieups were made with the Army, Navy and Marine Recruiting offices for recruiting in the lobbies during the engagement. Also a tieup was made with the Office of Civilian Defense for a model of an incendiary bomb with an Air Raid Warden in the lobby to explain how they are extinguished. First aid demonstrations by wardens in the lobby were also held.

Merchant Cooperation Enlisted

Newspaper coverage included stories in advance and current papers stressing the Jap menace with as many references to Pearl Harbor as possible. Newspapers were also sold on the idea to use the line "Remember Pearl Harbor" at the end of every article scattered among the want ads in each edition for a week prior to the opening. Merchants were also approached for the same break in their ads, guest tickets being offered to persons guessing the number of times the line appeared in the paper for a week.

To sell the title of the picture, window displays were promoted with the title tied in as follows: Food stores: "Nourishment for Defense—Build healthy bodies"; Clothing: "Keep Cool in Body as Well as in Mind"; Drug Stores: "Keep Well for Defense"; Laundry: "Conserve Your Clothes"; Service Stations: "For Defense, conserve fuel, use such and such oil," etc.

For newspapers or library essay contests were held, subjects connected with the Pacific War, historical, geographical, current, etc., with promoted prizes given to winners who appeared on the stage. A map drawing contest for prizes was also held in the lobbies and prominent downtown store windows. Also suggested for the opening night is a benefit sale of tickets with some prominent local organization sponsoring the event and advertising it.

More Dollars for War Bonds

By F. K. HASKELL
Portland, Ore.

Some day from Yesler Way to Pine —
It may be night or morning —
We'll hear the sirens screech and whine,
But NOT an air raid warning.
They'll have a gay, triumphant note,
And tell with noisy splendor
We've grabbed the Axis by the throat
And forced complete surrender.

That Hitler's gang has folded up
And Hirohito's beaten,
And that they drink the bitter cup
And boastful words they've eaten.
We'll celebrate with music gay,
With shouts our gladness voicing.
We'll build no ships or planes that day.
We'll spend it in rejoicing.

We'll rock the heavens with our din,
And with our joyful spirit.
In Tokyo, Berlin and Rome
Our gallant men will hear it.
Our sirens with triumphant screams,
Will smack our eardrums sweetly,
Proclaiming that the Axis dreams
Have been blacked out completely.

And thus we'll greet the dawn of peace,
The day we'd long awaited.
Oppressed in Norway, France and Greece
Will then be liberated.
And when the heart of man responds
And builds a new world decently
We'll be glad WE BOUGHT THESE BONDS
AND HAVE YOU DONE SO RECENTLY?

"The Cabart Theatre salutes the mothers and dads whose sons are in the service of the U. S. Armed Forces," says Murray Peck in Long Beach, Calif.

Atmospheric Street Bally Helps Exploit "Moontide"

For his double bill of "Moontide" and "It Happened in Flatbush" at the Paramount, in Syracuse, Dick Feldman used two of his ushers for a novel street ballyhoo. One, dressed as Jean Gabin in old seafaring clothes carried a sea bag over his arm with credits on his back. The other walking next to him was dressed in a baseball suit with a mask, glove, ball, bat and baseball shoes properly carded with credits. The two lads dressed so differently created considerable comment.

Feldman also reached the head of the local free French group, the official agreeing to boost the picture at their opening. Through the announcer from WAGE, who daily broadcasts the ball games, all members of the local team were invited to the opening of the picture.

The orchestras in both hotels played dance numbers composed of songs only with the word "Moon" in it and dedicated the program to "Moontide." In addition a radio program was landed along the same lines.

LaDue Buries Old Man Gloom Ahead of "The Male Animal"

A hearse was driven through the streets of Glens Falls, N. Y., as part of John LaDue exploitation on "The Male Animal" at the Paramount Theatre. Promoted from a local undertaker the hearse was bannered with copy reading: "We're Going to Bury Old Man Gloom. He laughed himself to death when he saw," etc.

In addition, John distributed tinted heralds, the outside of which carried catchline "For Men Only." The inside featured appropriate gag tiein copy with title, playdates, etc.

Piano on Street Aids "Honky Tonk"

Folks in Lexington, Ky., were recently treated to the sight of two colored boys out front of the theatre, one playing hit tunes from the picture "Honky Tonk" and the other singing, all as part of Arnold Feldman's advance on the date at the Opera House. The sides and back of the piano were appropriately lettered with title, cast and playdates. In addition, Feldman distributed heralds, house-to-house in the city and outlying district.

Cronin's Radio Tieup

Honors Golden Wedding Couples

Manager R. Coleman found a spot for some real sentiment in his Charleston, W. Va., "My Gal Sal" campaign for the Kearse Theatre. He cooperated with the Daily Mail to honor folks wed 50 years or more with a gala "Golden Wedding Party." The newspapers and radio gave the event wide coverage with resultant good picture breaks.

Victory Sign Fills Former Blank Wall

N. Dow Thompson, district manager for the T. & D. Jr. Enterprises found a new use for what was hitherto an unsightly blank wall. This sign not only sells War Bonds and Stamps but promotes the slogan "Movies for Morale" which Thompson says has caused a great deal of favorable comment.

The sign was painted on the back wall of the Majestic Theatre. The space measures 75 by 60 feet. An idea of the magnitude of the sign can be obtained from the fact that the "V" measures 40 by 40 feet. Thompson explains that the wall and sign are visible to thousands of people. "At the rear of the theatre is an alley," he states, "then the broad expanse of the Truckee River which is faced upon the opposite shore with a spacious lawn in front of the Federal Building. The Federal Building which includes the Reno Post Office extends an entire block between two of the city's most important business streets. Surrounding the Federal Building within one block are the Riverside Hotel, County Building, Civic Auditorium and Library. This sign is visible to all persons leaving these places. All city buses approach their downtown terminal across a bridge with a direct head-on view of the sign.

The Nevada State Journal published in the self-styled "Biggest Little City in the World" lays claim now to having America's largest Victory sign and in fact published a special section (promoted by Thompson) the day before Reno's Victory Day, July 1, a gala event which sold over $177,000 worth of stamps.

Palmer's Ration Book

As a teaser ahead of "Rio Rita" at the Lory Theatre, in Highland, Ill., Bernie Palmer distributed small two-fold booklets with "Your Ration Book" on the front cover. The inside spread carrying copy to the effect: "No, we aren't rationing sugar. We are rationing laughs. We think laughs will be so in demand when Abbott & Costello appear in 'Rio Rita' that we are going to ration laughs to assure equal distribution. Every member of the family will be entitled to 150 hearty laughs. You can collect your full quota by seeing" etc., etc.

Old-Time Costume Party Sells "Bashful Bachelor"

N. B. Byrne of the Fox State Theatre, Las Cruces, N. M., highlighted his campaign of "Bashful Bachelor" by staging an old-time costume party at the theatre on opening night of the picture and awarding prizes to persons of all ages attired in old time or back country small town get-ups. The Las Cruces Sun-News gave a front page story to the stunt and followed it up with other stories during the week preceeding the opening.

Byrne also tied-in with the New Mexico A. & M. College paper, the A. & M. Roundup, for an essay contest on "How the Bashful Bachelors of A. & M. College Should Propose." Prizes were awarded to the three students writing the best twenty-five word essay.

Another phase of Byrne's campaign included a Man-On-The-Street bally who contacted persons at random asking them if they knew what sensationally funny picture was coming to the State Theatre. If the person answered correctly he was given a dollar bill and a pair of tickets to see "The Bashful Bachelor." If not he was handed a card reading "Had you answered 'The Bashful Bachelor' starring Lum and Abner I would have given you one dollar and a pair of tickets to see this picture at the State Theatre." The Sun-News plugged the bally by running the names of the persons who answered correctly and a special story on the stunt.

Cornell Sells "Invaders" As Picture-of-the-Month

For his showing of "The Invaders" at the State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., Clayton Cornell designated it as the Picture-of-the-Month, sniping all frames in advance and during playdates with appropriate copy. A sock 40 by 60 was made up for an advance display, consisting of newspaper headlines on the capture of the eight Nazi saboteurs and tied directly to the picture. Heralds were distributed house-to-house in local and nearby homes and special readers were landed in the papers ten days in advance. Cards advising of the nature of the picture were also mailed to air raid wardens, auxiliary police and defense officials.

Atmospheric Front Aids Bowden on "Tarzan"

As his advance for "Tarzan's Secret Treasure" at the Strand Theatre, in Florala, Alabama, Arthur C. Bowden stretched a banner with title, cast and playdates around the entire marquee. The whole front was covered with moss, giving the theatre a jungle atmosphere.

Since it is the custom for all stores in his neighborhood to close on Thursdays at noon through the summer months, Bowden had cards printed to go on each door reading: "We close at noon on Thursdays, join us at the Strand Theatre."

Key Novelties Given For "Frisco Lil"

As a gag novelty giveaway ahead of "Frisco Lil" and "Jail House Blues" at the Victor Theatre, in St. Louis, Mo., Joe Goldstein distributed orange color paper keys printed in black and measuring approximately seven inches in length by one inch in width. Printed on the card was copy reading: "The key to the greatest double show of the season," etc.

Another teaser slant distributed by Joe was a small card with copy: "You may need a ration card for sugar, but your pleasures will be unlimited when you see 'Remember the Day.'"

Star Photos Distributed By Helson for "King's Row"

Through a tieup with a local druggist who paid for entire cost of printing and distribution, Ray Helson at the Elmwood Theatre, in Penn Yan, N. Y., ahead of "King's Row" distributed 1,000 photos of Ann Sheridan. The cooperating merchant's ad was on the back of the photo. Fifty three-sheets were planted throughout the trade territory as were window cards, and scene stills.

Street Barrel Stunt Aids Rockwell on "This Our Life"

As a teaser in advance of "In This Our Life" at the Steuben Theatre, in Hornell, N. Y., Ken Rockwell stationed a boy on the main streets with an empty barrel the outside of which bore copy: "Take a look. It's free." On inspection, the curious read in the bottom of the barrel "'In This Our Life' Steuben Theatre." The barrel was moved from corner to corner where it gathered many laughs.

Twedt's "Lydia" Benefit

As a goodwill gesture, "Doc" Twedt at the Lido Theatre, in Manly, Iowa, recently tied up with the Woman's Field Army Cancer Drive and donated the proceeds of one of his "Lydia" shows to the fund. The women undertook the sales of the tickets which were especially printed for the occasion and the local papers came through with a nice story on the show.

Farol Horton set up this miniature airfield in a corner of the lobby of the Lafayette Theatre, Lafayette, Alabama.

Conner Promotes Sears For "Tuttles" Window

Since in the picture "Tuttles of Tahiti" the mail order catalogue plays an important prop in the plot, Marlowe Conner at the Capitol Theatre, in Madison, Wis., promoted the local Sears, Roebuck stores for an entire window with a background of a 40 by 60 framed in bamboo. Stills were plastered as a frame around the window and the center of the display was a Sears catalogue.

A contest was worked in offering a cash award for the oldest catalogue brought into the store. This idea was also carried out in newspaper ads directly under the theatre ad and paid for by Sears. A second contest angle was brought in with the store hanging one of their catalogues in the window with a few dollar bills extending from the book. To those coming closest to guessing the page numbers between which the bills were planted tickets were given.

Local Boy Makes Good Angle Used by Harwell

Since Clyde McCoy is a local boy, city manager W. D. Harwell at the Laroy, in Portsmouth, when playing the band centered his campaign around the "local boy makes good" angle. Contacting the local merchants, Bill succeeded in having them carry "welcome home" banners which also featured playdates and theatre credit.

Clyde McCoy having played Portsmouth previously gratis for the Policemen's Ball, the men decided this trip that they would show their appreciation by presenting him with a watch. This was good for stories and art work in the papers. As a final windup, Harwell played the "Sugar Blues" record on a concealed victrola planted in the upper front window of the theatre, the volume was loud enough so that the music could be heard up and down the main street.

Chaplin Impersonator Sells "Gold Rush"

As a street attractor ahead of "The Gold Rush" at the RKO Albee, in Providence, R. I., George French and Bill Morton featured a Chaplin impersonator who covered the best restaurants in town. On the opening day, the lad worked in front of the theatre going through his antics much to the delight of the customers.

Cronin's Radio Tieup

Deering's Tortilla Front

To sell his engagement of "Tortilla Flat at Loew's State, in Houston, Tex., Francis Deering constructed an entire false front done in white compoboard. Each side of the box office was flanked with six sheets, with appropriate tiein copy.

Curtis Exploits Shows Despite War Restrictions

From Sydney, Australia, Percy L. Curtis, RKO director of publicity for the date on "Dumbo" at Hoyt's Plaza Theatre, reports on a comprehensive campaign put on despite hostilities. Reported as the first time ever done by the circuit, was the full trailer put on at each of their theatres for a week in advance. In addition 50,000 heralds were distributed at all of the houses. Special slides were also run at the theatres in advance of the picture's opening, reading: "A blessed event soon to happen. 'Dumbo' is coming to the Plaza." This was illustrated by a figure of a huge stork carrying a baby. The same slide was also exhibited at the Hoyts' 22 suburban theatres one week prior to the opening.

The theatre front presented a circus atmosphere and was distinctly colorful with its reproductions of the various characters in the picture. The figure of "Dumbo" itself in the center of the display was animated, the ears moving up and down. Behind the pennants on the front was full-length calico lettering reading: "Disney's Surprise Show for the Grown-Ups." This line was also used in newspaper advertising to attract adults.

Colored "Dumbo" books were given to the radio station as prizes to children in connection with their special children's show. Then, distinctly apart from the juvenile attention, special records were made of dialogue and selected song hits, which were recorded over the cooperating radio station. In addition the local newspapers came through with readers and art work on the picture.

Wheatley Ties Apple Board To "Lady Eve" in Australia

Tying up with the local Apple Board, Arnold Wheatley, advertising manager of the Picadilly Theatre, in Perth, Western Australia ahead of the date on "Lady Eve," promoted 5,000 apples which appropriately wrapped in imprinted paper were thrown from a truck to pedestrians as it toured the city. In addition, the Board paid for the printing and distribution of stickers in two colors showing Barbara Stanwyck eating apples. These were available at shops in the metropolitan area. The Board further took time on the radio a week ahead of the opening to plug the picture during which time cast and playdates were mentioned.

A special lobby display was gotten up for the occasion consisting of a giant cutout apple with tiein copy, 24 sheets were exhibited two weeks ahead and shop windows came through with display of scene stills and tiein copy.

Soldier Quiz Sells "West Point"

When Manager J. J. Mussellman and Exploiteer Jay Frank quizzed Fort Knox soldiers on their choice of the girl they would like to accompany on a bond selling tour, they picked Maureen O'Hara, starring in "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" at the Louisville Rialto.

POLLOCK FEATURES BEAUTY CONTEST

Ties Up with Beverage Concern for Prizes as Well as for Promotion

This is bathing beauty season and so every showman either already has started his promotion or will soon be working on his 1942 Bathing Beauty Campaign. With that in mind, the Round Table presents Lester Pollock's campaign at Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., scheduled to take place next Tuesday.

Les tied up with the Royal Crown Cola Company to select Miss Rochester. The idea was to get 500 girls to appear in an elimination contest on the stage of the theatre. Window cards were given to each one of the distributors of Royal Crown Cola together with a package of heralds to solicit registration in the Bathing Beauty Contest. The window cards were put around on the various bathing beaches and in the bathing pavilions. Heralds were given to attendants and lifeguards for distribution to the bathing public.

Uses Trailers With "Cool" Background

Trailers with a nice, cool background are plugging the contest asking that 500 girls be ready for the eliminations and then announcing that the 40 selected then will be judged by audience applause the next week for the title of Miss Rochester.

Prizes will be $150 in cash to the winner; second prize, $75; third and fourth prizes, $25 each. Those selected for honorable mention will receive a 1942 model Jantzen bathing suit. The prizes were promoted from the Royal Crown Cola Company, except for the bathing suits, which were furnished by the manufacturer.

Royal Crown Cola cooperated in advertising the affair by incorporating announcements regarding the contest in their radio program which comes over the Rochester station five times a week.

The stage setting will be simple but appealing. It will look like a beach with palm trees, deck chairs, etc., to add realism.

In the lobby there is a platform with a mannequin seated at an umbrella table, dressed in a Jantzen bathing suit. The table holds a bottle of Royal Crown Cola and there are entry blanks also available with new copy.

Special trailers have been prepared and in use three weeks ahead of the show.

This display has been in the lobby of Loew's Rochester for several weeks and will remain until next Tuesday, when the Bathing Beauty Contest takes place. Prospective contestants sat in the empty chair while registering.

This is the setting used by Lester Pollock for last year's Bathing Beauty Contest at Loew's Theatre, in Rochester, N. Y. It's simple but effective.

Leo A. Schuessler started in the show business as an usher when he was 18; he left to work in a department store but the monotony, he says drove him back to the theatre. His first experience was with the Universal Theatre Circuit in his home town of Sheboygan; this group of theatres was later acquired by Warner Bros., and Leo is still with them. After his department store experience during which he served as window trimmer, he became a poster artist and later assistant manager of the Sheboygan. He was promoted to manager of the Majestic and remained there for eight years. He was transferred to the Rex last August. Leo is married and is the father of one daughter age five and another whose age is still measured in weeks.

OBITUARIES

Caspar Briggs Dies at 96

Caspar Warren Briggs, photographer and a pioneer with his father in the development of magic lantern slides, especially the collodion slide, died July 10th in Atlantic City. He was 96 years old. His home was in Philadelphia.

Mr. Briggs became interested in lantern slides through his father, Dr. Daniel H. Briggs, who gave up his medical practice in the 1840's to devote his time to making slides. In 1851 Dr. Briggs developed a method of applying the collodion process to glass for slides, and when Mr. Briggs was a young man his father moved to Philadelphia and bought out Frederick D. Langenheim, well known slide maker.

His first motion pictures were known as "slip slides," in which figures painted on a slide were made to move across a background imposed on another slide. Later he obtained a vertical effect, and the peak of the motion slides was reached with the "dancing and skeleton slide." In this the skeleton was photographed on mica in six different poses, each pose showing progressive steps in a dance.

Mr. Briggs retired in 1917, turning the business over to members of his family. In 1938, on his ninety-first birthday, he received the distinguished service award of the Pennsylvania Arts and Sciences Society.

George Paul Endert, for many years manager of the Paramount exchange in Seattle, died at his home there July 8th after a long illness. The action was commenced by March of Time as a protest against the exhibition in the United States of the board's picture "War Clouds Over the Pacific," which included film provided by the March of Time. The complainant dropped the action as soon as the agreement was reached, it was reported in the Canadian House of Commons.

IN THE COURTS

Tax Recovered By Music Hall

Neither the theatres hiring special stage acts nor the artists themselves are subject to Federal social security taxes, since these artists are not employees of the theatres, Federal Judge John Bright ruled last week in New York in a precedental decision which awarded a judgment of $1,079 in favor of Radio City Music Hall for taxes paid under protest to the U. S. Government.

The Music Hall had sued for the return of the sum awarded, which represented two per cent of salaries paid to special acts hired by the theatre during 1938. A ruling of the Collector of Internal Revenue in January, 1939, had forced the Music Hall to meet the taxes.

In a 12-page opinion, Judge Bright limited the dispute to the sole question whether special artists were employees or "independent contractors, under which latter classification no tax should be payable." "Special artists, who have no regular employer, and never have had, and who are dependant upon the merit of their particular act to sell it in the amusement market, were never intended to be benefitted by the accumulation of reserves to be paid to them in times of unemployment," the court stated.

Judge Bright added: "Neither the person engaging their services, nor the time of their engagement, is stable or fixed. Their ability to sell depends entirely upon the amusement value of the commodity which they sell, and their earnings depend, not upon the fact that they are able or willing to work, but upon the fact that their particular performance has some popular appeal to the entertainment seeking public. What they should do and how they should do it, was theirs to develop and decide. They were merchants selling in the amusement market, and nothing else."

To be an employee, the opinion read, the theatre must control "not only what shall be done but how it shall be done." In the category of employees could be included the Music Hall Rockettes and orchestra but special acts were predetermined in nature and were hired only to round out the regular Music Hall program, the court held.

Patent Suit Is Filed

Claiming infringement of a patented film splicing machine, David E. Schayer last week filed suit in the U. S. District Court against RKO, Columbia, Universal, Film Automatic Machine Co. Inc., Wallace & Tiernan Products, Inc., Harry G. Hess and Abraham J. Willner. Defendants are charged with manufacturing, selling and using a film splicing machine and rewinder which embodies devices patented by the plaintiff. An injunction, accounting of profits and damages are sought.

Charge Plagiarism

A plagiarism suit against Jerome Chodorov, Joseph Fields, Sally Benson, Max Gordon and Random House, Inc. was filed this week in the U. S. District Court, New York, by Lillian Day. Plaintiff claims that the Broadway play "Junior Miss" was pirated from a series of eight of her short stories which were published in the magazine Photoplay from 1938 to 1940. An accounting and an injunction are sought.

The Pride of the Yankees

(RKO Radio-Goldwyn)

The Tragedy of Lou Gehrig

by William R. Weaver
in Hollywood

A line in the dialogue of this biography of the late Lou Gehrig places at 50,000,000 the number of Americans interested in baseball and its heroes, but it is not in Samuel Goldwyn to restrict himself, his picture or his customers to any such limited circle as that. He has equipped his production, therefore, with items of interest to a variety of publics, in addition to baseball's, and has pointed it squarely at the tear-ducts of the whole population.

On the talent side he has given the exhibitor Gary Cooper, at the peak of his draw, in the title role, with Walter Brennan, habitual Academy Award winner, alongside, plus Teresa Wright, out of "The Little Foxes" and "Mrs. Miniver," as the hero's wife.

To fill out the marquee, as well as to give the picture realism, he has added Babe Ruth, Bill Dickey, Robert W. Meusel and Mark Koenig, from baseball, and Bill Stern from radio. For good measure he has interpolated Veloz and Yolanda and Ray Noble and his orchestra.

A foreword by Damon Runyon serves the triple purpose of bringing that name into the exploitation fold, notifying the uninformed observer at the start of the picture that the hero is going to die (a circumstance essential to the success of the narrative) and supplying the exhibitor with some potent copy for his newspaper advertising space. It also serves to relate the death of the diamond hero to the dying going on in fields of battle at this time.

Having made all these provisions for attracting large numbers of people to his picture, Producer Goldwyn unfolds to them what Runyon's foreword describes with accuracy as "the story of a hero of the peaceful paths of everyday life." Being just that, the narrative contains no incidents of melodramatic intensity, save those moments of diamond history which are lifted from the records of the game for filming, and makes its way quietly through a sequence of gentle passages which pile, one upon another, bits of the Gehrig family background. These serve to document the Gehrig case and endear the Gehrig personality in preparation for the farewell address, filmed in conformity with the actual event which occurred on June 4, 1939, which brings the picture to its close—and the audience to a flood of tears which are tears no less, whether shed for the dead Gehrig or the living Cooper.

The picture is like none other ever filmed. It is factuality encased in artifice and fitted out with sales points. It is Goldwyn in a demonstration of producership such as is not often to be witnessed, and it is entertainment on any count. It telegraphs its punch, which isn't of a kind to permit of surprise in any case, and then makes it stand up. That comes under the head of showmanliness become art.

Sam Wood's direction is up to his standard and the script by Herman J. Mankiewicz and Jo Swerling, from the story by Paul Gallico, squeezes the utmost out of each crumb of material.

Previewed at the Ambassador theatre, Los Angeles, to some 300 or 400 members of the press, all of whom shed some tears, or wanted to, during the tragic finale.

Of America, For Americans

by Elizabeth A. Cunningham in New York

"Pride of the Yankees" is not a baseball picture, although the passage of time is told by the pennants flying over the ball parks. It is not even the story of a baseball player, much as Lou Gehrig has come to typify the ideal performer and sportsman. It is the story of a man, a public figure whose tragic death took him out of the realm of sports heroes into the legend of America.

For Lou Gehrig's life is Americana, from his boyhood in a home where the influence of European forbears had not yet been erased to his courageous withdrawal from public life with the applause of thousands in his ears. Much of it that the public never knew has been supplied, fictionalized perhaps, in the portrayal of his life with proud parents and an adoring wife. Thus, it is the full impact of loss which the audience comprehends, but with it comes the certainty that such lives are not bounded by time or circumstance, that the spirit of a man had fulfilled itself.

The performance of Gary Cooper is so right that he is Lou Gehrig when the picture achieves its climax, completely identified with the man you knew through the press. Teresa Wright has provided an admirable Eleanor, sincere and unaffected. Special mention should be given also to Elsa Janssen, Lou's mother, who affords a quiet humor, avoiding sentimentalism.

The entire production by Samuel Goldwyn has a satisfying authenticity and a keen emotional appeal which should fulfill audience expectations.

Seen in a New York projection room where the audience watched attentively and was stirred.

Bombs Over Burma

(Producers Releasing)

War Melodrama

Made apparently expressly for the houses featuring melodramatic fare, "Bombs over Burma" bases its plot on the efforts of a Chinese woman patriot to uncover enemy intelligence operations which keep Jap bombers informed of convoys along the Burma Road. The patriot, a schoolmistress played by Anna May Wong, journeys along the road in a bus with a group of other persons and circumstances force them to stop at a monastery where the action unfolds. There are no Japanese shown, the villain being a Nazi intelligence officer posing as a Briton.

Supporting Miss Wong are Noel Madison, Leslie Denison, Nedrick Young in his film debut, Dan Seymour, Frank Lacteen, Judith Gibson, Dennis Moore, Connie Leon, Hayward Soo Hoo, Richard Loo and Paul Fung. Outstanding is the bit by Hayward Soo Hoo, Chinese tot whose screen bearing is as cute as any seen on the screen.

Produced by Alfred Stern and Arthur Alexander and directed by Joseph H. Lewis, the picture's continuity and the efforts of the actors are hampered by stilted dialogue and plot incongruities. Milton Raison and Lewis adapted Raison's original story.

Seen at the Vogue theatre, Hollywood, on a double bill with "Prisoner of Japan," from the same company, as the component parts of a "Slap the Jap Week" program, the picture evoked little interest.—V. K.

INSIDE FIGHTING RUSSIA (UA)

World in Action (No. 6)

Described in the foreword as a tribute to the people of Russia, the latest release in the World in Action series is an account of the Soviet preparations for resistance to the German invasion. The strides made in industry, the construction of plants behind the Urals and out of bombing range, the farming of great tracts of Siberia, the education of men and women to assume their places as citizens and workers, are the principal subjects portrayed by the fast-moving camera. But there are scenes of fighting men, too—some of the attacking panzer divisions and some of the stubborn defenders, turning the same strategy and weapons against them. The commentary is repetitively laudatory and glowingly represents the achievements as the work of a young, united people under the "red badge of courage," but the story it tells could stand by itself. The film was produced by Stuart Legg for the Canadian National Film Board.—E. A. C.

ADVENTURES of GENIUS

THE lay press and its commentators are having a deal of sardonic fun because RKO Pictures Corporation seems to have arrived at sharp differences with two young men, Mr. Orson Welles and Mr. Pare Lorentz, both of whom have been interrupted in mid-production by the new administration of the company.

Hollywood is diverted—both the boys are in the nature of outlanders, and both have enjoyed considerable publicity crediting them with being full of new tricks. So possibly Hollywood is more observant than concerned in its interest.

But for the lay press both the lads have made copy. The fact is that they have made considerably more copy than box office film. That seems to be at the bottom of the differences with the studio.

This is a business—most of the time.

With a zeal extraordinary the cinema department of Time Magazine of last week went into discussion of the affaire Welles, opening with showers of praise for his "The Magnificent Ambersons", and citing "Citizen Kane" as a master opus. Of course that is where it all began. Mr. Henry Luce of Time—Fortune—Life was one of those deeply consulted in that difficult period when there was question that RKO would risk the wrath of William Randolph Hearst by releasing "Kane". Time now says that "Kane" has not even "had a chance to earn its cost . . . " because " . . . Hollywood knuckled under to old William Randolph Hearst". And now Time charges, too, that the future possibilities of "The Magnificent Ambersons" are dubious, too, because "RKO claims it has more prestige than box office value".

HOLLYWOOD and the whole of the motion picture have felt the impact of many a young man of genius. It has been enriched by some and it has found others expensive. Development has been had by contributions of evolution, but by revolution never.

It is easy to remember some of them. There was the time when Mr. David Wark Griffith, a decidedly practical showman, got a genius intoxication from "The Birth of a Nation" and proceeded to the esoterics of "Intolerance". He paid for that one, in person, out of earnings of production that pertained to the box office.

And you will be recalling maybe when Mr. Erich von Stroheim became a publicity and critic's sensation, at considerable cost successively to Mr. Carl Laemmle, Mr. P. A. Powers, and ultimately Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, who had in hand that celebrated, and never released, "Queen Kelly".

Also there have been from time to time such temporarily amazing discoveries as the art of Mr. Joseph von Sternberg and Mr. Robert Flaherty, romantic documentarian.

Once in a blue moon one of these spectacularly arriving young men hits and then integrates with the flow of production, as for instance Mr. Darryl Zanuck.

Hollywood never throws genius away—but sometimes genius does.

AMERICANA NOTES—Out on the Great Plains the big combines are clucking across the miles of wheat, cutting, threshing, sacking wheat for a hungry world of allies. Heat waves dance in the distance, the shade is black in little blotches under the cottonwoods by the creek at noon, and the pulsing searing song of the jarr fly stabs the glare. Across the black loam of the riverlands, the Wabash, the Mississippi, the Missouri, the Kaw, the tall corn whispers a-growing in the dank, breathless vapors of fervid summer. That is inner America.

At day's end and supper time, this America goes down to the RFD box by the highway gate to find letters from its sons who are not home for this time of crop and harvest, letters from places that used to be just names in the big geography book, from Iceland and Ulster and Australia and New Guinea.

Tonight when the dark falls across the prairies, the folks at home will be listening to the radio for a spell, because they want to hear, and this Saturday when they get to town they will be going to the movies—hoping to see. There is an audience.

SCOOP!

ON the basis of information which is neither confidential nor off-the-record we are now in a position to announce the 1943 winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award—a production entitled "Mrs. Miniver".

While this announcement is made with the customary assumption of editorial infallibility, should it happen, due to developments now unforeseen, that this is an erroneous forecast, we shall all yet have cause for exultation.

It would be quite a season that would include "Mrs. Miniver" and two or three other better pictures.

The uncast golden Oscars wait.

WAR TEMPO

UNDER war activities and stresses, most all of the mediums of expression and communication reflect the intensifications of public attentions and interests. Estimates for the motion picture box office consider attendances at from 10 to 20 per cent higher. Newspaper circulations since Pearl Harbor have increased about 17 per cent, in twenty-four cities. Radio claims an increase of listeners of from 10 to 15 per cent.

More people want to hear more, see more.

Apparently some of them want to say more, too. Long distance telephone calls have increased 78 per cent since January, 1941. Much of that is war business, as evidenced by an increase of 245 per cent from Norfolk, Virginia, and 165 per cent from Washington.

Incidentally, the quest of some of these figures turns up the observation by the advertising bureau of the American Newspaper Publishers Association that we are continuously becoming more and more a nation of readers, reporting that, while we have had a 27 per cent increase in population in the last quarter of a century, newspaper readership has increased 50 per cent. Those twenty-five years cover the period in which the motion picture has become the nation's dominant entertainment.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

Rodgers gives Notice

MOTION PICTURE DAILY on Thursday said that William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general manager of distribution for Loew's Inc., had resigned, late Wednesday. It was understood he had asked to be relieved of his duties effective September 1st. His future plans are unknown.

Mr. Rodgers has been with the company for 18 years. He succeeded the late Felix Feist as general sales manager for MGM 6 years ago, advancing from the position of eastern sales manager.

In recent years Mr. Rodgers has been very active in the negotiations with exhibitor leaders which preceded the consent decree and the Unity Plan.

Going Up

A CONTINUED improvement in box office receipts is indicated in the June report of Federal admission tax collections. They were close to double those of the corresponding month last year, the best showing made so far since enactment of the 1941 tax bill eliminating exemptions.

Collections for the month were reported by the Internal Revenue Bureau Thursday as $11,550,144, against $11,803,922 in May and $5,880,649 in June of last year.

The bureau announced that admission tax collections for the fiscal year ended June 30 reached $115,032,269, an increase of more than $44,000,000 of the 1941 collections of $70,963,094. Not all of the increase over 1941 was attributable to the elimination of exemptions, however, since the changes made by the last revenue act are reflected only in the returns since last October, when they went into effect.

The special report for the Third New York (Broadway) District showed June collections at $1,703,492 against $1,950,579 in May, the only classes showing an increase being permanent use or lease of boxes and seats—$2,465 against $30—and admissions to roof gardens and cabarets—$119,598 against $94,209. Box office collections dropped to $1,571,313 from $1,839,753; tickets sold by brokers to $9,002 from $14,625, and tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price to $1,113 from $1,961.

No Reviews

THE YANK, the U. S. Army's weekly paper for and by its enlisted men has dropped its reviews of motion pictures after the first few issues.

There is no point, its soldier editors say, in panning or praising pictures when there is no selectivity of program in camps in this country or overseas. Reviews are beside the point when the soldier fans will go and see for themselves anyway, Sergeant Harry Brown and Private Al Hine, who edit the amusement page, said.

Pictures, too, are frequently on camp screens as soon as the Yank arrives, or even before.

News of the screen and the antics of Hollywood still are important copy in the new war's successor to the Stars and Stripes of Paris fame. One to two pages in each 24-page issue will continue to be devoted to motion picture news, digests of the columnists and who among Hollywood's names does what, and with whom.

Sergeant Brown and Private Hine also write a weekly column "Hollywood in Wartime" and the better leg art and snappier releases from the publicity offices is not rejected. There are also reports of Broadway and the broadcasting studios.

Circulation of the paper is a military secret. But it's reportedly receiving a worldwide welcome from Army readers. Captain Hartzell Spence is executive editor and adviser to the enlisted staff.

Radio Spot Plugs

THOSE cute radio announcements have hit the spot in this industry. This week three companies, MGM, Warners, Universal, offer these recordings as selling aids to exhibitors playing their pictures.

Warners' is thus boosting "Wings for the Eagle" with a radio "trailer" record, containing a 25-second and 55-second announcement, with a five-second cutoff on each spot for local playdate copy.

MGM tried the idea with the "Mrs. Miniver" engagement at the Music Hall, New York City, using one-minute recordings. All out-of-town test runs of the film, which began this week, will broadcast the recordings from leading stations. Leo the Lion is heard; then a chorus of seven voices; then their depiction of highlights from the film.

Universal made a one-minute transcription carrying the voice of Quentin Reynolds, war correspondent, for the opening of "Eagle Squadron" in Baltimore, Dayton, Harrisburg, San Francisco, Buffalo.

No Rolling to Rio

A SERIOUS gasoline shortage in Argentina, Chile, Peru, and especially in Brazil may "revise all previous concepts of distribution," there according to Walter Gould, United Artists foreign manager, who returned to New York Wednesday after a tour of his territories below the Rio Grande.

Mr. Gould also reported increasing inability to transport prints on time, if at all, and said his company was thinking of printing from duplicate negatives in Buenos Aires. It must first obtain priorities for those negatives on air lines to Buenos Aires, however. He added that the State Department and the Inter-American Affairs Committee, so intent upon building good-will, and expediting shipments of newsreels, must realize that newsreels without features cannot be sold to exhibitors.

He also noted much theatre construction in Brazil (in which UA is interested), in Peru, Chile, and Mexico.

Mr. Gould commented that Buenos Aires had fine laboratories, but that raw stock available had usually been merely enough for normal requirements.

Yesterday's Deficit

NEW YORK'S "world of tomorrow" is a world in deficit. The World's Fair of 1939-40 lost more than $19,000,000. Final distribution of monies to bond holders was announced Monday by Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the Fair's board. Total payments on principal of the debentures amounts to 30.75 per cent. There were in addition seven interest payments. They lifted the overall payment to the holders to 40.18 per cent.

The corporation's balance sheet, May 31st, carried a deficit of $19,021,433. The deficit at the close of the Fair, October 27, 1940, was $18,696,061. The difference is approximately the net cost of demolition, and transfer of the grounds to New York City.

Army Moves In

ATLANTIC CITY showmen are perking up. The death of that resort seemed assured early this year with blackouts, dimouts, gasoline restrictions, transportation difficulties, strict patrolling of the beach and boardwalk. And then the Army Air Corps moved into the best hotels, ejecting what guests had weathered such trials. However, it's an ill wind. . . . The thousands of newcomers are also moviegoers. Frank P. Gravatt, operator of the Steel Pier, and president of the Atlantic City Amusements Association, Tuesday announced that boardwalk theatres normally closing after the summer, would remain open. He added that his pier would operate this winter, the first time in nine years. Plans for keeping open Hamid's Million Dollar Pier are also being studied.

Meanwhile, the Air Corps will shortly march into two Weiland-Lewis boardwalk theatres and three of the Warner circuit's—mornings only. They will be classrooms.

Calling All Writers

HOLLYWOOD'S authors were calling all writers this week, from all media, "to improve the spread of war work news." A committee from the writers' guild, and lesser scrivening groups, was to meet in Hollywood Wednesday to discuss a proposed national writers conference in Chicago or Washington.

Also in formation in Hollywood is a Soviet-American cultural exchange group, captained by Henry Myers. Mr. Myers is a playwright who wrote his first screen plays for Clara Bow. His latest was "Destry Rides Again." The new committee plans an exhibit of war writing efforts by Americans, to be shipped to Moscow. It expects the Soviet government to send a similar exhibit here.

War Effort

HOLLYWOOD press and profession to the number of 800 were given a comprehensive picture of the motion picture industry's film participation in the nation's war effort Tuesday night when the Public Relations Committee and War Activities Committee screened at the Filmarte theatre a program of nine short subjects representing virtually every phase of production in the war interest. Included were films produced for the Army, Navy and civilian training, both restricted and commercial, documentary and fictional.

Garbage Collection

SUGGESTIVE material in pulp or fan magazines will still bring quick bans from the New York City news stands. Paul S. Moss, Commissioner of Licenses and one time theatre man warned this week. He barred from sale on the city stands ten magazines, including Real Screen Fun. Previously the Post Office ruled they were nonmailable "because of the insertion therein of obscene matter." The pulp film magazine was one of 42 publications denounced in 1940 by Mayor La Guardia. He ordered Department of Sanitation garbage trucks to confiscate it from news stands.

The Distaff Side

EVERY fourth worker in America now is a woman, and soon it may be every third. Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, said in Washington this week that 13,000,000 women, representing one-fourth of the total employment now are working. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD in the April 11th issue and again in the June 27th issue made a survey of women holding jobs in the exhibition end of the motion picture industry.)

Miss Anderson said that the employment of women in aircraft plants had increased tenfold since Pearl Harbor, and that in May these plants employed more than 24,000 women.

For a Silver Coin

ACCORDING to a dispatch to the New York Daily News, from Melbourne, Australia, thousands of American soldiers spent a dull furlough last Sunday because an element succeeded in blocking Sunday motion pictures, despite an agreement made three months ago.

Premier Arthur Dunstan of Victoria refused to permit any of the 20 theatres in the Melbourne area to open unless soldiers and guests were admitted for "a silver coin," which might be as little as a three-penny piece, about four cents in American money. Exhibitors naturally protested their liability to operate at that price.

"Miniver" Prices Up

THE Nicholas M. Schenck announcement that MGM would not ask exhibitors to play the company's great draw, "Mrs. Miniver" at advanced admissions—does not mean that it can not and will not be played that way.

In Rochester, in Syracuse, in Cincinnati, the film is being offered the public at higher than normal admissions. And at the MGM distribution home office in New York, Wednesday, it was said increases were planned for engagements in New Haven, Springfield, Hartford, Worcester, Boston, Columbus, Indianapolis, and Toledo.

All the engagements mentioned are in Loew houses. MGM home office spokesmen noted that theatres, whether Loew's or not, were "privileged" to ask increased admissions. There is no distribution contract provision, however.

Open Studio Gates

HOLLYWOOD motion picture studios which have been barred to the general public, by agreement for some time will be thrown open to members of the armed forces in a cooperating program of nine major studios. Ninety visiting members of the services each week will be permitted to inspect the Hollywood production scene under arrangements made by Harry Cohn, chairman of the sports and special events committee of the United Service Organization.

The arrangement provides that 10 service men each will be taken on tours in each of the studios once a week, with a definite schedule of visiting days, as follows: Monday, Paramount; Tuesday, MGM; Wednesday, Columbia; Thursday, RKO Radio; Friday, Warners; Saturday, 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Republic and General Service.

The 21 USO centers in Los Angeles will take applications for studio visits. Each group will be escorted by Captain Frank Dunham, U. S. Army, retired.

Canadian Shortage

ANTICIPATING a wartime move reducing product for theatres based on the belief that the move will be brought about by import restrictions and decreasing production, the Canadian Wartime Prices and Trade Board has instructed the motion picture industry's advisory council to consider plans for a pro rata distribution of available product. Probably commencing with the new season, the object of the council will be to see to it that all theatres can continue to operate without booking difficulties.

The principle has been laid down by the Canadian Government that if and when a shortage of product develops, all theatres will receive the same official treatment, whether part of a circuit or an independent house. The council, which is advisory to the board, is headed by J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian.

THIS WEEK the Camera observes:

■ DEMONSTRATING another staff job in the Los Angeles theatre defense plans, Eddie Olsen, projectionist at the Hollywood Pantages, takes his post as airplane spotter. At the alert he moves to the roof and reports all planes to the Interceptor Command. He wears asbestos gloves and vest, for fighting incendiary bombs, and a steel helmet.

STATE DEPARTMENT PLANS POST-WAR FILM EDUCATION

Would Extend Screen Work of Cultural Relations Division on Permanent Basis

by JOHN STUART, Jr.

When the war is over the United States Department of State hopes to be in the motion pictures business in a major way.

Plans are maturing, it is learned in Washington, substantially to increase the motion picture activities of the Department's Division of Cultural Relations. For the present this increasing interest in the screen is to be confined to the non-theatrical motion picture.

The department charged with the administration of the country's foreign affairs is carrying on its current screen work through existing emergency and permanent government agencies with authorized film programs. State Department appropriations for its own motion picture section are small in comparison with the screen budgets of other agencies. The current fund is said to be less than $50,000 a year.

But through the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Office of War Information (the film division founded by Colonel William Donovan, formerly Coordinator of Information) and other agencies the State Department is voicing an increasingly potent say on what kind of non-commercial, non-theatrical pictures shall be sent to other nations with Government blessing, or direct sponsorship.

Would Exchange Films With Other Nations

Looking ahead to the day when peace comes certain officers in the State Department foresee curtailment of the motion picture activities of these emergency agencies, and a slash in the huge film funds which many of them are now expending. They hope that much of this overseas screen exchange will revert to the State Department. It is possible that a permanent motion picture production and distribution machinery may be set up within the division of cultural relations, operating on a permanent budget.

The exchange of non-theatrical motion pictures with other nations would be undertaken by the department. All countries would be included, not just the Latin American republics, the United Nations and friendly neutrals. The objective would be the free display of pictures about the U. S. in other countries, and the exhibition here, through educational and other outlets, of pictures about the rest of the world.

"There would be a huge interchange of cultural, scientific and educational information via 16 mm pictures specially produced or edited," one source close to the project explained. He discounted the "propaganda" aspects of such a program, asserting that there is great curiosity about the United States, and its customs and traditions. The film program would be merely an official attempt to fill this need, he said. It is envisioned as a potent force for good will and understanding.

The entertainment, and commercial motion pictures previously sent abroad have not been sufficiently specialized or accurate, it was said. The type of pictures envisioned for cultural exchange would be 16 mm scientific, educational and documentary reels presenting "in vivid and dramatic form" pictures of U. S. civilization.

NO PRODUCTION BY STATE DEPARTMENT

At present the State Department is not engaged in the actual production of pictures for overseas screens. It does suggest subjects, however, and frequently induces commercial producers to prepare foreign versions for distribution under Government auspices. And it expresses discreet hopes, nearer realization than ever, of moving up into the first rank of Government supported film producers.

Foreign Missions Aid In Distribution

At present the Department of State, through the division of cultural relations, is working jointly with the Inter-American and War Information agencies. Their productions must be submitted to the State Department for review prior to export. Foreign missions of the State Department, through the cultural attaches now stationed in them, participate in the distribution of these pictures.

A reviewing committee, representing the principal divisions within the department, is charged with looking at the pictures to determine their suitability for the countries for which they are destined. The department also will examine other commercial or educational non-theatrical pictures destined for free circulation abroad. If it approves them they may bear official U. S. sanction.

How this machinery works was described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for October 11, 1941.

Reports of Friction Between Agencies

There have been reports of frequent friction, however, between other Government agencies and the State Department. The producing agencies have charged the State Department with delaying their programs with red tape, and slow approval by the reviewing committee. Also, they have expressed off-the-record irritation at many of the changes in pictures or scripts which the State Department has asked before sanctioning their distribution through the cultural attaches.

To smooth this liaison the Division of Cultural Relations is now seeking to expand its film staff. Also, these new additions would be the nucleus of a post war organization.

Technical consultants, film distribution experts and contact men who can handle overseas requests for special subjects are joining the staff. Their salaries, in several instances, will be paid out of the special Inter-American funds and they will be in direct liaison with the Rockefeller office.

Also, it is planned to assign film men to many of the principal American missions abroad. They will aid the cultural attache in exhibiting the free American motion pictures and will obtain native pictures and suggest subjects for exhibition in the United States. The first of these assignments probably will be made in South America where already 30 of the 16 mm projectors are in use and 75 more are on order.

Currently the film program of the State Department is in charge of John Begg, assistant chief of cultural relations. With a small staff, headed by Irene Wright, historian and for many years the supervisor of all the State Department film work, he has administered the exhibition of the Rockefeller office pictures and requests for State Department review of pictures destined for South America. He has a background of newsreel work in the Courtland Smith organization.

Charles A. Thomson is chief of cultural relations. He is the former Latin American editor of the Foreign Policy Association.

Evidence of Demand For U. S. Pictures

According to Mr. Begg, there is already evidence of a great post war demand for non-theatrical pictures from the United States. He cited figures from the Rockefeller committee's exhibitions in South America, showing an audience increase within six months from 6,000 to 100,000 persons monthly. This, he declared, is just touching the surface of the field. Technical, scientific, instruction and ideological pictures are all receiving an enthusiastic reception, he said.

Special production will be required for many of the post war motion pictures, it was said. The facilities of Hollywood as well as the documentary and non-theatrical producers would be used, on contract, to make the special reels and to adapt existing pictures. Many would be scored in foreign languages while others, particularly the technical and scientific pictures destined for limited audiences, would be sent abroad with written translations of the English titles and sound track.

THEATRE RAID PRECAUTION FACILITIES TO BE TESTED

OCD to award Certificate to Approved Houses; stagger Seattle Shows

The theatres of the country this week awaited a preliminary test of their defense precautions. It will come from the Office of Civilian Defense, Washington, which Monday announced it would check theatres in strategic areas—virtually every key city being in one—for the adequacy of their air raid preparations.

Approved theatres will receive an official certificate: "Air raid precautions have been taken here." The certificate also may be used as a window sticker.

The OCD "check" also will include other business establishments, but theatres are regarded as most important, since they harbor large groups of transients.

Standards for business establishments will include the appointment of a defense coordinator or establishment of a centralized defense command; organization, training and testing of employees for protective services; provision and installation of necessary protective equipment, adequate mechanical means for transmitting warnings to personnel and methods of immediate blackout of all light visible outside the building; establishment and maintenance of liaison with local defense authorities, and compliance, in general, with the recommendations in the OCD instructional pamphlet for theatres.

To Find Out How Well Lessons Are Learned

"For nearly a year now, the Office of Civilian Defense and the various state and local defense councils have been instructing people at home and in business and industry in the proper methods of preparing themselves so that raids, when and if they do come, will cause a minimum of damage, distress and confusion," it was explained by OCD Director James M. Landis. "It is now time to find out how well those lessons have been learned—how thoroughly they have been put into operation.

"Business establishments which meet the standards upon which these certificates are to be awarded may rightfully take pride in the fact that they are integral fighting units on the home front which, with the military front and production front, constitute the lines upon which we shall defeat the enemy."

Massachusetts Blackout May Go 50 Miles Inland

Theatre managers along the Massachusetts coast line are watching with growing interest the enforcement of the stringent blackout rules now in effect. It is reported that officials are planning to extend the regulations as far inland as 50 miles, which probably would include Worcester and Fitchburg. Members of the State Blackout Committee are to tour the coastal region, armed with new authority from Governor Leverett Saltonstall. With the coming of winter, the dimout restrictions will be tightened materially, national, State and local officials contending that personal inconveniences must be subordinated to the lives of sailors and safety of sea transportation. Theatre managers throughout the area are cooperating 100 per cent with local and state blackout and Civilian Defense officials.

A blackout in Hartford, Connecticut, and nearby communities, was expected this week.

A statewide blackout for a half-hour was staged in Pennsylvania Wednesday. The exact starting time was not disclosed in advance, but announced by the regular air raid sirens. It also was announced by the Pennsylvania State Defense Council that a joint blackout with New Jersey will be staged some time before Labor Day, probably in August.

Four thousand workers in New York's war plants were guests of the New York Paramount and Station WJZ on Friday night, after the last show. A show was provided by the station, as accompaniment to the picture, "Priorities on Parade," which began its regular run at that theatre on Wednesday. The workers are on late shifts.

Staggered Programs Are Developed in Seattle

Clarence R. Innis, director of the Theatre Defense Bureau, and Frank Newman, president of the Evergreen Theatres Corporation, Seattle, have worked out "staggered" programs to eliminate large crowds leaving theatres during rush hours and avoid serious congestion between 4:30 and 5:30 P.M.

Kansas theatres putting on midnight shows for war plant workers are profiting particularly from their confectionery stands. In the cities and towns where late programs are provided by motion picture theatres, stores close at 11 o'clock or midnight. But the men who come from work are hungry. Even when they have had a midnight luncheon, before going to the theatre, they still like to eat a little more—and want a bite after the show. Popcorn is the chief demand of these patrons. In some larger cities at least one theatre shows continuously till 2 o'clock or later for early night shift workers; in other locations, a special late show runs from 1 to 4 A.M.

Hamilton, Ontario, exhibitors have forced the city's police force, in a court battle, to agree not to close midnight shows, except Sunday nights. The shows are for war workers.

One of the few widely known fairs which has completed plans for operation this Autumn is the Brockton Fair at Brockton, Mass., which will be held from September 13th to 19th. Many fairs in New England and other sections of the country have been cancelled at the suggestion of the Office of Defense Transportation. The Brockton Fair Grounds last week became Camp Erland F. Fish of the Massachusetts State Guard while State Guard officials studied guerilla warfare. It has been suggested that the Fair grounds be taken over for a permanent camp for the State Guard.

The War Activities Committee will release "Your Air Raid Warden" Saturday, through Twentieth Century-Fox. It is 900 feet, runs 10 minutes and was produced by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Research Council.

Century Circuit Holds "Rubber Matinee"

The Century circuit, New York, held a "rubber matinee" Tuesday. Patrons bringing two or more pounds were admitted without charge.

Film exchange employees of Des Moines are attending defense classes in the Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount screening rooms. Sponsor of the classes was Stanley Mayer, 20th Century-Fox branch manager.

The Screen Actors, Writers and Directors guilds are advocating a Film Advisory Committee, to coordinate Hollywood war efforts.

In New York, the American Theatre Wing War Service this week formed a Central Talent Committee with James E. Sauter as chairman.

CINCINNATI RAID CLASS GRADUATES

Fifty-five independent Cincinnati exhibitors and managers graduated last week as air raid wardens. The class had been formed by Charles Mervis, operator of the downtown Rialto. The instruction emphasized theatre protection. The men meet each Tuesday at the Imperial theatre. This week, also under Mr. Mervis' direction, they were to begin Red Cross training.

Variety Member on Defense Committee

H. H. Everett of the Charlotte, N. C. Variety Club, has been named chairman of the Mecklenburg County Defense Recreation Committee. He succeeds James J. Harris, who is in the Navy. Mr. Everett's committee will provide housing and entertainment for the thousands of soldiers that will throng Charlotte during the forthcoming military maneuvers. A request for $5,000 in USO funds has been made to supplement the sum which Charlotte will appropriate.

Niedenthal with Columbia

Andrew Niedenthal, who operated the suburban Belvidere and Evanston, Cincinnati, until they were leased recently, has joined the Columbia exchange there as a booker. He succeeds Loretta Helfrich.

Cancel Ohio County Fair

The Scioto County Fair Board has voted against holding the annual Portsmouth fair this year. Previously it was decided to hold the fair, but to eliminate horse racing as an economy measure.

Production aims and sales possibilities for the coming season, as well as the progress and favorable outlook for the company, were summarized by Joseph Bernhard, vice-president and general manager. He pointed out the tendency toward maximum playing time for pictures and urged the field force to do its utmost to further this policy, both as good business practice and as a patriotic effort in conservation of product.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," now in its eighth week as a two-a-day attraction on Broadway and soon to open a series of test runs at $1 top in ten spots around the country, will be sold separately,

Tests to Determine Merchandising Methods

After Mr. Kalmenson's outline of selling plans for "Dandy," Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity in the east, gave a general idea of the merchandising campaign which will be more fully determined in the series of test runs.

UA's New Season Plans Underway

United Artists' new season production is scheduled to pick up next month when work will start on four to six pictures, Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, said on Friday following his return from coast conferences.

Mr. Kelly said that Hunt Stromberg will start two productions and Arnold Pressburger plans to begin "Never Surrender" within the next 30 days. In addition, David O. Selznick is scheduled to start "Jane Eyre" soon, with arrangements now pending on signing a male lead. Jules Levey's Mayfair Productions, recently signed for UA release plans an early start on "Sons o' Fun," and Gregor Rabinovitsch, also signed recently, has a picture in preparation, it was said. Other company producers, including James Cagney and Alexander Korda, are getting new season production plans in final form.

PRC Regional Meet Ends in New York

The New York regional meeting of Producers Releasing Corporation which had been in session at the Edison Hotel, New York, closed Monday after two days of sales conferences conducted by Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales.

In disclosing the policies on the 1942-43 program, Mr. Greenblatt stressed the fact that PRC is now an international distributing organization, and, in addition to its 29 exchanges in the U. S. and five in Canada, it has distributors in nine cities in the British Isles and in 40 countries throughout the rest of the world.

"PRC has in the short space of two years definitely established itself as not only a national distributing organization, but an international one, with representation in every country of the world now open for delivery. In sales, distribution, advertising and exploitation, the company will function as an international organization and its policy in all phases will be geared accordingly," Mr. Greenblatt said.

In keeping with this policy, Mr. Greenblatt said that an intensive exploitation campaign would be put into effect on every picture on the new program, with special attention given to the six V-Specials scheduled.

The next regional meeting will be held at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, Saturday to Monday, with representatives from 13 exchange centers attending.

The exchanges represented are: Chicago—Henri Elman, George Topper, Victor Bernstein, Jack Barry. Cincinnati—Nat Kaplan, Donald Duff, Joe Goldberg. Cleveland—Lee Goldberg, Bernard Rubin, Jack Lawrence, Ben Greenberger. Detroit—William Flemion, Ann O'Donnell, Bert Tighe, Robert Synder, Herbert Foster. Denver—Joe Ashby. Indianapolis—Sam Abrams, John Bohn. Kansas City—R. H. Patt, Beverly Miller, John Muchmore. Milwaukee—James Jovaney, Cleve Adams. Minneapolis—Charles Weiner. Omaha—M. L. Stern, Sam Stern. Pittsburgh—Milton, Lew and Godfrey Lefton, Jack Feurer. Salt Lake City—Bernard Newman. St. Louis—Noah Bloomer, Jack Walsh, Jack Kraft.

Leo J. McCarthy, sales manager of the western division, will assist Mr. Greenblatt in outlining the product at Chicago and will attend the San Francisco meeting, to be held August 8-10. A Dallas meeting will be held August 1-3.

Broidy Confers With Salesmen

Steve Broidy, general sales manager for Monogram this week conferred with individual sales representatives following the company's regional convention which was held in New York and ended Sunday at the Hotel Warwick. "One Thrilling Night" and "Isle of Missing Men" were screened for the delegates.

The Terrytoon short subject budget will be increased by more than 30 per cent over this season's budget for the 1942-43 season, it is indicated by statistics made available by Edmund Reek, Movietone producer, and Paul Terry, producer for the Terrytoon cartoon series. The greater use of color is given as the main reason for the higher budget.

New England again became the locale for a March of Time feature picture last week with the filming of many scenes for "Here Comes the Marines," on Plum Island, off Newburyport, Mass., under the direction of Louis de-Rochmont, March of Time director. The U. S. Government cooperated with the loan of considerable equipment including Marine planes from Quantico, Va., and also United States Marines themselves from Quantico, and soldiers and sailors. A group of Newburyport residents were paid $10.50 a day as extras, as airplane passengers and Pan American officials and pilots. The final scenes of the picture, depicting the attack on Wake Island by Japanese airplanes, the island's capture by the Japs, and its recapture by the fighting Marines, were shot on Plum Island, where the terrain and buildings are similar to those on the Pacific island.

Karlton Now First Run

Warners' Karlton theatre, normally a second run house in downtown Philadelphia, becomes a first run house for the summer, filling in for the circuit's Stanton Theatre, which closed on July 13th for complete redecorating and refurnishing. It was the second first run house to close for the summer, the circuit's Aldine Theatre going dark for the summer because it lacks cooling facilities.

Circuit Men In Service

Three more men connected with the Comerford Circuit in Scranton, Pa., have been inducted into the Army. They are Earl Rozelle, assistant manager of the Strand theatre; Jack Carroll of the booking office; and Jerome McDonald, doorman at the Comerford theatre. Joseph Lehr, assistant manager of the Manhattan theatre, Scranton, has replaced Rozelle.

Lesser Signs Daves

Sol Lesser has signed Delmer Daves to write the screen story from "Stage Door Canteen," which Mr. Lesser will produce.

Hensler Named Manager

Larry C. Hensler, former Universal salesman in Des Moines, has been named branch manager for Monogram there.

QUICK ACTION SOUGHT ON UNITY CONCILIATION PLAN

Kuykendall Warns of Need for Machinery to Deal with Specific Complaints

With the final draft of the United Motion Picture Industry's proposed selling plan completed and now before the Department of Justice awaiting approval as an amendment to the consent decree, exhibitor leaders this week sought speedy action in the unity discussions on conciliation, arbitration and other points orginally outlined by the joint distributor-exhibitor committee.

Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, warned in New York that if the unity effort is to succeed it must set up conciliation machinery to deal with specific controversies.

M. A. Rosenberg, president of Allied States Association, Abram Myers, its general counsel, and other national and local leaders also have been quoted recently as warning that the UMPI program must not stop short with the sales plan.

At the Indiana Theatre Owners convention last week Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied and chairman of the original UMPI trade practice committee, told exhibitors that "failure and discouragement" were in the offing for the wider concepts of the unity movement. He declared that the all-industry conferences must take action soon on such questions as double bills, conciliation, arbitration and other trade practice problems.

National Allied Board Meets in Pittsburgh

The board of directors of national Allied met on Wednesday at Pittsburgh for a special two-day business session. The resumption of unity meetings, priorities, and delivery and rental problems were on the agenda.

The blocks-of-13 sales plan, meanwhile, was still before the Department of Justice for inspection and approval. No comment on the plan has come from Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, or Robert Wright, in charge of the anti-trust division's film unit.

It is probable, informed Washington sources said, that the consenting distributors would be permitted to present the plan to the federal court at New York on their own initiative. The Department, if it has objection to the plan, or intends to state that it finds no reason for disapproval, probably will wait to do so at the hearings before Judge Henry W. Goddard.

The Department of Justice at Washington on Tuesday emphatically denied reports by a Washington columnist that it would not approve any change in the consent decree. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold said that studies of the selling plan had not been concluded and that the department had made no pre-judgment on the Unity proposals.

Numerous letters and petitions for and against the plan have been submitted, and are being carefully studied Mr. Arnold indicated. "There is an enormous amount of this on both sides," he said, "the quicker I can dispose of it the quicker pressure will cease."

Lawyers for the consenting distributors at New York have prepared their letter of petition to Judge Goddard asking that he sit again on the motion picture consent decree to consider the amended sales plan. It was understood that they were to present their request for a court date this week, with the possibility that Judge Goddard might examine the blocks-of-13 sales plan next week. He leaves for his vacation on August 1st, court attaches reported.

Mr. Kuykendall, commenting on the need for an early meeting of the UMPI committee of the whole to consider the establishment of conciliation machinery, warned that unless this is done the whole plan "might blow up." He pointed out that the conciliation issue had not been mentioned in recent meetings with government lawyers over the sales plan.

Mr. Kirsch named double features as one of the most urgent trade problems for UMPI's consideration. Unless they are eliminated, he warned, exhibitors may appeal directly to the War Production Board for an anti-duals ruling to save film raw stock.

Reports Failure on Wider Concepts of Unity

"On the wider concepts of unity, I can report only failure and discouragement," Mr. Kirsch told the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana in convention at Lake Wawasee, on Thursday.

"In the matter of priorities, the distributors have ignored the UMPI Committee on Priorities and have pursued their own secret and selfish course. In the matter of public relations they have secretly formed a series of public relations committees wholly without reference to UMPI or the established exhibitor associations. I have reason to believe that other Allied representatives on UMPI share my resentment of the action of the distributors, through the Hays Association, in thus ignoring and, I am afraid, disrupting the unity program," he said.

The Indiana exhibitor group voted to work with Illinois Allied through UMPI to eliminate double features. This action was taken following Mr. Kirsch's speech in which he scored double bills as an evil. Mr. Kirsch detailed the steps taken to stop the practice. "Of course, we received a sympathetic ear from some of the heads of the distributing companies who, in private, admitted that they were against the practice of combining two of their 'A' productions on one program at first run theatres.

"The executive of a leading distributing company assured me that it would be impossible for the first runs to couple one of their 'A' pictures with that of another company because of the high rental they would receive for their 'A' pictures. This was about eight months ago, but in spite of this assertion it can still be said that the first runs in Chicago are doubling bigger and better 'A' pictures. Thus, it seems, from all this conversation nothing was accomplished," the Chicago leader said.

Producers Should Start Cutting Down, Says Kirsch

"I believe the time is ripe for the producer-distributing companies to take the bull by the horns and start cutting down where it will benefit both the war effort and the industry most—by eliminating double features in all theatres, including their own. Otherwise they will wake up too late and find themselves in the position where the government will tell them how many pictures they can produce and how long they can be."

Mr. Kirsch's attack on dual bills was followed by a hint that Allied might appeal to the War Production Board for an edict preventing duals. "Unless this problem is dealt with we will find ourselves in the doldrums and there is something we can do about it. Now that UMPI is functioning this should be one of the first big undertakings on the part of that organization inasmuch as UMPI represents a cross section of the industry. In that way UMPI will indicate that it not only is progressive but truly representative. If the industry does not undertake this voluntarily then our association is going to petition Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, for the elimination of wasteful film production and we are going to urge that exhibitors all over the country contact Washington in order properly to impress Mr. Nelson in asking him to grant an edict doing away with double features."

M. A. Rosenberg, national president of Allied States Association, also a speaker at the convention, called double billing a major ailment of the industry, which required a major operation. He claimed credit for Allied in preventing further theatre acquisitions by circuits. War restrictions are not an unmixed blessing, he pointed out, since the problem of overseating will be cured through lack of new building and the growth of certain towns. He predicted that the lull in construction would permit the theatres to become firmly established.

WARNS VICTORY FILMS MUST BE PLAYED

Marc Wolf, chairman of the Indiana War Activities Committee, last week warned the ATO of Indiana convention that if Victory Films were not played the Government would step in and demand playoffs. He said that when the prints of one WAC reel were shipped recently to another exchange, the 21 prints were found to have their seals still intact. He said that 85 per cent of the country's theatres were playing Victory reels and that the rest would have to do likewise.

June War Bond Total Reaches $5,678,183

Amount Averages $1,050 per Theatre; Skouras forms War Effort Unit

Sales of War Bonds and Stamps in 5.407 theatres during June mounted to $5,678,183, the War Activities Committee reported this week. The amount represents an average of $1,050 per theatre.

The largest contribution came from the State, Easton, Pa., which sent $503,050. The bulk of this—$500,000—resulted from selling a bond for that amount to Northampton County.

The Randforce circuit, New York and Brooklyn, reported that its 40 theatres in the past six weeks have sold $130,000 in bonds and stamps. In the circuit, outstanding sales were at the Congress theatre, managed by Sidney Levine, $23,000; the Carroll, Louis Schnitzer managing, $9,600, and the Rainbow, Maurice Reisner managing, $7,500.

The WAC has received its first Alaskan report—from the Lathrop Company, operating the Lacy Street and Empress theatres, Fairbanks. They reported $2,027 and $1,355 respectively.

There were other highlights in the WAC resume: the Palace Theatre, Superior, Wis., reporting $8,675 in bonds, $303 in stamps; the Park, Los Angeles, noting $19,082 in bonds and stamps during seven days.

CIRCUITS ANTICIPATE BOND PLAN EXTENSION

Major theatre circuits, whose New York theatres have been successful in acting as issuing agents for War Bonds, expected this week early extension of the plan to their "out-of-town" theatres. Under the arrangement, the Treasury Department has made certain circuit theatres issuing agents. Originally, the sale of bonds at all theatres was in the form merely of pledges to purchase.

'War Department' set up by Skouras

The establishment of a "War Effort Department" within the Skouras Theatres Corporation was announced today by officials of the company. Nick John Matsoukas was placed in charge of the department.

At a meeting of executives of the company, in announcing the formation of the department it was stated: "There is a lot more that we of the theatre industry must do and accomplish in assisting our government in the successful prosecution of the war. We have not as yet scratched the surface of what our theatres can really do and contribute in this crisis. For the duration of the war, each theatre, if not already, must become the community center in our war effort." Mr. Matsoukas was brought to the home office from his post as manager of the Tuxedo theatre. Allan Hatoff has replaced him.

A total of $1,109,000 in War Bonds and Stamps was raised Wednesday night, July 15th, at the Malco Theatre, Memphis. Admission was by purchase of bonds. Sales totaled $582,000. Between two showings, merchandise donated by the city's merchants was auctioned. The amount raised was $527,000. The event was sponsored by the Variety Club and a Citizen's Committee. M. A. Lightman, Malco circuit president, was co-chairman.

In Tampa, Fla., last Friday, under the sponsorship of the Tampa Merchants Association, a bond rally was staged. The Florida State Theatres opened their downtown theatres and ran free shows up to scheduled opening time.

Hartford, Conn., theatres began a bond selling drive Monday. Coffins were placed in front of houses, bearing the legends, "reserved for Adolph Hitler." Patrons purchasing bonds were permitted to drive nails into the coffins.

Last week the Loew circuit reached its first $1,000,000 in bond and stamp sales.

Theatre men in the Philadelphia area will meet next Monday at the Broadwood Hotel to hear Si Fabian, Harry Brandt and representatives of the Treasury Department speak on the current sale of war bonds and stamps in theatres. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the War Activities Committee, and the theatres' obligation to the Government in the war effort will be discussed.

Theatres in the Reading, Pa., territory realized a total of $86,963.67 for the June sales of war stamps and bonds, it was reported by chairman Paul E. Glase, manager of the Embassy Theatre. Nearly half of the total, $41,822.20, was accounted for by C. G. Keeney, manager of the Park Theatre; with Lester Stallman, manager of the Astor Theatre, a close second with $33,063.45.

On New York's West 52nd Street, between 5th and 6th Avenues, 22 night clubs turned their talent into the street Wednesday for a monster "block party," to sell bonds and stamps. Hollywood personalities contributed to the entertainment, led by William Holden, now an Army private, and his wife, Brenda Marshall, actress.

Comedians Bud Abbott and Lou Costello Tuesday began a 41-city bonds and stamps drive tour.

N. Y. Theatres In USO Drive

All New York City theatres were to participate in USO Theatre Week, which was to begin Thursday. The theatres were to show the War Activities Committee short subject, "Mr. Gardenia Jones."

The theatre participation was arranged by Samuel Rinzler, Fred Schwartz, and Irving Lesser, of the WAC. On the distributors' committee which worked to obtain such participation from exhibitor clients, were Robert Wolff, RKO; Henry Randel, Paramount; Jack Bowen, MGM; Joseph Lee, 20th Century-Fox; David Burkan, and Edward Mullen, United Artists; and Philip Hodes, RKO.

Weiner in Ad Post

Louis Weiner, former Hollywood publicist, has been named a district advertising representative for Paramount in Philadelphia, replacing James Furman, transferred to the Atlanta district. Mr. Weiner shares the district post with William Brooker.

Doob on Leave for War Bond Publicity

By Staff Photographer

OSCAR DOOB has been granted a 60-day leave of absence from Loew's, Inc., and is to make his headquarters at the War Activities Committee in the Paramount Building. He is taking entire charge of all publicity in connection with the sale of the War Bond and Stamp Drive under the auspices of the War Activities Committee. Ernest Emerling will be Loew's Theatres acting advertising director during Mr. Doob's absence.

Warner Short Gets Special Handling

"Divide and Conquer," two-reel subject compiled from imported footage showing actual methods of invasion by the Nazis, will be given special handling by Warner Bros. sales department as well as the advertising and exploitation forces, Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager, has announced.

A comprehensive press book on the subject is now in preparation and the company will cooperate with exhibitors in exploiting the picture to the best advantage both for public information and in furtherance of the Government's war aims, according to the company. The short has an August 29th release date.

Cuban Power Regulations Viewed As Theatre Blow

Cuban exhibitors must start shows an hour later, and close one hour earlier, under new power regulations. Refrigerating and air conditioning equipment use must be cut by 50 per cent. Representing the Union of Exhibitors, in protest to the government, are Dr. J. Tariche and Dr. Manuel Pelon.

Manager in Navy

John B. Owens, former manager of the Summit theatre in Clarks Summit, Pa., is now a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy and stationed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Turberg Defense Director

Nat Turberg, manager of the Northio Paramount, Hamilton, Ohio, has been appointed the city's assistant Civilian Defense Director.

AUDIENCES ARE INCREASING FOR 'NEIGHBOR' PICTURES

Attendance tops 100,000 Monthly Mark in North and South America

Audiences are increasing both in South America and the United States for the free, non-theatrical motion pictures provided by the U. S. Government as part of its good neighbor program.

The Film Section of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and the State Department, both report that the attendance at the 16 mm screenings has topped the 100,000 a month mark in both North and South America. The project for this free cultural interchange of films has been underway for almost 18 months.

In South America, the reports from the field say, 108,766 persons saw the first 20 reels on hand during June. This represents an increase from an audience of only 9,000 last February.

Thirty projectors are now in U. S. missions in South America and 75 more are on the way. They are used for showings, in principal cities, and "on the road" throughout the American republics.

They are not available for regular theatrical exhibition, and are described by the Government as non-competitive with the commercial film industry.

Screenings Held Before Variety of Audiences

The cultural attaches of the U. S. embassies and missions and local committees of Americans, local citizens, educators and professional men arrange the screenings. They are held before a variety of audiences, adult and juvenile, at schools, sport and church clubs, libraries, military posts and national military training schools.

Response, according to the film section of the Rockefeller office, is now "way ahead of the supply." The problem, one official said, is to get the projectors and staffs to carry the U. S. messages to the receptive South American public. Roadshows, he said, are particularly successful.

In the United States the 17 titles about South America which the Coordinator is distributing have been seen to date by an estimated total of 750,000. The last completed report, as of July 3rd, showed a cumulative total of 623,957.

Approximately two-thirds of the 42,000 persons a week which the Coordinator estimates are seeing the pictures here are children. About a third of the screenings are to adult groups.

Distributing its films through about 40 non-theatrical repositories in the U. S., the Coordinator's office claims a total of 4,136 bookings, of which about 3,100 have been played. All are free screenings before schools, YMCA, club or other groups. The YMCA film service, Museum of Modern Art and numerous state and university library services distribute the pictures.

Last week, July 18th, and on December 27th, MOTION PICTURE HERALD listed the pictures which have been sent to South America, or are in preparation.

The pictures for the U. S. non-theatrical audience are distributed without cost. The Government is now charging a service fee of 50 cents for the first reel and 25 cents for each additional reel on the non-theatrical bookings, however.

Titles of Films Now Being Circulated

The titles being circulated here, in 16 mm, with brief descriptions, follow:

AMERICANS ALL, two reels, by Julien Bryan, describing the civilizations of the Americas.

FILM SHORTAGE IN COLOMBIA

Colombia's theatres report a serious shortage of first run films with some theatres ordinarily showing that product now using second showings of popular films before releasing them to subsequent runs. So reported the Foreign Commerce Weekly last week. It added, however, that receipts at first run theatres are 15 cent greater for the first five months of 1942 than in 1941.

Garbo Buys Buildings

Greta Garbo has become the owner of two more four-family apartment buildings in Milwaukee. The buildings are in the Greene Fairways sub-division near the new Milwaukee Ordnance Plant. Transfer stamps showed the cost to be $30,792.

RCA Equipment has War Role

Theatre and film recording equipment of the RCA Manufacturing Co. in Camden, N. J., are playing important roles in the war, with contributions involving several spheres of influence and activity of direct importance to the war effort, according to Edward C. Cahill, the company's Motion Picture Division manager. Sound motion pictures long ago won recognition by both civil and military authorities as a desirable recreational activity in maintaining morale and providing relaxation. Their value extends also into the fields of group education and training—another area where the company's equipment may be said to have actually gone to war, said Mr. Cahill.

"Motion pictures accomplish military training with an economy of time and manpower that is vital," he pointed out. "They make it possible for a single expertly staged operation or example to teach countless groups in exactly the same way. Standardization in military training is necessary for obvious reasons. Films provide that standardization in many instances."

Almost all Army camps have at least one post theatre, and some have as many as five, ranging in size from 800 to 3,500 seats, and all excellently equipped for sound. RCA has been called upon to install, or has been contracted for some 250 sound producing units of its Model PG-140 of the RCA DeLuxe theatre series. RCA screens and Brenkert arc lamps are also used in many of these Army camp theatres.

Technical Services Used on Ships

The RCA Service Division, he said, is regularly called upon for technical services when ships come into port. Requests for such services may be received and handled at practically any port, as a result of the nationwide RCA field service organization.

The Navy employs RCA variable area sound-film recordings, and has contracted for additional RCA film recording apparatus of the portable newsreel type.

The Signal Corps, owning and operating most of the sound film recording facilities in Government service, does its work with RCA variable area recording apparatus. These facilities, currently being expanded sharply, are producing a large number of special films to train the rapidly developing Army.

Almost a year ago, RCA was awarded a contract to furnish and install complete projection booth and stage equipment for nearly 70 hospital recreation centers located in Army camps throughout the United States and some insular possessions.

The Office of War Information has taken over the RCA-equipped film recording facilities in the Department of Agriculture Building in Washington and is supplementing these with additional studio recording facilities as well as with single film recording facilities of the newsreel type. The OWI also has purchased complete sound picture equipment from RCA for three screening and preview rooms. In addition, the Social Security Board has installed a complete screening system with a number of novel features to meet their special needs.

PCA examining Scripts to Aid Censorship

The Production Code Administration is now examining all scripts that pass through its Hollywood office for possible violations of the wartime regulations imposed by the U. S. Office of Censorship. This new review service has been added to the PCA's other duties to forewarn producers of scenes or references which might have to be eliminated or remade for the export trade.

Carl E. Milliken, in charge of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., disclosed that the PCA board is reading scripts with an eye to their conformity to export rules of the censors, in the course of a meeting at New York on Monday with the international publicity managers committee. The new arrangement is not a censorship, he asserted, but merely a service to producers to forewarn them of possible violations of the censorship code.

All scripts, for both feature and short pictures, as well as stills, advertising copy and other material which passes through the Code Authority, are being checked for material which might be censored as being of value to the enemy.

The service was begun recently at the request of the studios, it was said. They sought to be relieved of part of the burden of checking their scripts for violations. Also, it was felt that the review by the PCA would bring about a uniform industry interpretation and application of the film rules recently laid down by the Office of Censorship and Byron Price, chief censor.

Film Censor Boards, PCA Cooperate

The U. S. motion picture censor boards, headed by Watterson Rothacker in California and Richard Smith in New York, are cooperating closely with the PCA in deciding whether a particular case violates the export-import censorship. The boards, it is understood, are ready to give an informal opinion in advance of production as to whether a scene in a script may be sent to the overseas market.

Several cases already have arisen, it was said, in which the PCA has saved studios from possible elimination, or expensive remakes to meet censorship objections. A long list of items is checked against each script to make certain films do not carry pictures of coast lines, war factories, military equipment or other subjects which might be of value to the enemy.

Also, it was said unofficially, the use of the PCA reviewing machinery relieves the studios of many demands by certain government agencies which have sought to assign representatives to studios to "advise" on regulations during production. Both Army and Navy censors have insisted on reviewing scripts in advance and have asked to assign advisers. The office of censorship and the PCA arrangement are expected to make many of these requests unnecessary.

Schenck Purchases Estate

Nicholas M. Schenck, MGM president, last week bought Mrs. Alan McIntosh's 20-acre Sands Point, Long Island, estate. Six hundred feet front on the water. The estate includes a 200-foot dock, swimming pool, tennis court, bathhouses, motion picture theatre, cottage and a main house with 30 rooms and 12 baths.

Mahan Leaves Warners

Roger Mahan, Warner Bros. branch manager in New York, has resigned.

F & M Sues for Stock Control Of St. Louis Amusement

Two suits were filed by Fanchon & Marco Enterprises, Inc., in the St. Louis circuit court last week to gain control of 52 per cent of capital stock in the St. Louis Amusement Company and to enjoin the Ambassador Investment Corporation and the amusement company from using the 52 per cent majority in voting at a stockholders' meeting the end of the month.

The suits alleged that under an option executed July 30, 1936, and valid for 10 years, F. & M. could purchase the 52 per cent controlling interest at any time. The petition says the defendants allegedly have circumvented the option arrangements and asks the court to direct the defendants to sell F. & M. the stock. The court also was asked to enjoin the company from increasing the number of members on the board of directors from five to seven.

Jersey Cooperative Reelects Officers

Members of the Associated Theatres of New Jersey reelected Irving Dollinger, president, and all other officers, at their fourth annual luncheon meeting at the Newark Athletic Club last week.

Other officers reelected for a year term are: H. H. Lowenstein, president of the board; Jack Unger, vice-president; Sidney Seligman, treasurer; and David Mate, secretary. Mr. Dollinger was reelected film buyer for the group. Mr. Unger and Joseph Siccardi will form an advisory buying committee with him to serve through the 1942-43 season.

Comerford Theatres Shifts Managers

Several shifts have been made by Comerford Theatres in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., as a result of the closing of the Strand and Irving theatres for the summer.

John Galvin, manager of the Irving, will relieve other central city managers on vacation while Ed Lawler, manager of the Strand theatre, will work with District Manager John Comerford in the suburban houses. Tom Curley, assistant manager of the Strand, goes to the Orpheum, succeeding George Welsh, who was transferred to the Capitol when assistant manager Joseph Flaherty entered the Army. James Feeney, assistant manager of the Irving, will aid manager William Walsh at the Comerford.

New Buffalo Booker

Evelyn Enghardt has succeeded Irving Singer as booker at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange in Buffalo. Mr. Singer, who resigned to enter the Army, was a guest at a party last weekend given by the Buffalo Variety Club.

Cancel Tournament

Officers and directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut have decided to forego the organization's annual golf tournament because of the war, Herman M. Levy, executive secretary, has announced.

Warners Donate $10,000

Warner Bros. has made an additional donation of $10,000 to the Air Cadet League of Canada, the company announced this week. The fund promotes the work of the Canadian air forces.

San Francisco Business Good

Despite heavy competition, San Francisco theatre receipts are maintaining a high level. Weekends are especially good.

Companies Now make Prints in Latin America

Faced with increasing shipping delays and cargo space shortage, American distributors for the first time now are making many of their prints for the South American market in Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro laboratories.

It is the first time that U. S. distributors have used Latin American laboratories extensively to meet their print needs. Argentine laboratories are now turning out between 10 and 15 prints per picture for at least five of the major distributors and several others report that they are planning also to print in South America.

Duplicate negatives are shipped by air express to laboratories in Buenos Aires or Argentina, where the pictures are printed, with Spanish subtitles. Although saving from six weeks to several months by this method, it is said to add substantially to the cost of prints for South America. Air express charges on a feature amount to several hundred dollars.

Warner Brothers have been printing in Buenos Aires since mid-winter. Joseph A. McConville, foreign sales manager for Columbia, last week disclosed that his company is also using the Latin American laboratories.

Sufficient Supplies Of Stock on Hand

There are sufficient supplies of Eastman and Du Pont raw stock on hand at present to take care of the needs of U. S. distributors, he said. However, raw stock shipments also are subject to delays and the film manufacturers will not guarantee delivery in South America of any specified footage. The technical quality of the Argentine and Brazilian laboratories was described as excellent by several foreign managers.

Film allotments to South America are being prorated in proportion to previous purchases. The possibility of rationing measures was admitted by distributors who said that conservation steps apply to the export trade as well as domestic users.

RKO has printed a number of its leading pictures in South America recently, although the general run of product is still going southward by boat. Universal has also printed a few special pictures in Buenos Aires, ordering from 10 to 12 prints. The pictures are used to service the southern and west coast Latin American market. Shipments to the Caribbean and Canal Zone territories are still moving by sea from the United States.

Films Are Moving Southward Steadily

Film is moving steadily southward, according to Massce-Barnett Company, the principal film forwarder, although the shipping shortage has caused considerable delay in delivery schedules. Shipments that formerly took a few weeks are now as much as three months in transit, or awaiting cargo space at embarkation ports.

Exports for South America are leaving from the Gulf ports, Los Angeles, and several eastern seaboard ports. Shipments previously left only from New York. Now they go from any port where bottoms are available. Only a few shipments have been lost at sea. Program pictures, short subjects and the general run of product is still going by sea and most companies report safe backlogs at their Latin American branches to tide them over temporary delays. Air express is used for newsreels.

Among the principal Argentine laboratories used by American distributors are Laboratorios Cinematigrafica Alex, Estudios Cristiani, S.I.D.E. and L.E.C.A. They have up-to-date U. S. equipment.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

Conservation Is Effective on Coast

Figures compiled by the Public Relations Committee, Western branch, index Hollywood's conservation efforts for the month of June.

The breakdown informs that application of 13 rules governing economy in production effected a saving of 30 per cent. Substitution of other materials for rubber is listed as reducing consumption of that commodity 90 per cent.

Use of tires was reduced 35 per cent according to the figures.

Salvage and straightening of nails achieved a 40 per cent economy.

"Salvage, substitution and construction cuts" reduced lumber consumption 50 per cent, it is indicated, while "substitutes and stockpile savings" economized use of metals 35 per cent.

"Eliminations, rerouting and grouping" cut transportation mileage 25 per cent and "new styling and re-use of materials" cut use of costume materials 30 per cent.

Another section of the report says that Hollywood produced 13 war training films and nine "war effort entertainment shorts" during June, in addition to signing up approximately 30,000 employees to put 10 per cent or more of their salary in War Bonds.

In its digging for ways and means to save film stock the Film Conservation Committee, now scraping the bottom of the barrel, is sparing nobody embarrassment.

An expedient emphasized last week was adoption of a rule requiring that writers furnish to bit players a thumbnail description of the characters they are employed to portray and a short synopsis of what the picture is about and how they fit into it, so they'll know what they're supposed to do before they start doing it for the camera.

Revelation that it had required a world war to get that practice started embarrassed everybody in town.

Maintain Peak

The production peak reached last week, when 56 pictures were in shooting stage, was maintained at 55 when seven new projects went before the cameras to replace eight taken to cutting rooms. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox led with eight pictures in progress at each of these lots, Warner Brothers following with seven and Universal with six, Republic ranking next with five and RKO Radio paired with Republic at four each.

Screen Obligations Cited by Skouras

Making his first visit to Hollywood since becoming president of 20th Century-Fox, Spyros Skouras last week told studio department heads and theatre circuit executives at a dinner tendered him by Colonel Darryl Zanuck that the motion picture ranks next to church and school as an instrumentality of truth, education and enlightenment.

"Possession of this great power of information entails many obligations," he said. "While no sacrifice is so great as that being made by those dying for the cause of humanity, we must continue to make sacrifices that we have already made and in even greater numbers. Washington agrees that our industry is as vital and plays as important a role in the war effort as any other business.

"Our aim will be to make the best pictures we know how and in this way we benefit morale and the war effort and help ourselves, the latter being incidental in this case. There are thousands of men in arms at farflung outposts whose only form of entertainment consists of motion pictures."

Colonel Zanuck said, "At no time have the movies been on the wrong side of issues vital to the nation. Motion pictures have not had adequate recognition of their war efforts and activities by the public, but officialdom is fully aware of the job the industry is doing. In due time, when more pressing matters have been disposed of, the work of men in our industry in fostering morale and contributing in many other ways to the over-all war campaign will be fully recognized."

Columbia Seeking Product Backlog

Columbia this week declared itself in on the spreading drive for accumulation of product, asserting "Columbia has built up the most impressive backlog of pictures in the company's history."

Into that backlog last week went "My Sister Eileen," the stage success directed for the screen by Alexander Hall, and "You Were Never Lovelier," directed by William Seiter. Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne are co-starred in the first, Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth in the second. Most publicized of the pictures in the Columbia vault is "Talk of the Town," co-starring Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman.

Also on the shelves, awaiting approach of football weather are, "The Spirit of Stanford," starring Frankie Albert, and "Smith of Minnesota," introducing Bruce Smith.

Other pictures in the backlog are "Blondie for Victory," "Sabotage Squad," "Overland to Deadwood," "Enemy Agents Meet Ellery Queen," "Boston Blackie Goes Hollywood," "Lucky Legs," "Law of the Badlands," "Stand By All Networks" and a serial, "Perils of the Royal Mounted."

Not only the people who write and produce the pictures, but now also the people who write about them, are going global-minded with respect to the screen.

Said Edwin Schallert, motion picture editor of the Los Angeles Times, in his Sunday edition, "Films as a missionary for the American way of life will have their great future after a war successfully waged against the Axis powers." Then he quoted a letter from Pearl Buck, the novelist, suggesting compilation of a list to show "what Americans consider their good films." Critic Schallert offered a list.

The Schallert selections are: "A Man to Remember," "Pride of the Yankees," "Boys Town," "The Magnificent Ambersons," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Blossoms in the Dust," "Our Town," "Northwest Passage," "Knute Rockne," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "You Can't Take It With You," "All That Money Can Buy," "Joe Smith, American," "Captains Courageous," "State Fair," "Sutter's Gold," "Alexander Graham Bell," "Swanee River," "The Fight for Life," "The River," "The Plough That Broke the Plains," "Gone With the Wind" and "Eagle Squadron."

PETRILLO FACES U. S. INQUIRY ON RADIO RESTRICTIONS

Fly Will Seek FCC Probe; NAB Attacks Rulings; Studio Strike Averted

James Petrillo president of the American Federation of Musicians, this week faced Government investigation of his efforts to restrict the broadcasting field to union musicians at the expense of small broadcasters using records and of amateur talent.

Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission disclosed that he would ask it to make a thorough investigation and determine its authority to issue appropriate orders.

In other Washington quarters there were suggestions that if the FCC finds it can take no decisive action the Department of Justice will be asked to determine whether Mr. Petrillo's actions constitute a "restraint of trade" in violation of the anti-trust statutes.

Chairman Fly said he had complaints from Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan and Joseph E. Maddy, president of the National Music Camp, Interlochen, Mich., against Mr. Petrillo's order barring a Michigan high school orchestra from the air; that he had also received complaints against previous orders of the AFM head barring the making of transcription records after July 31st; and that complaints had come in from Government sources that restrictions were being imposed in some areas on the work of Negro musicians.

Speaking of Mr. Petrillo's orders, Mr. Fly said they dealt with matters "which we view with very serious concern" because, he pointed out, if carried to the limit they might result in a breakdown in the public service for which stations are licensed.

Fly Cites Blow to Small Stations

Any restrictions on transcriptions, he said, would "greatly burden the entire broadcasting industry and make it impossible for the majority of the smaller stations to operate." Such stations, he explained, used records up to 60 per cent of their time on the air because of lack of adequate local talent and economic limitations, which make it impossible for them to employ professionals. At the same time, he added, many of the stations affiliated with national networks also make extensive use of transcriptions.

Mr. Fly said he had no details regarding the complaint that Negroes were being discriminated against.

Mr. Petrillo's reply on Monday was that his critics were "talking" so much, he would let them continue. He reiterated he had musicians' interests at heart, and that their unemployment problem was serious.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Broadcasters' board in Chicago last week charged Mr. Petrillo's prohibition of the manufacture by musicians of recordings will deprive millions of music on the radio.

The NAB statement said in part:

"As the result of a series of great inventions, Americans, wherever they live, have been accustomed to the best in entertainment. The radio, the motion picture and the phonograph bring the great artists to the smallest village as well as to our large centers of population. Mr. Petrillo's order amounts to a statement that only those people who live in large cities, and who can afford to see the great artists in person, are entitled to enjoy their performances.

"Mr. Petrillo is mistaken if he thinks that his order will bring more employment to musicians. All that it means is that millions of people will hear less music. Even if Mr. Petrillo's theory were correct, his order, at this time, would be not only arbitrary and illegal, but unpatriotic. Music plays a vital part in war morale. This is no time to destroy the phonograph and the electrical transcription, which bring the best in music to the people of the United States. This is no time to have any part of the nation's manpower engaged in the performance of artificially created tasks. This is no time to try to abolish one of the world's great inventions."

Studios Avert Strike; Parleys This Week

Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild members in Los Angeles exchanges returned to work Monday after a one-week strike, claiming a victory. The settlement averted spread of the strike to the studios.

Negotiations over the union contract with the Los Angeles exchanges of MGM, Columbia, RKO, Paramount and United Artists, began Tuesday. Settlement conferences were held Thursday and Friday, July 16th and 17th, with E. J. Mannix representing the producers, and Glenn Pratt, its business agent, the union.

Herbert K. Sorrell, president of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, of which the SOPEG is a member, said on Monday disputed points had been settled. He warned that intercession in the negotiations by Paul Watkins, who last week represented the exchanges, would not be tolerated.

In New York, the AFL's Local 23,169 at the Warner office, representing clerical workers, reached a tentative agreement last week with the management, on a contract; but Monday night, the union's 600 members voted a strike, asserting the company reneged on the agreement.

Date of the strike was not disclosed.

Company officials expressed surprise. A spokesman asserted the agreement of last week was approved by the union: and that the rejection, in the form of a telegram to Warner executives, was unexpected.

In New York, also, the CIO Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, is seeking a "consent" election for bargaining agency at the 20th Century-Fox New York exchange. Approval is sought from the company. The union already has filed a petition for certification with the National Labor Relations Board.

At the same time, the local is seeking from the board designation as agency for clerical workers in the United Artists New York home office.

Its attempt to gain "white collar" workers in the 20th Century-Fox exchange represents a phase of an organizational struggle with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, whose "B" unions have control of exchange "back room" employees, and which now declares that clerical workers are under "B" jurisdiction.

Richard F. Walsh, president of the IATSE, conferred with studio locals in Hollywood last week, over the "threat" of encroachment by the independent American Society of Cinematographers, which has been reported planning affiliation with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The bookers division of Local B-107 at the Philadelphia exchanges last week reached an accord for wage increases. They will vary with each booker, depending on his length of service with the company. The negotiating committee included James Flynn, Columbia; Ferdinand Fortunato, Universal; Buddy Bache, MGM, and Herbert Gillis, 20th Century-Fox.

Local 306 Elects Boritz To Succeed D'Inzillo

New York projectionists' local 306, of the IATSE, has elected Herman Boritz successor to Steve D'Inzillo, vice-president, who enlisted in the Army Air Corps. Mr. D'Inzillo did not resign. Mr. Boritz merely will serve as vice-president until the term expires in December, 1943. Mr. Boritz has been with Local 306 for 26 years. He is a member of the board and was several times its chairman.

On Monday, trial of Louis Kauiman, Newark IATSE local business agent, was again postponed, to August 17th, in New York federal court. He is charged with extortion. Also named in the indictment was Nick Circella, who pleaded guilty and was jailed. The two are charged with having obtained more than $1,000,000 from the major companies, in conspiracy with Willie Bioff and George Browne, also in federal penitentiaries.

Union Bans Musicians From Service Canteen

Opening of the Pepsi-Cola Company's Times Square Canteen for service men, New York, occurred Tuesday—without presence of the soldiers' orchestra from the show, "This Is the Army." Local 802, the city's musicians' union, forbade the unit to play. It asserted the project was civilian and commercial. Army officials admitted it was and that the union therefore was able to forbid an army unit from performing. Jacob Rosenberg, Local 802 president, denied that Mr. Petrillo activated the ban, and asserted:

"If the Army is going to go around playing benefits, we might as well fold up. We don't want them to compete with us."

He added that New York has thousands of unemployed musicians.

House Passes War Taxation Measure

Largest in U. S. History to Raise $6,271,200,000; 90% on Excess Profits

The House on Monday finally passed and sent to the Senate the largest single tax bill in American history, designed to raise $6,271,200,000 in new revenue. The House vote was 392 to two.

The Senate, which began consideration of the measure on Thursday, with opening of hearings before the Senate Finance Committee, is expected to revise the House measure upward to more nearly approach the figure of $8,700,000,000 declared by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., to represent the "minimum requirement" of revenue for the year to finance the war effort.

A last minute effort of the House Ways and Means Committee to reduce the combined normal and surtax levy on corporations from 45 to 40 per cent was defeated, then by voice vote the House approved an excess profits tax rate of 90 per cent, defeating the proposal of the Ways and Means Committee for a rate of 87½ per cent.

Under the House measure, the individual income tax rate has been increased on normal taxes from the present four per cent to six per cent, and the existing graduated surtax rates, applicable to the first dollar of net taxable income, ranging from six to 77 per cent, have been increased to a range of 13 to 82 per cent.

Personal Income Tax Exemption Lowered

Additionally, the measure lowers the existing personal income tax exemptions from 750 for single and $1,500 for married persons to $500 and $1,200, respectively, without change in the present exemption for dependents, thus reaching further down into the lower income brackets of the population as a source of income tax revenue.

Further, the House tax bill for the first time in American history imposes the "withholding" of the income tax at the source of payment of wages, salaries, interest, dividends and the like. This withholding tax, to be collected by the Government at the rate of five per cent beginning next January 1st, will be on a "pay-as-you-go" basis on 1943 incomes, at the same time with the discharge through present facilities of the income tax liability for 1942 incomes, collectible beginning next March 15th. The withholding tax will be 10 per cent in 1944.

Also provided in the measure, as affecting the film industry in particular, is an increase from 10 to 15 per cent in the tax on photographic film and paper, and from 10 to 25 per cent on other photographic equipment, exempting cameras weighing more than four pounds. Telephone bills and long distance telephone calls are subject to increased levies. Coin-operated amusement devices now exempt from the $50 slot machine or the $10 pinball-machine tax would pay a new tax of $10 annually.

It is expected in Washington that the Senate Finance Committee hearings on the controversial tax measure will prevent the bill from reaching the floor of the Senate until late next month or perhaps early in September.

Preferred Stock Sold by Zanuck

Darryl F. Next largest transaction reported in May was a series of sales by which J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Loew's, Inc., disposed of 2,000 shares of that company's common stock, leaving him with 8,315 shares. In the same company, the commission reported the filing of returns for periods from April, 1935, to March, 1942, by David Bernstein, treasurer, the latest of which showed the transfer to a corporation of his entire holdings of 22,220 shares of common stock, explained as being in part payment of indebetedness, and the sale by the corporation of 400 shares; at the close of March, the corporation held 28,100 shares.

Loew's, Inc., was reported as having picked up another 32 shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock, giving it a total of 119,273 shares.

Other reports carried in the SEC May summary showed that Robert W. Atkins and Jerome B. Ross, directors in Trans Lux Corporation, each acquired 100 shares of that company's common stock. At the close of the month Mr. Atkins held 100 and Mr. Ross 2,100 shares.

A report on Universal Corporation showed that Charles D. Prutzman, New York officer, bought 100 common voting trust certificates to give him an even 5,000.

Cincinnati Celebrates U. S. Heroes' Day

American Heroes' Day, July 17th, was celebrated in Cincinnati by the christening of a 66-foot replica of a U. S. destroyer, built on Fountain Square, in the heart of the downtown sector, at a cost of $6,000, with funds donated by the head of a nearby Covington industry. The destroyer, which was accepted for the Navy by Rear Admiral Frederick C. Sherman, commander of the Lexington, will remain in position for the duration to promote the sale of War Bonds and Stamps.

E. V. Dinerman, RKO advertising and publicity director in Cincinnati, who has been unusually active in the sale of bonds, took a prominent part in the ceremony, which was broadcast by the five Cincinnati radio stations.

'Mrs. Miniver' in Eighth Week at Music Hall

On Thursday Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Mrs. Miniver" started an unprecedented eighth week at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, having passed the million mark in attendance last weekend.

The record-breaking film which became the first in the 10-year history of the Music Hall to play a seventh week, thus earns the distinction of being the first to play an eighth week.

The 1,000,000th and 1,000,001st tickets were purchased at 9:08 Sunday (July 19th) by Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Simon, of New York, seeing the film for the second time.

An estimated 142,000 persons paid approximately $99,000 to see the film during the seventh week.

The picture, which had its Chicago opening at both the Apollo and United Artists theatres last Saturday, and grossed approximately $12,000 on Saturday and Sunday, is the only film to be shown in Chicago that has had the enthusiastic support of Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

Following a private showing of the picture for the Mayor early in the month he wrote a letter to Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., highly commending the film. Two days before the opening of the picture at the Apollo and United Artists theatres, the Mayor sent out under his signature a circular reproducing his letter to Mr. Schenck and addressed to all 16,100 Civilian Defense block captains, recommending that they see the picture and call it to the attention of their friends.

It has been set for fourth weeks in Cleveland and St. Louis, and is playing third weeks in New Orleans. Cincinnati, Kansas City and Atlanta.

Heavy Broadway Gross Despite Hot Wave

New York experienced the most severe heat wave of the season last weekend and, although millions fled to nearby beaches and parks, Broadway continued to play to capacity.

"The Pride of the Yankees" started its run last weekend with grosses of record proportions at the 1,135-seat Astor theatre, drawing an estimated $13,000 for the first three days.

"This Above All," which moved to the Roxy after a nine-week run at the Astor, drew an estimated $42,000 for the first four days of its scheduled two-week run at the Roxy.

The Strand had a big opening with "The Big Shot" and a stage show featuring Jerry Wald's orchestra and Judy Canova. It took an estimated $23,200 for the first three days and will be held over for a second week.

At the Paramount, "Are Husbands Necessary?" with a stage show headed by Hal McIntyre's band, Connie Boswell and Larry Adler, grossed an estimated $17,500 over the weekend.

At the Globe, "Eagle Squadron" started its third week with $9,400 for four days. "Yankee Doodle Dandy" is set for a long run at the Hollywood and tickets are selling in advance. It grossed an estimated $8,000 over the weekend to start its eighth week.

"Ambersons" Holdover In Several Cities

Orson Welles' "The Magnificent Ambersons," released by RKO Radio, has several holdovers. Opening simultaneously last week at the Hillstreet and Pantages in Los Angeles, business has been so steady that the picture is being held over for a second week. Good business also is reported from Syracuse, where the picture after a week at Keith's was moved over to the Eckel to continue the run.

New Orleans also showed lively interest at the box office and after a good week at the Orpheum "Ambersons" was moved to the Liberty for a second week. Other holdovers are the Golden Gate in San Francisco for a second week, and Keith's in Washington for a second week.

Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" opened July 12th at the London Pavilion theatre, London, to considerable critical acclaim, United Artists reports.

Walt Disney's "Dumbo," released by RKO Radio, has completed its first week at the de luxe Alameda, Mexico City, with a record gross for the year. The picture is being held over for a second week.

Radio Ballyhoo Big for 'Inn'

Paramount's radio exploitation campaign for the August pre-release engagements of its "Holiday Inn" have been described by the company as "most extensive," and involve a "blanketing" of three key radio points, New York, Chicago, and Hollywood.

More than 55 transcontinental shows are carrying music from the picture. They include the Cities Service show, the Texaco Star Theatre, the Take It or Leave It, the Quiz Kids, American Album of Familiar Music, the Phillip Morris Show, and the Kraft Music Hall.

Victor and Columbia Records are releasing 11 new Irving Berlin songs from the film; Decca is releasing a special album. Orchestras which have made the recordings are the Bob Crosby, Tommy Dorsey, Shep Fields, Sammy Kaye, Freddy Martin and others; and they feature such vocalists as Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire, the Ken Darby Singers, and Dinah Shore.

World premiere of the picture will be August 4th, at the Paramount Theatre, New York, under the auspices of the Navy Relief Society.

Circuit Buys Interest In Philadelphia House

The purchase at auction of a half interest in the Embassy theatre, Philadelphia, by the Wilmer and Vincent circuit has been approved by the court.

The house currently is operated on a lease held by Alexander and Sarah Kagen, which extends to April 1, 1965, with an option to renew for a term ending April 1, 1980.

'Dandy' Opening In Providence

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," now in the eighth week of its two-a-day run at the Hollywood theatre on Broadway, will make its out-of-town debut August 7th at the Majestic theatre, Providence, an Edward M. Fay house.

The Providence engagement, like the series of test runs opening next month in Warner theatres, will be on a continuous basis at advanced prices.

Cooperating on the Providence premiere will be the Town Criers of Rhode Island, civic organization, whose membership includes U. S. Senator T. F. Green, Governor J. Howard McGrath, Mayor Dennis J. Roberts, Joseph H. Gaines as chairman, and Ed Fay.

Samuel Goldwyn's "The Pride of the Yankees," starring Gary Cooper and released by RKO Radio, had its world premiere last Wednesday night in 41 theatres, 40 RKO theatres in the metropolitan area and the Astor on Broadway. The picture played only the one performance on the RKO circuit but continues its run at the Astor. More than 100,000 persons saw the multiple premiere, it was estimated.

"The Pied Piper," 20th Century-Fox picture, opened at the 3,000-seat RKO Palace in Rochester, N. Y., last week to a capacity house. Presented on the stage with local personages were Monty Woolley, star of the picture, and Anne Baxter and Otto Preminger, chief supporting players. They participated in a half-hour broadcast from the stage over station WHEC.

The upstate New York press was well represented, and there were many theatre men present. The premiere was arranged by Jay Golden, city manager for the RKO-Comerford pool.

Film Men Attend Rochester Opening

Among those attending the premiere were Charles Kurtzman, Loew's Theatres division manager; Hal Horne, 20th Century-Fox advertising and publicity director, and Richard Condon, publicity manager; John Basil of Buffalo; Oscar A. "Inside Fighting Russia," a short subject of the World in Action series, depicts the heroism of the Russian people.

Hollywood Studying Added Economies

Follows Screen Credit Cut Rejection; Film Delivery Status Clarified by ODT

Elimination of screen credits as a method of saving film was rejected last week by the Film Conservation Committee, Hollywood, which represents unions, guilds, and producers. The Committee, which meets weekly to develop economy measures, last week mulled many other suggestions.

Among economy measures reported on at the meeting was the use of full-length reels for all release prints instead of sub-lengths, with a saving in can and reel metals claimed for this step.

Most other economies considered pertained to procedures on sets and in laboratories. These are reported to achieve minor savings which combined will equal a major economy. Several technological suggestions were referred to the Academy Research Council with the committee indicating a willingness to accept the Council's decisions.

The elimination of credits had been viewed favorably several weeks ago, and the committee awaited the decision of the Screen Actors Guild, which indicated it would accept such elimination if other guilds did. However, opinion in the meanwhile has veered; and it was said the consenus last week was that the sales value of name credits transcends in importance the savings in film which might be effected.

Meanwhile, film delivery services on Monday received clarification of their status in Office of Defense Transportation regulations. Original ODT orders exempted trucks carrying explosives or other articles similarly dangerous. Films are not in that category.

ODT Orders on Film Delivery Eased

ODT orders were eased, also; the requirement for a 75 per cent load on a truck's return trip is not applicable if a full load has been carried for a major part of the trip to the destination, and if the driver has tried to obtain as full a load as possible.

Considering savings to be effected in film consumption, the industry this week studied reports of a proposal placed before the British Kinematograph Renters Society by Bernard Smith, British Equity president. Mr. Smith suggested that theatres reuse all black leader stock. For Britain, this would save 1,500,000 feet, Mr. Smith asserted.

Due to war emergencies, shortage of gasoline and tires, all fairs in Oregon and Washington have been called off, or seriously curtailed, for the duration.

20th-Fox Outing

Employee associations of the 20th Century-Fox and the De Luxe Laboratory will hold an outing up the Hudson River, August 1st.

Operators to Meet

The New England Projectionist Association will meet in Hartford, Conn., August 5th.

TYPEWRITERS ARE NEEDED, OWI SAYS

Business firms and the general public were invited last week by the Office of War Information to sell to regular dealers and those designated as official purchase depots, every standard typewriter in good condition which can be spared. The OWI said Government agencies and the armed forces need those machines urgently. It was also added that the WPB's power to requisition typewriters will not be exercised pending success of the appeal.

Ordinance would Restrict Houses

The City Council of Rochelle, Ill., has passed an ordinance which would place sharp restrictions on the construction of a second theatre in the city by operators of an existing house.

The ordinance was introduced under the auspices of G. W. Kruger, who operates the Hinsdale theatre at Hinsdale, Ill. Kruger and associates hold a lease on the Hub theatre in Rochelle and plan to occupy it following the completion of legal proceedings against the Alger Corporation of LaSalle, Ill., which allegedly refused to leave the Hub theatre property following the expiration of its lease last October.

The ordinance provides that no theatre may be erected unless a license has been obtained from the City Council, and unless consent of 51 per cent of the property owners within 300 feet of the proposed theatre is obtained. Such a theatre may not be within 300 feet of a school, hospital, garage, private residence, bowling alley, fire station or other theatre.

Sound Effects Bring Suit Against Drive-In

Those battle sound effects may put a theatre out of business; specifically, the Drive-In theatre in Lima, Ohio.

Six families have petitioned the court there to have the house declared a nuisance. They played in court recordings made of flying battle scenes in "Flying Cadets."

George James a, plaintiff, made the recordings in his bedroom.

Commonwealth Buys Two

The Lyric and Sterling theatres in Superior, Wis., have been purchased by Commonwealth Amusement of Kansas City from W. M. Youngclaus of Grand Island. The Sterling has been closed for some time and the Lyric will be closed shortly while it is being remodeled.

Plan Canadian Theatre

C. M. Adam of Stewart plans to build a new theatre in Terrace, British Columbia.

New Draft Brings Acute Shortage In Manpower

A manpower shortage, daily growing more acute, has been brought forcefully to the attention of the exhibition branch of the industry since the start of registration, four weeks ago, for Selective Service of those young men who were 18 and 19 years old or who had become 20 between January 1st of this year and June 30th. Every man in the country between the ages of 18 and 64 now has been registered and while the Government has declared that the theatres are essential, it is the constant fear of theatremen that key employees may be drafted for other industries regarded as more essential to the war effort.

Already, the manpower shortage has made itself felt in many situations. So far, according to circuit executives, from 20 to 70 per cent of assistant managers have been drafted; managers so far in the armed services run an average of about 15 per cent. The turnover among ushers is much higher, of course, but circuit heads point out that ushers' posts have always been difficult to fill with any permanence and that except for part-timers, a year is considered a long time for an usher to hold the post without promotion. Projectionists and maintenance men have not yet been drafted in large numbers, principally because the majority are married.

Certain regions of the country, particularly those near war industries, are finding the manpower problem more difficult of solution than others; yet, those who are in rural regions report that it is becoming next to impossible to draw boys away from farms where they are maintaining their draft-exempt status.

Demand Results in Higher Wage Scales

The demand for men has resulted in higher pay scales than have existed in several years. Where 10 years ago an assistant manager was paid from $25 to $35 a week, the same positions now command $45 and $50. Responsibilities of assistant managers are regarded as heavy but opportunity is supposed to compensate for the lower salary.

Inability to obtain assistant managers has resulted in elimination of the position in many circuits. When managers are requred to leave the theatres for dinner, doormen take charge. On the manager's day off, a relief manager takes his post.

At IATSE headquarters it was said that the records showed 1,025 men in the service, although it was said that there might be many more who had joined the fighting forces. Latest records show approximately 45,000 men on the IATSE rolls. No figures for employment could be given by national headquarters, but several locals report that they cannot obtain men; some theatres are using two men to run the same number of shows formerly handled by four. Days off have been cancelled in some spots and still others report men working two shifts.

Some of this is attributed to the fact that there were always a number of relief men who got only a few days of employment each week; when war industries opened up, whether in their home towns or not, men with the mechanical skill necessary to be projectionists and electricians were in demand. Consequently, relief men are no longer available. War industries also have taken some of the regularly employed projectionists and stagehands who see in wartime jobs the prospect of more money, at least for the duration.

Clearance Award is Upheld on Appeal

Asbury Park, N. J., First-Run Houses Win in Board's 29th Decision

Clearances in favor of de luxe Asbury Park, N. J., first run shore resort theatres were upheld by the motion picture arbitration Appeal Board this week in its 29th decision.

Ruling on the award of Robert Abelow, arbitrator of the clearance demand of the Strand theatre in Keyport, N. J., against MGM, Warners, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox, the board affirmed his findings in respect to the first run Asbury Park theatres, but changed rulings affecting the Ocean and Savoy theatres, Asbury Park subsequent houses. It was the 17th New York case.

The board found that in view of the exceptional drawing power of the de luxe first run Paramount, Mayfair and St. James theatres, their 14-day margin over Keyport is reasonable, as the arbitrator ruled. It also affirmed his reduction to three days of the clearance of the smaller first run Lyric theatres.

Mr. Abelow's award of one day maximum clearance to the Savoy and Ocean theatres, subsequent run Asbury houses, was reversed. The Appeal Board found that the theatres do not hold contractual clearance over the Strand and said the one-day maximum was not justified because of competitive status and seasonal operation by the Ocean.

The board observed that the Keyport clearance is set from Asbury Park, not Perth Amboy, and found there was no competitive reason for Perth Amboy theatres to intervene.

Citing a previous decision on Asbury Park clearance, Decision No. 22, in which the board granted a seven-day maximum to the de luxe first runs over the Liberty theatre, in Freehold, the board said the two cases differed substantially as to competitive situations. The fact that Red Bank theatres, day and date with Keyport, were in the same competitive zone was cited in maintaining the 14-day Asbury margin.

Costs were split 13 ways against complainant, intervenors and defendants.

Dallas

The Texas theatre, operated at Bastrop, Tex., by Edward Joseph, won a partial victory in its combined clearance and some run action against MGM, Warners, Paramount and 20th-Fox last week in a six-part award by C. F. O'Donnell, arbitrator. It was the sixth Dallas case. The Strand, Tower and Rio theatres in Bastrop, new theatres, intervened. They are operated by the J. C. Long, Harley Sadler and B. C. Gibson interests.

Mr. O'Donnell set a 15-day maximum for Bastrop first run over second and 30 days between first and third. The maximum period, during which distributors can withhold licenses to subsequent runs, was set at 15 days. Distributors were ordered to observe contract provisions as to dating. The time within which the Strand and Tower may exercise their option for second run in Bastrop was set at 15 days after availability.

On the some-run portion of the action it was ordered that pictures on which no other Bastrop theatre has prior or superior contractual rights be made available to the Texas for some run within reasonable time. The Texas' demand for the same run and terms as the Strand and for clearance over the Tower and Rio was dismissed.

Costs were divided between complainant and defendants.

Philadelphia

The Crest Amusement Company, operator of the Crest theatre on Rising Sun Avenue in southwest Philadelphia, filed the tribunal's 21st case on Thursday. A clearance action, it names all five consenting distributors, United Artists, Columbia, and Universal and first run Wilmington, Del., theatres.

The Crest, operated by Benjamin Shindler, Sylvan B. Shaivitz and Harry Rubenstein, asserted that it must wait from six weeks to three months after Wilmington, Del., first and second runs for pictures. It follows the second run Arcadia by seven days. The complaint charges that there is no competition between the suburban Philadelphia house and Wilmington and asks that it be granted a reasonable margin of 10 days after first run Wilmington, as are other houses in a comparable area.

The Ritz, Park and Rialto theatres of Wilmington are named as interested parties.

Los Angeles

An appeal from the dismissal of the clearance complaint of the Century theatre, Los Angeles, was filed last week by the complainants, Sidney Pink and James Moritz. They asked that the Appeal Board reverse the ruling in the seventh case of H. Eugene Breitenbach, who last week dismissed the Century complaint, Los Angeles' seventh, asserting that existing clearances should be maintained for the duration of the war.

Another recent Los Angeles award, in case No. 6, was appealed on July 15th by the intervenor. The Minor Estate, operators of the Major and Magnolia theatres, intervenor in the clearance action of the San-Val theatre, appealed an award by J. M. Rust, arbitrator, cutting the Burbank theatres margin over the San-Val from 63 to 28 days. The intervenor asserted that an increase in its prices justified continuing the clearance.

The fifth Los Angeles case, clearance complaint of L. W. Allen for the Southgate theatre, will be arbitrated by Milo W. Bekins.

Fire Damages Theatre

The 650-seat Gordon theatre, Middletown, Ohio, recently remodeled, was damaged by fire last week. A short circuit in the cooling system is believed to have been the cause of the fire. The house is one of four local units of the Northio circuit, owned by Paramount.

Photographers Headquarters

The Press Photographers Association of New York, Inc., has opened new permanent headquarters at 22 East 42nd Street, New York.

Canadian Legion Commends CBC

The Canadian Legion in a letter to Dr. J. J. Accan, chairman of the special House of Commons Committee on Broadcasting, supports the Canadian Broadcasting Company management and organization, pointing out that "there has been a magnificent development from the listeners' point of view" under the present administration.

The legion declared little of what can be said to CBC's credit had been presented at committee hearings. "The political problems peculiar to Canada are bound to be reflected somewhat in the operation of the CBC. Especially is this the case because of our bilingualism. In this respect we feel that our legislatures should not expect the CBC to solve problems which they themselves find it extremely difficult to deal with," the letter said.

69 Employed 20 Years At 20th Century-Fox

A total of 69 men and women have been employed by 20th Century-Fox and its subsidiary or predecessor corporations for 20 years or more. I. J. Schmertz, manager of the Cleveland exchange, holds the record for continued service with almost 34 years, while Leon De Titta, chief projectionist, holds the service record among home office employees with 26 years.

Among those listed are Edmund Reek, Russell Muth, William J. Kupper, William Gehring, Edward Collins, James Glynn, Jack Sichelman, Ted Shaw and Jack Bloom.

Seek Tax Cut

Reduction on tax assessment of $2,061,000 is being sought by the Woodmount Corporation, receiver for the Fox theatre, Detroit. Valuation has been increased about $300,000 in the last three years. The State Tax Board contends that the increase is necessary to keep the assessment in line with that for the United Artists and Michigan theatres, which are of similar scale and construction.

The SCREEN and WAR MORALE

Comparing Nazi controlled technique and free American methods

"Is Hollywood superior to the Nazi film industry in building war morale?"

Under this heading "International Correspondence", an interpretative news service, in its issue of July 16th publishes an article which discusses the wartime efforts of the American and the German film industries.

This news service, which is credited with exceptional sources of information and is manned by a staff of persons experienced in international affairs, originally was published in Brussels. At the time of the Nazi invasion of Belgium it removed to Lisbon. Several months ago it took up headquarters in New York City. The editor of the service is John J. O'Connor, head of the department of history of St. John's University. The article, in part, on the films says:

I. If the film industry produced war films exclusively, the movie-going public would be bored to death and motion picture theatres would be almost empty. American and German producers have understood this, and more than 80 per cent of films are of the purely escapist type, put together for no other purpose than to relax taut nerves by adventure stories and more or less enjoyable romances or comedies.

When Hitler came to power in 1933 he made a great display of a film purge against tendencies of extreme pessimism and brutal immorality, which at that time impregnated German productions. But the reform did not last long and in three or four years the slapstick production of Nazi studios tended in the opposite direction—more systematically libertine than before, although producers often hypocritically placed the locale of their most perverse comedies in "decadent" France, or even exploited Greek mythology. "Meine Tochter Tut Das Nicht" (My Daughter Doesn't Do That), one of the recent successes, tells the typical story of the Nazified daughter who succeeds in overcoming the resistance of her old-fashioned parents.

The voluntary self-censorship in Hollywood production, which developed under the urge of public opinion, mainly through the influence of the Legion of Decency, seems to have been stepped up by the war. The American production is definitely superior to the German in its decreasing number of flagrant transgressions against the commonly accepted moral standards.

II. Direct war propaganda in the Third Reich, as in the United States, is mainly accomplished through newsreels and short-subject films. There are three major characteristics of Nazi newsreels.

(A) They go in for an unbelievable amount of shouting and ranting. The commentator allows his audience not a second of relaxation, but overwhelms it by proud, domineering or heavy contemptuous phrases. This policy has, since 1941, lost its effectiveness. Even the German audiences do not cheer any more and in the occupied countries hooting and booing are the normal reactions. Quite frequently theatres have been shut down because of inopportune cheering as, for example, when a picture is flashed on the screen showing the destruction caused by RAF bombers in Germany.

(B) German newsreels are also characterized by a large number of staged events. Scenes showing Hitler kissing some ten or eleven-year-old girl on the street, Hitler surrounded by enthusiastic soldiers, Hitler sharing the common soldier's mess—all have long since become tiresome.

(C) Strictly faked newsreels have become a joke in Germany. Scenes showing bags of wheat being unloaded at Antwerp, with the conspicuous marking "gift from Germany," have caused immense hilarity, because a great many people saw how the propaganda label was fixed on the very same bags in which the wheat had been originally delivered to the Germans.

American newsreels, on the contrary, maintain a healthy matter-of-fact tone, which is, in the long run, the best propaganda. It is a fact that American audiences cheer more heartily and spontaneously than in any other country, particularly at those passages where there is no direct propaganda.

Americans Not Adept At Creating Hatred

III. In America about 20 per cent of the films of pure adventure or comedy have a war background. The German are too systematic to use this lighter genre and it is rare to find a Nazi film which does not go in for heavy indoctrination whenever a war subject is used. Americans are not adept in creating or stimulating hatred. They have too keen a sense of humor—and it is best so. In some instances, such as "To Be or Not to Be" or "My Favorite Blonde," a new style of comedy has been developed. There is no argument to prove that the Nazis, simply because they are evil, cannot form a good subject for ridicule. Some other films, as "The Invaders" or "Saboteur," are at least as good as other detective or adventure stories and, incidentally, some correct notion, however superficial, about the mentality of Nazism is conveyed. It is good for America to maintain the privilege for making fun even out of serious things, for the purpose of relaxation. It would be naive to propose them seriously as morale films.

Germans Concentrate On Trick Photography

IV. There are a small number of films which are made for the direct building of a war morale, for the building of a philosophy of life which will sustain and inspire a successful war effort. The German State-controlled film industry, unlike the American, is not bound to make concessions to the prevailing taste of the paying public. And it has undoubtedly achieved some great artistic successes. A close analysis reveals

(a) that in their great films the Germans have concentrated most of their attention on the strictly formal experiments of trick photography and montage, and

(b) that they have gone in for the heavily heroic and dramatic superman or super-villain stories which do create a violent and overpowering impression, but which, in fact, never influence the life of the man of the street. Such epic films as "The Two Kings" (story of Frederick the Great and his son), "Kruger" (Boer leader against the British), and "Sir Roger Casement" (Irish Revolt), display colossal energy, but cannot be said to create conviction. The famous "Jew Suss" and "Rothschild" display such extravagant Jewish perversity as to lose all plausibility. The film, "I Accuse," in defense of euthansia, cannot impress the common man, and the numerous films which stress the duty of a defeated military commander to save his honor by suicide are generally just noisy verbiage.

The principal American films devoted positively to war issues are "The Great Dictator," "Joe Smith—American," "This Above All," and "Mrs. Miniver." Their superiority to German propaganda films lies mainly in the fact that each of these films is based on the deeply human reactions of the average citizen or average family.

The type of Charlie Chaplin, the underdog, even though by chance a dictator, derives its popular appeal from a close identification with the man in the street. Charlie's heart is the heart of the masses, even though his garb is much shabbier.

"Joe Smith—American" is not a masterpiece, but expresses in an exceptionally faithful way the common sincerity and decency of the ordinary factory worker.

Although there is a lot of easy romanticism in "This Above All," the young woman who breaks away from her class prejudices and the young Socialist who does not see the guarantees for social revolution in the current conflict, express courageously enough a real trend living in the masses.

"Mrs. Miniver" is one of the most perfect films thus far produced. It embodies the perfection of simple things. It is outstanding in the superb choice of those utterly human and revealing details which bring us very close to the stout hearts of the people in a people's war. Unessential things are swept away by the war and simple things once again assume their proper value. Without pathos or hysterics, the decision is made that the boy shall volunteer for the RAF. The husband grumbles a matter-of-fact "yes" when asked to join the small-craft rescue fleet for Dunkirk. Prosaically Mrs. Miniver accomplishes difficult tasks, stands up under the battering of fortune. When the daughter-in-law is killed by her side, there is intense silence, the welling up of boundless reserves of fortitude, and just one word, one cry from the depths: "God!"

"ARE HUSBANDS NECESSARY?"

"DON'T MAKE ME LAUGH!"

"That's a hot one; that question. I'm about as necessary in the Cugat home as the plague—or so Liz seems to think, since Myra hit town. There's nothing to put icicles in a wife's voice like a surprise visit from an old flame! Necessary? I'm practically tabu!"

George and Liz Cugat—and Myra—are three of the swell characters in Paramount's summer fun-fest, "Are Husbands Necessary," based on the best-seller "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat." Your audiences know 'em best as Ray Milland, Betty Field and Patricia Morison—three of their special favorites!

Goldwyn Urges Studio Output Slash of 40%

Slash film production by 40 per cent and eliminate double features in order to effect a substantial saving in film raw stock, Samuel Goldwyn, independent producer, recommended on Monday in New York.

Goldwyn also expressed the opinion that the proper merchandising of films requires that they be sold singly, and at advanced prices when necessary. These suggestions were included among a number of other recommendations and observations made by the producer to trade press representatives in his suite in the Waldorf Towers, as he presented the viewpoint of the independent producer.

Conservation was Mr. Goldwyn's chief topic. "With benefit to the industry," he asserted, "we can cut out 40 per cent of the pictures being made."

The result, as he sees it, would be elimination of double feautres and longer runs on good pictures.

"The honest and sincere way to save is to cut out double bills," he emphasized, adding: "then you'll save millions of feet, not hundreds of thousands."

He scoffed at proposed elimination of credits and other conservation measures proposed. "Why should an actor be deprived of his stcok in trade, his name," he asked; "and why should film makers be deprived of retakes? You've got to shoot until you're right—that's the way to good pictures."

Defends Longer Runs, Sliding Price Scales

The longer runs which duals elimination would necessitate Mr. Goldwyn defended as corollaries of good marketing, and he ridiculed the argument that small rural and neighborhood houses must change often.

This brought him to discussion of advanced prices and sliding scales. He demanded to know whether a "department store sells everything at the same price."

Noting the time and money spent on his own films, Mr. Goldwyn asserted: "I shouldn't be required to sell my pictures at the same price as the other fellow"—who, he commented, might have spent only $100,000. He asserted his own risk was greater, and demanded a greater return, and insisted the public didn't want "to see cheaper pictures" on the same program.

The past year has seen the "greatest pictures Hollywood ever made in one year," he noted.

"If you're reasonable, and deliver goods," he continued, "the public is willing to pay."

Mr. Goldwyn advocated selling pictures "one at a time—instead of going back to block booking," which is what the United Motion Picture Industry's new sales plan appears to him.

"Is it progress to go backwards?" he asked, and said that presidents of three majors under the decree and, hence, in the new UMPI plan—are "bitterly opposed" to it, but are "going along because they're afraid of hurting the exhibitors' feelings."

The decree sales method being abandoned is one under which the majors have done "darn well" and Hollywood has made its best pictures, the producer insisted. The studios have discovered, he said, that "they can play one picture eight weeks in situations, and prefer this to having eight pictures play eight weeks.

"The decree was very simple," he continued. "It caused no hardship. It was a 'hardship' only for the exhibitor to come see the pictures trade shown." He added that, even in such instances, the majors went out of their way to aid exhibitors.

"JUST MAKE US LAUGH!"

"We don't want preachments and we don't want problems; we wanta be ENTERTAINED! Make us laugh, grin and have a good time—so we can forget the heat for an hour!" That's the cry of ALL summer audiences; it's a more determined cry than ever this year, when America at war makes periods of carefree relaxation imperative.

"Are Husbands Necessary" is all fun—"just the tonic entertainment-seekers want," as Showmen's Trade Review put it. Book it now and be ready to carry out that request—"Just make us laugh!"

New Mexican Film Union is Threat to Labor Peace

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS

in Mexico City

Complaint has been lodged with President Manuel Avila Camacho by Pedro Tellez Vargas, secretary general of the National Union of the Cinematographic Industry, that the Mexican Union of Cinematographic Workers, which was recently organized here, is obstructing the Government's labor peace program by trying to undersell help for exhibitors and other employers of the industry. The National Union, said Mr. Vargas, is the only picture industry union in Mexico and the new organization does not have any picture workers as members. Mr. Vargas declared his union has about 7,000 members and controls workers throughout the industry.

A political fight is apparent in this controversy. Mr. Vargas has said in advertisements published over his name that the Mexican union is backed by the Confederation of Workers and Farmers and that his outfit belongs to the Confederation of Mexican Workers, generally regarded as Mexico's strongest labor organization. The President is expected to take action shortly.

"How Green Was My Valley" scored a new high gross of $23,000 in four consequtive weeks at the Cine Olimpia, the only first run theatre here managed by an American, Edmund B. Noonan. It was the highest gross at the theatre in its 22 years. The film was shown at high prices for Mexico—55 cents during the first two weeks, and 45 cents during the last two.

Publicity Is Now Under Official Supervision

The Federal Government has organized in cooperation with the National Publicists Association, a National Propaganda Coordination Commission, to supervise all publicity issued in Mexico, in the interest of the United Nations' cause. Pictures and radio have committees of their own on this Commission. Felipe Gregorio Castillo, director of the Government's Film Censoring and Supervision Department, is chairman of the picture committee, while Quintin Rueda, chief of the Government's radio department, heads that for radio.

Discord already has developed in the administration of the Academy of Cinematographic Art that the National Union of Cinematographic Industry Workers and the Government opened here last winter with the object of providing Mexico with college-trained picture players. Julio Bracho, the director who was awarded first prize for his work in 1941, has resigned as principal and is to open a screen acting school of his own here. The Union and the Government have appointed Celestino Gorostiza, dramatist and scenarist, to succeed Mr. Bracho and announce that the Academy will be continued.

An exhibition ban has been ordered by the Government's film censoring and supervising department on the Mexican picture, "Aguila Rojo ("Red Eagle") on the ground that many of its scenes and much of its dialogue are immoral.

Offers of their services as nurses or in any other capacity the Government desires for the duration, made personally by leading Mexican film actresses, have been accepted by the Public Welfare Ministry.

Columbia

ADVENTURES OF MARTIN EDEN: Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor——Played this with "Two Yanks in Trinidad" and managed to lose a little on it although the show was not bad. This is not the thrill you might think it is. It starts off with a bang and ends quite well but the middle section is very slow. The audience and I had the fidgets waiting for it to get under way again. Too bad because as a whole it is well done. Played July 9-10.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier—A fine show that drew extra business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 28-30.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, DeLeon, Tex. Small town patronage.

TWO YANKS IN TRINIDAD: Pat O'Brien, Brian Donlevy—Ran this with "Adventures of Martin Eden" to somewhat of a loss at the box office. This is a good slambang army comedy that managed to get a good share of laughs. Janet Blair is worth remembering in it. Pat O'Brien and Brian Donlevy make a good comedy team, worth continuing. You'll have everybody trying the dollar trick used in it. Played July 9-10.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Rapidly losing their draw. Next Hardy pictures goes in on dish night. Donna Reed is good and lovely. Running time, July 5-6.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—Double billed with the 20th Century-Fox picture "Lone Star Ranger" to the usual patronage for the weekend. Both pictures are very good, but I made the mistake of not booking this feature on Wednesday-Thursday. It is too good to double with anything. When you play this deal on the public's patriotism and you will not be sorry. Played July 10-11.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

KATHLEEN: Shirley Temple, Herbert Marshall, Laraine Day—A very nice little picture to ordinary business. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 24-25.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan, John Garfield—Business fair. Stars adequate. Morgan steals the show. Crowd reaction very unfavorable. If your patrons appreciate a well-acted effort give preferred date. Otherwise play it and hide. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 5-6.—N. J. Keenan, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Rural patronage.

TORTILLA FLAT: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Good business to disappointed audience. Picture a flop here. Played July 6-7.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Rural patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson—An excellent picture and excellent business. Frank Morgan is tops. Running time, 101 minutes. Played June 28-29.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson——There is something I cannot figure out. This picture has lived up to what Metro said it was, but the termites in the box office were not disturbed once during the entire engagement. Flopped, but am still puzzled as to why. Played July 8-9.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

WE WERE DANCING: Norma Shearer, Melvyn Douglas—If MGM makes many more of this type for small towns they will dance below Monogram in my book. Running time, 94 minutes. Played July 7.—N. J. Keenan, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Rural patronage.

WE WERE DANCING: Norma Shearer, Melvyn Douglas——Very silly. Broke our record on poor business. The poorest we have had in two years. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR, THE: Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn—Good picture to light business. Not a small town show. Running time, 114 minutes. Played July 5-6.——E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—There was almost everything in this pictnre including enough of that delectable Miss Lamour to prodnce nice resnlts at the box office. There was not a dull moment throughout the entire length of the production and the audience was in an uproar practically half the time. Played June 28-29.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

GREAT MAN'S LADY, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—Very good western drama. Business a little above average. Many favorable comments. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HENRY AND DIZZY: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—Boys, here is a show that packed them in for two nights. And how they enjoyed it. Didn't cost mnch but showed a swell profit. Better than "Reap the Wild Wind" by a mile. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 3-4.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, DeLeon, Tex. Small town patronage.

PACIFIC BLACKOUT: Robert Preston, Martha O'Driscoll—The first part of this picture was certainly a blackout, but the conclusion improved somewhat. Business almost nil. Played July 1-2.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Cal. Small lumber town patronage.

REAP THE WILD WIND: Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard—A good show but not a "Sergeant York" or "Gone With the Wind." Reaction bad. IRENE: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland—Played this a little late and find I should not have played it at all. An unsurpassed RKO disappointment. Played July 8.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—If in all my life I have ever played a better photoplay, I cannot recall the time. This is life, not just a photoplay, flashed on a silver screen, but the very stark drama of life itself. John Ford, Darryl Zanuck, Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon and the entire force have conveyed to the public a masterpiece. Played July 6-7.—Mrs. B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

RISE AND SHINE: Jack Oakie, Walter Brennan, Linda Darnell—A football story. Not so good now. Very poor business. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

United Artists

FIESTA: Anne Ayars, George Negrete—A honey of a picture suitable for the second half of most any program. Some unknown dopey character comedian stole the honors from Givot. What possibilities this comic has if given proper attentions, more effective at pantomine. Played June 28-29.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Universal

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Abbott and Costello—They all came to see another "Buck Privates," but it seems this gave them both barrels in their initial effort. Played July 5-6.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Rules Music on Radio Infringes Copyright

Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe last week ruled that the use of copyrighted music on a radio program was an infringement under federal law definition as a "public performance for profit" even though the broadcast was made by a non-profit station on a sustaining program. Following the decision, the court issued an injunction in favor of the Associated Music Publishers, Inc., copyright owner, against Debs Memorial Radio Fund, Inc., operator of WEVD, and Henry Greenfield, general manager.

WEVD had broadcast part of "Petite Suite Espanole" of E. F. Arbos in 1940 on its "Symphonic Hour" program, the plaintiff charged and WEVD admitted. The station claimed that it was not an infringement because there was no commercial gain and furthermore that the music was played from a record bought in the ordinary channels of trade.

Extortionists Arrested On Complaint of Mayer

Meyer Phillip Grace, 39, former pugilist, and Channing Drexel Lipton, 25, a filling-station employee, were arrested this week in Los Angeles on a charge of attempting to extort $250,000 from Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Both men confessed having demanded $250,000 under threat of death in a letter mailed at Beverly Hills on June 25th and to having picked up a dummy package July 13th, according to J. W. Vincent, assistant special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Los Angeles.

Buffalo Variety Club Honors Robinson

Kenneth Robinson will be tendered a testimonial dinner Monday night by the Buffalo Variety Tent. He is leaving the Paramount exchange there.

On the arrangements committee are Dewey Michaels, Syd Lehman, Phil Fox, Harry Berman, Mike Simon, Jack Goldstein.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Notes and Comment

Having just returned from a short trip during which we had the pleasure of meeting some of the country's finest showmen and talking shop with them, it's a pleasure to pass along some of the constructive thoughts they have voiced.

There seems to be almost universal dissatisfaction with the policy of newspapers in gauging the amount of publicity by the amount of advertising space paid for by the theatre. Newspaper representatives admit this policy frankly. Theatremen point to the sports pages from which almost no revenue is derived; the newspapers' retort to that is the fact that the sports pages are regarded as as much part of the selling value of the paper as the front pages with the hottest news. That only begins the old argument but there seems to be some strong feeling on the part of theatremen, especially since they are now able to point to the fact that the Government considers the motion picture an essential industry..

It is a real source of satisfaction to note the great interest displayed in the Quigley Awards. We were fortunate in meeting a number of the recent winners and were able to congratulate them personally. Winning a Quigley Award is an important event in the life of a showman. For example, here's an extract from a letter from A. J. Kalberer, manager of Switow's Indiana Theatre, Washington, Ind.: "Along with our Award, you may be interested to know, came a nice weekly raise in appreciation of our efforts and for recognition in the Herald". "Kal" takes care to point out that Sam Switow, general manager of the circuit, who has just joined the Army, is "tops" among bosses.

There's an old saying: "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em". The adage is good advice, as proved by Bud Kornblite of the Capitol Theatre, Waverly, New York. Waverly is the home of the famous J-E Ranch Rodeo which shows annually there during the week of July 4th. Formerly, the theatre just took a beating that week. But Bud cooperated with the owner, Col. Jim Eskew, by decorating the theatre and posting signs welcoming him to town and running ads in the paper to the same effect. In return, the back page of the Rodeo's program featured Roy Rogers and gave playdates on his next film at the Capitol. The loudspeakers, before announcing resumption of the show after the intermission recommended that the audience see the current attraction at the Capitol. That's showmanship! Next time one of those tough competition weeks comes along, tie up with it.

Latest device to earn goodwill on the part of the Loew Theatres is the setting aside of each Monday as War Mothers night. Here is a praiseworthy idea which may well be adapted by any theatre. If Monday is not suitable, perhaps some other night can be designated.

The idea is simple. Loew's Theatres have announced that for the duration they will "adopt" the mother of every soldier, sailor and Marine in the U. S. armed forces. The mothers are registered at their neighborhood Loew Theatres either by themselves or anyone who knows them. On Monday nights, those who have been registered are presented with a corsage, candy, etc. Hooray for another good idea!

Getting Your Money's Worth

Tear sheets from newspapers all over the country are constantly coming before us and meriting our close attention. Of the three great fields of showmanship — advertising, publicity and exploitation — it is advertising which costs the most and therefore should receive every showman's close supervision.

Good advertising does not end with the preparation of the copy and its delivery to the newspaper. Its relative position on the page and the position of that page in the paper is mighty important.

It is not within our purview to criticize a newspaper's policy but it does seem that this is as good a forum as any in which to complain about those newspapers which habitually put all theatre ads under the fold—on the lower half of the paper.

Those theatremen who have some influence with their newspapers make every effort to "build up" the larger theatre ads so that they are partly, if not altogether, above the fold. We realize that this is contrary to policy in lots of papers where the custom is to pyramid ads with the largest at the bottom and the smallest at the top. There is no good reason for this system—logic would dictate that the larger ad be given a favored position.

There are probably many arguments which can be advanced by newspapers for putting the smaller ads on top. But none seems particularly valid against the contention that the ad which costs the most should get the best position.

WAR ACTIVITIES

Civilian Organization Cooperation is Enlisted by Theatremen

Since Clay Cornell at the State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y. is chairman of the local "On to Victory" Committee and all boys must go to nearby Saranac Lake for roll call and leave there for the point of induction, the theatreman has worked up a motorcade to drive the men to that point. Merchants display flags, the fire department squad car with siren open and private cars act as the escort through the town. After the two week furlough, the Committee again picks up the boys and delivers them to the train. Since the trains makes a 10 minute stop in Tupper Lake, a crowd is at the station to give the boys a rousing sendoff.

Clay has also cooperated with the Red Cross, offering to facilitate the distribution of the First Aid certificates at his boxoffice. A reader to this effect is run in the paper and the cards are filed alphabetically and handed out as called for.

With military and postoffice authorities lending a hand, Lou Golden, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, St. Paul, engineered a tieup on "Ten Gentlemen From West Point," which resulted in the sale of $1,000.00 in War Bonds during the opening day.

Every person buying one or more War Bonds was given free admission. The St. Paul post office set up a bond booth in the lobby of the theatre, with young women donating their services for this patriotic event. An army "peep" was exhibited in front of the Orpheum, with other articles of miltiary equipment being displayed within the lobby. The exhibit was made complete by the presence of military police from nearby Fort Snelling.

A goodly amount of rubber was promoted recently by Boyd F. Scott at the Broadway Theatre, in Lubbock, Texas through his kid rubber matinee. "Scotty" tied his collection into a local charity, the entire sales of the collection going to the orphanage. This tieup was good for breaks in the paper.

L. B. Freund of the Century Kingsway Theatre, in Brooklyn, sends evidence of the circuit's "Buy War Bonds and Stamps" parade, which was held on the 4th of July.

Sorority girls gave out candy kisses to every Stamp buyer, thus providing a tie-in line for "They All Kissed the Bride" at the Senate Theatre, Springfield, Ill. Dave Jones, advertising manager of the Kerasotes Theatres in Springfield reports $125 worth of Stamps sold by the girls.

Sponsored by the Skouras Theatres was a "United We Stand" rally held recently in front of the State Theatre, in Jersey City during which time $111,650 worth of war bonds are reported to have been sold.

Lowell Thomas, radio and newsreel commentator auctioned the bonds from a platform, while participating in the parade were representatives of the 28 United Nations, in addition flags of the nations were flown from the theatre's marquee. Conover models were on hand to auction off bonds at $1000 a kiss. On the reviewing stand were members of the VFW, Boy Scouts and prominent localities.

Another theatreman to put on special morning kid shows for rubber collections is W. D. Harwell at the Laroy, in Portsmouth, Ohio. Bill reports packing the house and collecting approximately 2000 pounds at one show. The aggregation was donated to the city collection, the proceeds from which were used for charitable purposes. The local dailies came through with stories.

Some Denver soldier is going to receive a surprise visit from his "Gal Sal," as a result of the contest set with the Denver newspapers by Bernie Hynes. A trip to camp goes to the young lady writing the best letter on "Why I Should Buy War Stamps and Bonds."

Pittsburghers are saving their war stamps on cards contributed by the J. P. Harris Theatre. Ken Hoel, Publicity Director, issued the cards which carry the slogan "This Above All—Buy War Bonds and Stamps."

When Judge Leone D. Howell, in charge of the Nassau County War Bond Sales announced that he had secured the service of Hollywood personalities to appear in Hempstead, Long Island to aid in selling Bonds, Edwin E. Enke, manager of Skouras Hempstead Theatre offered the use of the house to the committee to be used in promoting the sale of Bonds and Stamps. On the night of the show when Gale Sondergaard and Donald Crisp appeared, the theatre sold over $10,000 in Bonds and Stamps.

Each store in town cooperated by distributing theatre heralds calling attention to the rally, the postmaster sent one of his men to the theatre to help issue the bonds and 25 girls, including the Mayor's wife and the wives of two of the Village Trustees aided in the bond sale. Needless to say, the newspapers came through with stories and art.

H. M. Rouda, manager of the Calumet Theatre, in Hammond, Ind., has introduced a unique plan to stimulate the sale of War Savings Bonds. The plan is to present a month's free pass to each purchaser of a twenty-five dollar bond. The Round Tabler presents to each purchaser a card with copy: "Get on the Bond Wagon. Calumet Theatre Victory Club Pass. Our gift to each person Buying U. S. Bonds at this Theatre." Rouda reports selling $4,225 worth of bonds in less than two weeks.

Motorists in Springfield, Ill., sported several thousand American Flag window stickers with the slogan "This Above All—Buy War Bonds and Stamps," contributed by Manager C. C. Murray of the Lincoln Theatre.

AWVS ladies placed bulletins in all their branches and contributed their downtown window to selling "This Above All" for the Warfield Theatre engagement in San Francisco. The tie-up was arranged by Manager Dick Romo.

Dave Martin at the Venice, in Venice, Calif., features a display in his lobby which lists the names of war bond purchasers. Gold stars next to each name denote $25 worth of bonds purchased.

Sells "In This Our Life" As Pulitzer Prize Winner

Bert Leighton, manager of Warners' Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., got wide circulation for "In This Our Life." He obtained 75 covers from the book publishers and together with press book covers, sold the picture as the sensational 1942 Pulitzer Prize winning novel in almost 40 windows and book shops. The public library was persuaded to use the other book covers and the McCaskey High School used a display. In addition, a local chain market distributed 15,000 heralds, door to door, throughout the city.

For "The Invaders," Leighton tied in with the gasoline rationing headlines of the day, getting out a special coupon herald with copy and playdates in advance: "This gasoline rationing certificate is necessary for your protection. You'll realize why after you see 'The Invaders'." Tie-ups were made with his public library for all types of books on attack and invasion, and five book stores used these books and still cards announcing theatre playdates. WGAL radio station used the record with Anton Walbrook's speech four days in advance. Stills were placed on display at the Franklin and Marshall College campus and the women's club endorsed the picture.

Loew's Theatres Hold Bathing Beauty Contest

A Bathing Beauty Contest to choose "Miss Brooklyn of 1942" got under way at Loew's Theatres last week, with a prize of a $100 War Bond to be given the winner.

The winners of the contest in the seven Brooklyn theatres will be eligible to participate in the finals, which will be held at Loew's Metropolitan Theatre, in Brooklyn, on Monday evening, July 27th.

Winners in the Beauty Contests held in Loew's Theatres in Westchester and New Jersey, will be guests of the management at the finals at the Metropolitan Theatre, but will not compete for the grand prize. Prizes are being awarded the winners of local contests.

Moore's Skyline Display

Giant star cut-outs and a sky-line silhouette of Dallas, Texas, were the eye-catching features of a promoted window display with Braniff Air Lines on "This Above All." Models of air transports were spotlighted in the display, arranged by Marsline Moore and Charles Meeker, publicity director of the Majestic Theatre, Dallas.

Recipes Tied to "West Point"

Maureen O'Hara's favorite recipes was the springboard for plugs for "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" in a broadcast tie-up with "Martha's Kitchen" program emanating from WHB, Kansas City. Cooperation was secured by Allan Karf and Joe Redmond of the Uptown and Esquire Theatres.

Dinerman's "Dope" Tieup

E. V. Dinerman, Publicity Director for the Cincinnati Palace, planted a "radio boners" column with radio writer Bob Bentley of that city. Bentley called the perpetrators of the boners "Magnificent Dopes."

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

[The material below reflects press books now in preparation and represents the point of view of the distributors' exploiteers about the selling points and special merit of these pictures.]

GAY SISTERS (Warner Brothers): The title offers a number of selling angles: for example, a contest can be staged to find the three girls in town who look most like the stars. There is a special still which can be used as a guide in this contest. Arrangements may be made with the newspaper to print an entry blank and a photographer to make pictures of the contestants. A "Gay Sisters" talent search for sister acts is a feasible bit of exploitation. Three girls dressed somewhat alike and with some mark of identification can parade about town at designated spots and prizes awarded to anyone who identifies them. There's a good woman's page feature available in which girls are advised, "Be gay, sisters, say the 'Gay Sisters' ". This line also suggests a possibility of tying up for a cooperative ad, window displays or counter displays or any other stores catering to women. The picture was adapted from the novel by Stephen Longstreet. Book store and circulating library tieups are therefore available. There is a movie edition of the novel, too. There are also serializations, both full length and six-day synopses type. The new Warner recorded spot announcements can be used on the radio.

DR. BROADWAY (Paramount): Crossroads of the world, Broadway is another swell title to conjure with. Merchants may be promoted for cooperative ads with catchline under the masthead: "Just What the Doctor Ordered". Teaser slant is suggested through the use of three-line spots throughout newspapers reading: "You've an Appointment with Dr. Broadway". Curiosity could be teased along for a couple of days and then attention directed to display ads. Contest angle suggests tickets going to those giving correct movie doctors' names and the pictures in which they appeared. A "Dr. Broadway" movie column is available, with a list of interesting facts pertaining to the Main Stem. For lobby attention, lifesize cutouts of MacDonald Carey and Jean Phillips may be planted next to a giant thermometer. Folks are invited to step on the treadle in front of the display to "Watch Exciting Dr. Broadway Send Your Temperature Up".

Checker Championship Sells "Bashful Bachelor"

Sterling Way of the Isis Theatre, Boulder, Colorado, tied-in with one of the local merchants for a checker championship contest as the highlight of his campaign for "The Bashful Bachelor."

The merchant furnished a window in which was setup a card table, checker-board and checkers with suitable signs offering a complimentary season's pass to the theatre to the city's champion checker player. As an added attraction the Mayor of the City started the contest off and challenged all comers.

Another phase in Way's campaign included a street ballyhoo featuring two men attired with whiskers and clothes to impersonate Lum and Abner pulling and pushing a hand truck with cutout advertising matter displayed on it. Through a special tie-in with the City a public address system was installed for their weekly band concert and announcements crediting the attraction, theatre and playdate were made. A phonograph with a special turntable was hooked up in front of the theatre and played transcribed announcements continuously; in addition arrangements were made with five of the local drug stores for cooperative window displays and the distribution of heralds.

Living Display Aids On "Jungle Book"

Animation in displays is not too unusual, but when it comes to live ones that's another thing as witness the front used ahead of "Jungle Book" at the El Rancho Theatre, in Victoria, Texas, by H. B. Yowell. Built on a two-wheeled trailer was an animal cage in which were two live Java monkeys. Yowell reports that the stunt always drew a crowd, with a goodly portion going in to the show.

Trailers Sell "This Above All"

Harry Schreiber gave Columbus, Ohio, patrons of the Palace Theatre a week of musical trailers on "This Above All" by featuring English war songs on the organ music program at the theatre.

Goldstein Welcomes New Store

Since it has been the custom as a goodwill gesture for the Victory Theatre, in St. Louis, to run a 20-foot welcome trailer from the management to any new merchant moving into the area Joe Goldstein recently ran such a trailer on his screen. The store to show its appreciation gave the theatre and current picture a break in its opening day ads.

WAR SHOWMANSHIP

Showmen Reveal Some Methods for Pushing Sale of War Stamps and Bonds

R. Lee Kline, manager of the Orpheum, Philadelphia, let the whole neighborhood know that he was selling War Stamps and Bonds. The local Legion post paraded to the theatre with a silk flag for the theatre's booth. Above is the presentation, with Philadelphia's City Treasurer, second from right, accepting the flag for the theatre. Kline is third from the right.

Ten cents each and three for a quarter was the price of a dart at the Rivoli Theatre, La Crosse, Wis. William Freise, manager, reports many takers.

Mort H. Singer's Brandeis Theatre, Omaha, kills two birds with one stone by flanking the box office with War Stamps and Bonds display.

Pistols with rubber suction caps are shot by anyone who buys a War Stamp in the lobby of the Palace Theatre, Athens, Ga. Frank Bickerstaff, city manager, arranged to have four Japs mounted on a turntable. He says the sale of Stamps is rising, as many take a chance to win a pass.

The young ladies in this picture have manned the tank booth (seen at the extreme right) at Loew's in Houston, Tex. The two on the right are the theatre cashiers; all the others are wives of Navy men. Homer McCallon sent this picture.

Farther Fields Are Always Greener

There were two visitors to the Round Table at the same time the other day. One was Bill Big-Town, who manages a de luxe house for a large circuit in a key city. The other was George Small-Town, who leases the only theatre in a small community. They had nothing in common but the fact that each managed a theatre. After the introductions, this is a part of the conversation that ensued.

BILL: How long are you staying in town?

GEORGE: Only a day or so. You see, I have to leave my wife in charge when I leave the theatre. That's where you fellows are lucky. You have assistants, treasurers and even relief managers. And if the worst happens and you just have to leave, you know the business will go on and you'll get paid on Saturday anyway.

BILL: That's true to a certain extent. But every time I leave the theatre seems to be just the time the district manager or the zone manager is calling on me. It must be swell to be in business for yourself and not have a boss.

GEORGE: It is, Bill except that when payday comes around you find the treasury pretty well depleted when you're in business for yourself. But when payday comes around for you, that's the day of the week when your bank account is biggest.

BILL: Yes, but if you do a swell job of selling your pictures and the gross is big as a result, the profit is all yours. No matter how much effort I put forth, I don't get any of the profit.

Bill Gets Paid Even If Theatre Loses

GEORGE: You're right there, Bill. But did you ever stop to consider that you get paid even if the theatre loses. No, you don't get any of the profits but neither do you share the losses. Now I envy you your opportunity to take a vacation every year. I can't do that.

BILL: That isn't all beer and skittles either. I have to work so hard preparing advertising, programs, exploitation and all that sort of thing in the week before I go away, that by the time vacation comes around I need it. But surely you get away sometimes.

GEORGE: Well, occasionally, like today for instance. But I get so worried about whether everyone is running the business all right in my absence that it takes all the joy out of vacationing. Now you have another advantage over me. All your work is done in around your own town. I have to go to the exchange center at least twice a month.

BILL: I thought you did all your booking by mail.

GEORGE: If it was only booking, I would. But there are so many details of buying pictures, especially now that they're only sold in groups of five, and so many people to see about adjusting this or that or the other thing that I have to make at least two trips to the exchanges every month. And that takes a lot of time. To get finished in time I have to start early. I catch the 5:15 in the morning so I am down in the city by 9:30. Now equipment is another problem with me. I have to buy it myself and see that it is kept in repair. That requires shopping around. You have a maintenance department that takes care of all that for you without your worrying about it at all.

BILL: You should be glad that you don't have a maintenance department in some ways. I spend a lot of time filling out reports for those fellows in the home office.

GEORGE: If I had someone like you to make out reports, my equipment would probably last a lot longer.

BILL: It seems to me that I spend hours and hours a day filling out forms. You don't have to do that.

GEORGE: That's where you're wrong, Bill. I owe the bank some money and I have to give a pretty complete statement on my business every week. You actually don't keep any books, you know. You keep certain records which are all laid out for you and actually fool proof and from them the books of the company are actually kept. I have to keep a cash book, a journal and a ledger.

BILL: Another thing I envy you for—I have to keep a record of every pass I issue. You can toss them out to anyone you think deserving of it without explanation to anybody of why you did it.

GEORGE: Wrong again, Bill. In the first place, the checkers object and righty so, to passes given for inexplicable reasons. And then, I have to account to myself for each pass I issue. For I realize that each pass I issue costs me one admission.

BILL: You look pretty tan. You must have been playing golf. I can't do that. If I show up at managers' meeting with a sunburn, I'll catch the devil.

GEORGE: You may catch the devil but I'd lose business. Some of the merchants will say that I'm not attending to business; they'd point out that they don't do any golfing and yet work plenty of nights, too.

BILL: But you are a big shot in your town. You're a big fish in a small puddle while I am just a minnow in the ocean.

George's Position Has Responsibilities

GEORGE: That may be but it carries its responsibilities, too. I'm president of the Lions Club, a director of the Chamber of Commerce and a member of several organizations. All that takes a lot of time.

BILL: Well, I'm a member of a lodge but I rarely get a chance to attend. Besides that they're always making demands. They think that because I manage the theatre. I can let them all in for nothing or give them special rates for theatre parties.

GEORGE: I get the same thing. But you're in a better spot than I am. You can just say the company won't let you. I have to give in or find a good alibi.

BILL: Of course, that's true to a certain extent. But just because this is a chain theatre, everybody thinks it is an easy mark for things like that. Now another thing I envy you. You don't have to worry about being fired. It's true that you can lose your investment if business is no good. But if the division manager or supervisor is transferred and a new man comes in I may lose all the advantages I've had and will have to start selling myself all over again to a new boss.

GEORGE: Don't kid yourself, Bill. You have as much security as I have. The longer you stay with your concern, the better your chances for remaining. The same is true of my own situation, of course. If I operate successfully long enough, I will become so much of an institution that the banks will help me out if I get into a tight spot. So there's my security. I work for a boss, too. And if the bank gets a new vice-president who doesn't know me so well, I may not be able to get a necessary extension on a note sometimes.

BILL: George, I've enjoyed our little discussion. Now, if you hear of a good paying little theatre——

GEORGE: All right, Bill, but——

Contests Help Sell "Magnificent Dope"

Two contests seem outstanding in the campaign scheduled to usher the "Magnificent Dope" into the Paramount Theatre in Portland, Oregon. Through a tie-up with the Police Department, the Portland traffic boys handed out tags to careful automobile drivers with the legend: "Congratulations, you are not a 'Magnificent Dope' but a careful driver." Each tag admitted two to the Paramount for 20th Century-Fox' "The Magnificent Dope."

The second tie-up was with leading clothing store Rosenblatt's and the lobby enlargements were used as background for the theme: "Don't be a 'Magnificent Dope!'—Hart, Schaffner and Marx clothing will give you personality, courage and authority."

The men behind these ideas were Frank Newman, Jr., manager of the Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox' Albert E. Fowler.

Ushers Picket Theatre On "My Favorite Blonde"

Ahead of "My Favorite Blonde" at the Riviera, in Rochester, Bud Silverman and Jack Hamilton featured a giant cutout of Carroll and Hope in their lobby and also admitted free the first 10 blondes, which got extra publicity for the date.

Out front, an usher picketed the house with the following copy: "This theatre is unfair to ushers. How can we work when our Favorite Blonde is on the screen."

Also featured recently at the theatre is a community sing which is finished up with the Star Spangled Banner. As a morale booster, Silverman conceived a good title for the sing, calling it "'Keep Singing and Keep 'Em Flying."

Theatre Signature Contest Held by Rouda for Kids

To build interest in a new theatre signature cut, H. M. Rouda at the Calumet Theatre, in Hammond, Ind., ran a contest for high school kids, inviting them to submit original drawings of their suggestions. These were appropriately on display on a lobby easel and since the contest was tied directly to the high school art classes.

Local Public Relations

by EDWARD SALZBERG
Bluefield, W. Va., Exhibitor

One of the most important functions of a theatre manager is that of maintaining close public contact in his community. This is the subject of an address by Edward Salzberg, exhibitor from Bluefield, W. Va., at the MGM Exhibitor Forums. Mr. Salzberg's address is reprinted here in its entirety so that exhibitors unable to attend Forums may have the benefit of his advice.

I CONSIDER close public contact with your community a most pertinent subject in the operation of the smaller theatre. This thought is old, but most valuable. It is something buried at the bottom of our minds which hasn't been dragged out for a long time.

I would like for you to consider these few minutes as a time for self-inventory. Let us assume that the physical operation of your theatre is correct. That the tangible matters are all attended to very efficiently. But, are the important intangibles given consideration? Are you satisfied with your contact with your public? What about the personal side of the way you operate your business? What does your community think of you as an individual?

If a small town exhibitor can answer these questions correctly, he need not worry too much about the myriad counter attractions to the theatre business. He need worry even less because the producers cannot give him a smash picture in each release. If he cannot answer correctly, there are many things he can do, and which he should do —personal things—which definitely help to take up the slack.

If John Q. Exhibitor Is Civic-Minded, It Helps

For instance, if John Q. Exhibitor, not Mister John Q. Exhibitor, is civic minded, it helps. Are you a member of Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis or the American Legion? Do you participate actively in community work, or any of the many war activities? Do you go on good will tours with the other business men in your town? If there is some project your town needs, do you volunteer and cooperate in the accomplishment of this project? If you don't, you should. And I don't mean "lip service" or mere money contributions. I mean that you should get in there and work, not necessarily as the captain but as a private, if it suits your personality better. But work, and be sincere about it, and you will discover happily that you like the work. You will get more out of it than you put in. I don't refer to money only. Once you identify yourself as an aggressive, helpful and serviceable citizen in your town, your dividends will follow, both personal and financial. The opinion of your fellow townsmen is of immeasurable importance. Do all you can to deserve their favorable opinion.

What are you doing about children in your theatre? It's a rather important question. Every one of them is your potential future adult customer, as well as a child customer today. It doesn't take much to make the kids think you are a great guy. Are you doing the little it does take? How many put on a free Christmas Show for children, a show which kids liked and gave them each a little inexpensive gift, costing only a few pennies? During the football, baseball or basketball season, did you tell your high and junior high school teams that they might come to your show free after every game they won? They usually bring their sweethearts and by selecting certain nights to make this offer, you not only get over big with the schools but increase attendance.

When the half-scared little girls from the journalism class came up to your office, and asked you to take an ad in the school paper, did you make them feel at home, and at ease, and did you take an ad, which probably cost you very little?

When the Boy Scouts wanted to build that $150.00 cabin on the hill, did you contribute—or even go up the hill yourself to drive a few nails in the logs? Have you ever gone to a Boy Scout meeting to make a little talk, or help a lad get a merit badge?

It all helps. Anything you can do to get your kids thinking that you are a swell guy. It is practically an axiom in our business that where the children go is where the parents go.

Is yours a policy of cooperation with the churches in your town? If you have never approached this problem, you should and carefully. The first step I might suggest is to call on your minister. You will find that for the most part he is a very human person, that he has problems too and that he is hungry for your cooperation. An exchange of ideas should be decidedly beneficial to both of you. Take down the fence between the church and the theatre and find a common ground of cooperation and mutual helpfulness. If you find that the Sunday school quarters are cramped and inadequate, offer your theatre for use on Sunday morning—free—gratis—clean and comfortable.

If Ladies' Aid Makes Request Buy It Or Do It Gladly

If the Ladies' Aid Society asks you to buy something or to do something for them, buy it or do it, willingly and gladly. Try in every way to improve your relationship with the churches. And be sincere and respectful about it all.

I think it's mighty important how your town regards you as a man. I believe that it pays to be cordial and congenial—and to be pleasant with your fellow citizens, whether patrons of your theatre or not. It is a good idea to give a pedestrian a lift if you are driving your car. Courtesy in your personal deportment as well as courtesy on the part of your theatre employees, is unquestionably good. These things not only are worth while in the effect on your business but you'll feel good inside for doing them.

When you send out heralds or monthly calendars, do you entrust them to some subordinate every time? Maybe he is a good boy and does a nice job of distribution (mine aren't always that way), but he can't ever create one per cent of the good will you could if, occasionally at least, you personally took them out and talked with your people. Those people along the route like to be asked by you how they and their kids are feeling, or told that you hear Mary or John are doing well in school. Or have you ask, "How was the hunting trip, the fishing trip? or "How does Norman like it at Camp Shelby?" It's all personal contact, public relations work, and it seldom costs you a cent.

Your theatre should be inviting and interesting, not just another building. Try to give your lobby and auditorium some personality. It might be murals of your predominating industry. It could be almost any little touch which makes your place of business stand out from the ordinary run of business places—that makes it reflect your own character. Your personal attention should be focused on every phase of your theatre operation.

Cashier and Doorman Owe Smile to Each Patron

Your cashier and doorman owe a smile of thanks to the purchaser of every ticket. Your place of business should provide escape from reality, hence those who come there are due more deference than they expect at the taxpayer's window of your local courthouse, or city hall. It pays to be solicitous of the comfort and welfare of your patrons. It might be much better business to fill a drinking cup yourself and carry water to a mother with a fretting child or to an aged person than simply to point out the fountain in the lobby. It's a little more trouble but a lot more friendly—and profitable.

What do you do to clinch your claim to friendliness and consideration for women patrons? What kind of retiring rooms do you provide? Do you think of them as "toilets"—or as "powder rooms"? Certainly, they're a problem—but there's a modern, up-to-date, 1942 answer. And your women customers—the majority class among ticket buyers—know what it should be, and won't be pleased with less.

Have you compared the type of clientele you cater to today with that you served five years ago? Have you changed your plans to suit the changed condition, if any exists? If you don't run matinees because they didn't pay in 1933, have you explored the possibilities of doing so today? Have new factory shifts changed the work and play hours of a considerable number of the people in your town? Are you planning to catch this new business by starting an hour earlier?

Most of these questions are upsetting. They make listeners uncomfortable. As an

"This Above All" Gets Newspaper Coverage

Campaign boost for "This Above All" paid off at the box-office, according to the reports of Managers J. R. Rosenfield and Roy Pierce, who steered the picture into Milwaukee for day-and-date openings at the Wisconsin and Palace Theatres. Defense plant tie-ups resulted in the placing of war bond card before a total of about 20,000.

Editorial and feature writers of newspapers and radio commentators joined war organization and WAAC heads at a special screening which resulted in much gratis publicity and off-the-page planting of stories. Serialization of "This Above All" by Chicago Sun tied in with heavy promotion of feature in Milwaukee, including distribution of many thousands of copies of first dozen installments.

Ace windows at three chain stores and department stores were devoted to selling "This Above All" volume. Complete back and front of car coverage for all trolley lines was also secured.

Midnight Show Held by Zinn for "Male Animal"

Several weeks in advance of his regular opening of "The Male Animal" at the Century Theatre, in Minneapolis, Charlie Zinn held a special midnight show for the students of the University of Minnesota, to which several hundred paid the regular admission.

To further build interest among the students, Zinn promoted the business manager of the school's paper on a contest, which further netted breaks in getting the picture message before the school.

Hevia's "Valley" Lobby

To sell "Valley of the Sun" at Schine's Hippodrome, in Gloversville, N. Y., Guy W. Hevia planted a special Indian tepee in the lobby of the theatre in addition to having a man in full Indian regalia parade the streets carrying a placard for two days ahead. The libraries cooperate by featuring an Indian display with playdates.

exhibitor, I don't like to face some of them myself. To do so might mean that I must be on the job an hour earlier every day—that I must forego a hunting or fishing trip occasionally. But for even these sacrifices the exhibitor who turns showman, respects his profession by devoting more of his sincere interest and more hours of time to it, and looks for the remedy for some of the ills of the business within himself, will be repaid.

We must forget that some panacea or cure-all is going to come along, and lift us out of the doldrums without any effort or our part. It is up to us. It's an old and honorable trade, this being in show business, bringing pleasure, education, entertainment and messages to 130 million people. It certainly is not a pastime. Our responsibility is as great as our opportunity. We're in the grandest business in the world: and the grandest business in the world certainly is worthy of our best efforts and thought. Let's stop worrying and start working, and become showmen again in the fullest sense of the word.

Davey Issues Checks On "Keep 'em Flying"

As a teaser ahead of "Keep 'em Flying" at the Palace Theatre, in London, Ontario, Max Davey distributed checks in the amount of One Thousand and One Laughs made payable to bearer on the Loyal Bank of Laughter, Palace Theatre Branch. The checks were signed by Bud Abbott and Lou Costello and charged to the "Keep 'em Flying" account.

Attractive Girl Ballyhoo Sells "Rings on Her Fingers"

For his street ballyhoo in advance of "Rings on Her Fingers" at the Loew Poli, in Norwich, N. Y., Manager Joseph Boyle used an attractive girl with anklets of bells and rings on her fingers. The girl carrying a large envelope purse on which were lettered title and playdates. A lollypop giveaway in the theatre a week in advance tied in Henry Fonda as a "sweet touch." Numerous window cards were spotted in the city area and a local gift shop devoted his window to a display of June bride dolls.

"Gang Busters" Shown By Boyd at Kid Club

To usher in his serial of "Gang Busters" at the Lyric Theatre, in Lubbock, Texas, Boyd F. Scott distributed membership cards to the kids. Copy on the card read: "Blank is a member of the Lyric Gang Busters 1-2-3 Club and is entitled to see the fourth, eighth and twelfth chapters free if he attends the preceding chapters and has his card punched by the doorman."

Pollock Holds Kid Show for "Tarzan's New York Adventure"

To attract his juvenile patronage to his opening of "Tarzan's New York Adventure," Les Pollock at Loew's, in Rochester, held a special kid show on Friday morning which included cartoons and an Our Gang Comedy. Pollock distributed MacArthur buttons and pictures to all kids attending.

The highlight of Les' campaign was a tieup with the Democrat and Chronicle six days in advance, which brought stories and contests about the latest Tarzan picture. All members of the paper's "Uncle Dan's Club" were told to attend the show both for the pictures and the special giveaways. A colored cutout enlargement of Tarzan and his family was planted outside the theatre a week ahead calling attention to the show.

Coussoule Uses Displays On "Ghost of Frankenstein"

As part of his campaign in selling "Ghost of Frankenstein" at the Manos Theatre, in Hollidaysburg, Pa., Charles Coussoule constructed a six-foot setpiece made out of a three-sheet and mounted on beaver board, and displayed it two weeks in advance. For his lobby a coffin was planted in which was a store dummy with copy over-all reading: "Don't be afraid to go see 'The Ghost of Frankenstein,' for here lies his body as dead as a doornail."

Coussoule's street bally consisted of a boy leading a donkey around town with a sign on its back: "I'm the only one in town that's afraid to see 'The Ghost of Frankenstein' and look what I am."

Biographies Highlight Their Careers; Ellen Hope Newman Makes Her Debut

At 34, Clyde Fuller Has Spent Half of His Life With Loew's

J. Clyde Fuller, Jr., is a Georgia boy, born Oct. 11, 1908, and brought up in Atlanta. He started his long career with Loew's as an usher at Loew's Grand Theatre in Atlanta in 1926. Two years later the lure of New York beckoned and he came to the big city to join Paramount-Publix, with whom he remained just a year. The call of Loew's was strong, for he went back to the company as usher, starting at the Paradise Theatre, ace Bronx house. Later that same year he was advanced to assistant manager at the Paradise and then was successively transferred and advanced as assistant manager to the Fairmount, 175th Street, Ziegfeld, Valencia and Mayfair Theatres. His big chance came in November when he was made manager of Loew's Oriental in Brooklyn. Clyde is married and the father of boys, nine and eleven years of age.

Bradley Began As Usher in Fox Wisconsin Theatres

Carroll Bradley, now city manager for Indiana-Illinois Theatres in Whiting, Indiana, has been in the business for 14 years. He's only 30 years old so it is easy to see, he started very young. Of course, it was an usher's post in the beginning but he worked his way up through the grades, most of the time with Fox Wisconsin Theatres, with whom he remained until last December 15. He is married and the proud father of four year old Beverly.

Jimmie Nagel a Boom Town Man But Now He's Settled Down

James W. Nagel, known far and wide in Texas as Jimmie, started as a doorman and operator in 1929. Texas is a mighty big state and Jimmie has worked all along the Coast from the valley to the tall pine country in East Texas. He was with the Baker Circuit in 1930 working as doorman and operator for four years. He left to join the Chamberlain Circuit in Freer, a boom town, where he stayed a year, leaving them to join the Pickens-Griffith Theatres remaining with them for 3 years as chief operator. Next step was manager for Rubin Frels in Victoria, Texas, then a jump across the street to J. G. Long's group where he started as assistant to the well known Ken Prickett, who has since become director of MGM's Show Builder. Long sent Jimmie, after a few months, to another boom town, Ganado, and then to Nevasota, where he is now managing the Miller's Queen and Dixie.

LATE REVIEW

Priorities on Parade

(Paramount)

Swinging for Victory

Once you're over the initial improbability of a swing band booking a defense factory and signing up for the assembly line to practice in their free time, you'll find "Priorities on Parade" an entertaining little musical with some tuneful songs, clever dances and ingratiating performers.

The "Solid Seven" were down on their luck and had hoped to work in the plant at their own trade. They accepted other work, except for Ann Miller, who decided to sing for a neighborhood night-club, strictly from hunger. Johnnie Johnston, their leader, is apprenticed to a tough welder who turns out to be an attractive woman. His attempts to counteract their first impressions of each other, her rivalry with the songstress and the band's gradual awakening to the bigger job to be done make up the plot. The finale is an elaborate entertainment staged at the factory, providing opportunities for Ann Miller to dance, Betty Rhodes to sing and the band to "send."

Producer Sol. C. Siegel has wisely given the song and dance numbers prominence, while Albert Rogell has kept a light touch in the direction.

The audience at the Paramount Theatre in New York was largely of the younger generation who appreciated the swing jargon and laughed loud and often at the antics of Jerry Colonna and Vera Vague. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—E. A. CUNNINGHAM.

Release date, not set. Running time, 79 minutes. General audience classification.

Donna D'Arcy.....Ann Miller
Johnny Draper.....Johnnie Johnston

Ratner Wins New Trial Of His Anti-Trust Suit

The White Bear Theatre Corporation, operator of the theatre of that name, and the principal of which is David Ratner, last week won a new trial in its $75,000 anti-trust suit against the State Theatre Corporation, which operates the State theatre also in White Bear Lake, Minn.

The new trial was granted to Mr. Ratner in the St. Paul, Minn., United States court of appeals. The court thus reversed a decision by Federal Judge Robert C. Bell, in St. Paul federal court, April 24, 1941. Mr. Rather charged conspiracy and monopoly in restraint of trade.

The anti-trust case was brought by one exhibitor against another, without naming any distributor. Mrs. Jessie Jensen is the State Theatres Corporation principal.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Panama Hattie

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—1942-43)

Stage Musical

A stage musical comedy photographed, this reflects the limitations of the stage; the rigidity and the cliches of theatre showmanship. Made on a few sets, and liberally interspersed with song, dance and comedy routines, it is a pleasant evening's entertainment.

The superb comedy talents of Red Skelton seem here to have been subdued by the theme. As one of a trio of comedy sailors, and with an exceedingly stupid character to portray, Skelton gives no indication of that ability to hold a lead part for more than an hour, which he demonstrated in "Whistling in the Dark." His companions, Ben Blue and Rags Ragland, do their best, but they are not funny enough, however much New York theatre audiences may have been tickled. Ann Sothern is pretty and convincing as Panama Hattie, a natural and sincere dance hall girl; but because the plot is so slight, Miss Sothern is but a pretty manikin who several times sings, makes faces and dances.

Good, restrained comedy is as usual delivered by Alan Mowbray, as a butler this time. Lena Horne is appealing, in dancing-singing routines, by herself, and with the Berry Brothers. One comedy limerick and dance routine stands out—that by Skelton, Ragland and Blue, with three Latin-American girls. They also are funny hunting spies in a "deserted" house. Virginia O'Brien, as the poker-faced and lonely one, hunting for a lover, and fixing upon Mowbray, is certain of laughs.

The plot revolves about the loves and quarrels between Dan Dailey, Jr., and Miss Sothern.

His daughter, Jackie Horner, complicates their attachment by finding Miss Sothern's posture, walk, speech and clothing funny. Miss Sothern is irked to the point of leaving Panama. But all ends well.

The film is based upon the play by Herbert Fields and B. G. DeSylva. Norman McLeod directed. Arthur Freed produced. The music and lyrics are by Cole Porter. Jack McGowan and Wilkie Mahoney wrote the screenplay. Danny Dare was the dance director; Vincente Minnelli staged the musical numbers. Walter Donaldson wrote one song, "At the Savoy." The extremely capable, sparkling negative is the product of George Folsey, A.S.C. Not the least attractive facet is the photography and the expensive staging given an inconsequential musical by MGM.

Previewed at the Loew's theatre, New Rochelle, where an audience accustomed to "surprise" previews and obviously pre-sold on motion pictures, gave it a a wild ovation and frequent applause.— Reviewer's rating: Good. —FLOYD STONE.

Joan of Ozark

(Republic)

Humour, Song and Espionage

Joe E. Brown teams up with Judy Canova in this comedy plus songs, and the pairing is to the advantage of both parties and the picture, as well.

Miss Canova portrays a pigtailed maiden of the hillbilly country who accidentally brings Nazi spies to justice and is hailed as Public Patriot No. 1. Brown plays a New York talent agent who brings her to the city, posing as a G-man and appointing her a G-woman by way of persuading her to leave the Ozarks, to sing in a night club which he tells her is a nest of Nazis. It turns out that it is, and in a melodramatic finish which is played for laughs he and she bring about their capture.

Emphasis is upon the comedy side of the story throughout, with the leads sharing prominence and each supplying beneficial counterbalance for the other. Four songs by Mort Greene and Harry Revel are sung by Miss Canova in the course of the proceedings. Harriet Parsons produced the picture, her first feature, and Joseph Santley directed from an original by Robert Hararim, Eve Greene and Jack Townley, all of whom rate bows.

Baby Face Morgan

(Producers Releasing)

Gangster Comedy-Drama

A cast of dependables whose names bulk up in billing, plus a story that avoids the commonplace in situation and point, sets this comedy-drama of gangsterism apart from and above the flow of moderately-budgeted product.

Produced by Jack Schwartz for Leon Fromkess, in charge of production for Producers Releasing Corporation, the film reflects care in advance preparation and precision in execution which yield the utmost in screen value from the investment made. Direction is by Arthur Dreifuss, who kept his pace steady and points clear.

The script by Edward Dein and Jack Rubin, from a story by Rubin and Oscar Brodney, is about a small town boy, son of a big town gangster, deceased, whose former followers draft the youth to leadership of their mob, find him unsuited to the job and keep him under cover while they use his name to terrorize transportation companies via the protection racket. The boy utilizes an insurance company, maintained by the mobsters as a front, to insure the transportation companies, with the result that money collected from them by the gangsters is returned to them in compensation for damage administered. Right comes out right and wrong wrong at the finish, naturally.

Richard Cromwell as the boy and Robert Armstrong as the chief mobster stand out in the cast, with Warren Hymer, Vince Barnett and Ralf Herolde leading the support.

Previewed at the Vista theatre, Hollywood, to a midweek audience which manifested approval in terms of laughter. Reviewer's Rating: Good.—W. R. W.

Tish

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—1942-43)

Corn for the Customers

This is no less than a study in corn, corn as to comedy, as to characterization and as to pathos, but corn served up strictly as corn and nothing else, with deliberation, intent, design and avoidance of disguise.

It is corn harvested from the acres of white paper in wide circulation on which Mary Robert Rinehart's "Tish" stories were purveyed to the magazine consumers, and it is with little effort toward blending them into a whole that these have been stitched together to make up a feature. It is corn which the customers of a neighborhood theatre in Los Angeles found much to their liking.

Marjorie Main in the title role, flanked by Zasu Pitts and Aline MacMahon, portrays the small town spinster with a whim of iron and a genius for mismanaging other people's affairs. For most of the distance these three entertain at quasi-slapstick predicated upon efforts to promote a match between young people who are in love but not with each other. Toward the end the picture turns serious when a quirk of circumstances puts a baby into custody of "Tish" under conditions which impel her to claim it as her own in the belief that she is shielding loved ones. A touch of war colors the picture at this point, accounting for the clarification of issues which restores to "Tish" her command of all she surveys, and ends misunderstandings.

Performances by all hands, production by Orville O. Dull, direction by S. Sylvan Simon and the script by Harry Ruskin are all in the interests of broad strokes crudely drawn with the likings of the multitude in consideration.

The dialogue concerning the paternity of the baby is a bit mature in connotation for the youngsters.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles, on a Thursday night, to an audience attracted by "Reap the Wild Wind," which laughed a lot and sobbed a little during the run-off of the previewed attraction. Reviewer's Rating: Fair.—W. R. W.

Hi, Neighbor

(Republic—1942-43)

Summer Musical Fare

Republic has borrowed from radio more than the talent of this light-hearted musical. It has taken over also the technique of a little drama followed by a song, and then a little more story. The result should please admirers of the varied personalities, each of whom is given a fair opportunity to display his wares, and is very likely the best that might have been expected from the story as well.

The plot centers about the efforts of Pappy Cheshire to keep the Greenfield Agricultural College thriving in spite of the rigid standards of its founder. The latter is outraged by the activities of "Hi, Neighbor Lodge"—the College takes in summer guests to maintain itself and its students—in the field of matrimony. She will make no compromise with "Lonely Heart" clubs, or "hep-cats" or Pappy Cheshire, a former admirer, and descends upon the now-prosperous resort with a lawyer (Don Wilson), a niece (Jean Parker), a sister (Vera Vague), and a dispossesses notice. The place is quarantined when a case of poison ivy is diagnosed as measles, and before the ban is lifted most of the romantic pairings show promise of permanence. Even Sister Vera has "roped" someone in, while Hattie Greenfield shows signs of relenting in favor of youth, fun and her old beau.

Jean Parker and John Archer provide the more decorous love interest, while the rest of the cast sings and dances with abandon, if not always with provocation.

Armand Schaefer was associate producer and Charles Lamont directed.

Drums of the Congo

(Universal)

Jungle Adventure

Jungle scenes, animal fights and natives on the war path serve as background for a rather slight story of intrigue in this Universal picture. The object of a white man's safari into the heart of the jungle is a precious metal which, because of its diamond-like hardness, can be substituted for diamonds in the making of precision instruments needed in the war effort.

The safari party consists of a U. S. Army Intelligence officer, played by Don Terry; a woman doctor, portrayed by Ona Munson, and "Congo Jack," who knows the territory and speaks the native language, played by Stuart Erwin, representing the Allied side, and Peggy Moran and Richard Lane, as foreign agents. By double-crossing the Army officer and his party, the foreign agents obtain a temporary advantage, which is offset when a friendly native chief comes to the aid of the Allied side. The climax is a tribal fight wherein the natives under the friendly chief disperse a rival tribe and the foreign agents to boot.

As side issues there are two animal fights, one a battle between a honey bear and a hyena and the other between a snake and a rhinoceros.

Henry MacRae was associate producer and Christy Cabanne directed the picture.

DIVIDE AND CONQUER (WB)

Broadway Brevity (7112)

Here is one of the most effective short subjects yet made in connection with combating enemy propaganda. It has for its subject rumor-mongering and shows in graphic manner the seeds of distrust sown in the public's mind by false rumors spread by Axis propagandists and sympathizers—the fifth column. Trained propagandists are shown receiving instructions from the Nazi leaders, then moving into foreign countries as tourists and the like. Their object is to spread a rumor, undermine the peoples' faith in their government, breed discord and praise the Axis. Showing clips from German films imported into foreign countries for propaganda purposes, the film makes no bones about the conquest of France. France, according to the narrative, was conquered by the propagandists long before the German Army started its invasion. To combat the rumor-mongers, the film shows scenes of indignant Americans rising in their wrath against the rumor perpetrator. Gordon Hollingshead produced and Lewis Seiler directed the subject. Knox Manning is the commentator.

American Study

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR: Pare Lorentz.

PLAYERS: Robert Ryan, Frances Dee, Dudley Digges, Erford Gage.

SYNOPSIS

Producer-director Pare Lorentz has been roaming the continent with camera crew assembling the material which is to make up this record of the life of an American from the last world war to this one. The rolling of the last Ford off the assembly line in Detroit is typical of scenes photographed for the film, many of them in industrial plants, at sites of public works and in agricultural areas. Very little of the production of the picture will have taken place in Hollywood. Mr. Lorentz has kept the story of it very much to himself and nobody else who'll go on record professes to know what it's about save in such blanket terms as above. Understanding on the studio lot is that it's to have the flavor of a documentary, perhaps somewhat in the manner of past Lorentz productions. These include "The River," "The Plough that Broke the Plains" and "Fight for Life."

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

War Drama

PRODUCER: Irving Asher. Directed by Harold Bucquet.

PLAYERS: Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Edward Arnold, Jean Rogers.

SYNOPSIS

The Mrs. Hadley of the title goes to Washington, eager to do her part in whatever war work may require doing, and learns about red tape at first hand. She manages, finally, although for a time it appears that the war is not the only force arrayed against her.

JUST OFF BROADWAY
(20th Century-Fox)

Murder Mystery

PRODUCER: Sol Wurtzel. Directed by Herbert I. Leeds.

PLAYERS: Lloyd Nolan, Marjorie Weaver, Richard Derr, Chester Clute, Janis Carter, Joan Valerie, Grant Richards, Phil Silvers.

SYNOPSIS

The twelve men of the jury, investigating a murder case, include one Michael Shayne, private detective. Even the rules of legal procedure cannot, of course, keep him locked in a room while a mystery goes unexplained. After the first day's hearing, during which a witness has been stabbed, he slips out and, with a girl reporter, visits the implicated persons. Before the next day in court he has cleared up the murder to the satisfaction of the district attorney, but must still serve ten days for his illegal conduct.

ORCHESTRA WIVES
(20th Century-Fox)

Musical

PRODUCER: William Le Baron. Directed by Archie Mayo.

PLAYERS: George Montgomery, Ann Rutherford, Lynn Bari, Carole Landis, Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Mary Beth Hughes and Glenn Miller and his orchestra.

SYNOPSIS

The difficulties of maintaining a normal life, married to a swing musician in a traveling band, are portrayed in this feature starring Glenn Miller and his band, and incorporating in it such non-musical players as George Montgomery and Cesar Romero. Also featured in the film are the dancing of the Nicholas Brothers and four new tunes by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. On the story side, one of the highlights is the knock-down-drag-out fight among the wives, forced into unwilling companionship by the careers of their husbands.

HAPPY GO LUCKY
(Paramount)

Technicolor Musical

PRODUCER: Harold Wilson. Directed by Curtis Bernhardt.

SYNOPSIS

An island in the Carribbean Sea is the setting for this exercise in song, dance, jest and Technicolor. There is nothing of seriousness in the undertaking, naturally, but the period is the present and it may be assumed that the events of war which have been transpiring in those waters will not be entirely overlooked in dialogue.

ICELAND
(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy

PRODUCER: William Le Baron. Directed by H. Bruce Humberstone.

PLAYERS: Sonja Henie, John Payne, Jack Oakie, Osa Massen, Felix Bressart, Sterling Holloway, Joan Merrill and Sammy Kaye and his band.

SYNOPSIS

The U. S. Marines stationed in Iceland tangle with some quaint island customs before love and Sonja Henie straighten them out. John Payne's flirtation with the lady is taken so seriously that a wedding date is set before he knows it, and the fumbling efforts of Jack Oakie fail to help matters. Sonja does some skating at a carnival and Sammy Kaye and his orchestra play at the hotel, in the course of events.

ICE-CAPADES REVUE OF 1942
(Republic)

Musical on Skates

PRODUCER: Robert North. Directed by Bernard Vorhaus.

PLAYERS: Personnel of the Ice-Capades Troupe of entertainers on skates, Jerry Colonna, Vera Vague.

SYNOPSIS

Last year Republic made a musical presenting the ice skating troupe which tours the nation annually under title of "Ice-Capades," and success of that picture prompted the making of this one on a larger budget. Spectacles and skill, rather than plot or story, sustain this type of film.

I MARRIED A WITCH
(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

PRODUCER: Preston Sturges. Directed by Rene Clair.

PLAYERS: Fredric March, Veronica Lake, Susan Hayward, Robert Benchley, Cecil Kellaway, Elizabeth Patterson, Esther Howard, Robert Warwick.

A fantasy in the realistic manner of the Thorne Smith novels, this tells the story of the descendants of an early New Englander who officiated at the burning of a witch in 1690, in retaliation for which the witch bewitched him and his progeny to the end that marital discord would be their lot forever. The picture follows the family from generation to generation, ending in the present with the then descendant breaking the spell. The late Thorne Smith's other stories which have been made into films easy to remember are "Topper Takes a Trip" and "Turnabout."

STAND BY, ALL NETWORKS

Feature Synopses and Information

LURE OF THE ISLANDS (Monogram)

Spy Drama

PRODUCER: Lindsley Parsons. Directed by Jean Yarbrough.

PLAYERS: Robert Lowery, Big Boy Williams, Margie Hart, Ivan Lebedeff, John Bleifer, Warren Hymer.

SYNOPSIS

Robert Lowery and Big Boy Williams are F.B.I. Agents on the island of Tanukai, disguised as shipwrecked sailors. They meet a native half-caste girl (Margie Hart, in her first screen appearance) who agrees to help them in their search for pro-Japanese activity, on condition that Lowery marry her. After a wireless set, used for communication with the enemy, is found, the girl grows impatient and reveals their plans to the Commandant of the island, a Nazi. But the Americans gain the cooperation of the natives and forestall invasion plans. The marriage plans are resumed.

THE CALL OF THE CANYON (Republic)

Super-Autry

PRODUCER: Harry Grey. Directed by Joseph Santley.

PLAYERS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Ruth Terry, Joe Strauch, Jr.

SYNOPSIS

This is one of the two super-specials from Gene Autry on the 1941-42 schedule and filmed, accordingly, on an expanded budget as were "Melody Ranch" and "Down Mexico Way." Joseph Santley, who directed those, also directed this one.

RIDERS OF THE WEST (Monogram)

Western Melodrama

PRODUCER: Scott R. Dunlap. Directed by Howard Bretherton.

PLAYERS: Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, Raymond Hatton, Sarah Padden, Dennis Moore, Robert Frazer, Charles King, Thomas London, Milburn Moranti.

SYNOPSIS

A trio of hometown crooks controlling a Western cow town plot to rob the ranchers of water rights but get in trouble when they undertake rustling of herds. Summoned by a woman rancher, the trio of undercover U. S. Marshals, Jones, McCoy and Hatton, arrive and install justice after uninstalling the criminals. It's the seventh in the series.

KING OF THE STALLIONS (Monogram)

Glorifying King Horse

PRODUCER: Edward Finney. Directed by Edward Finney.

PLAYERS: Nakoma (the horse), Chief Thundercloud, Chief Yowlachie, David O'Brien, Stanford Jolley.

SYNOPSIS

Edward Finney, whose earlier horse feature, "The Silver Stallion," demonstrated an earning capacity beyond expectation of the experts, provides here another handling of the equine theme for today's customers. The Indians named above are genuine, and there are many players in the human cast, but the horse is featured as hero of the story.

THEY RAID BY NIGHT (Producers Releasing)

War Drama

PRODUCER: Dixon R. Harwin. Directed by Spencer Gordon Bennet.

PLAYERS: Lyle Talbot, June Duprez, Victor Varconi, George Neise, Charles Rogers, Paul Baratoff, Leslie Dennison.

SYNOPSIS

In this story of the preparation and execution of a Commando raid on Norway, Lyle Talbot plays an American captain who is given the job of freeing an imprisoned Norwegian officer. He is dropped by parachute, along with a young Norwegian and a radio operator, in a forest, but the landing is observed. The former sweetheart of the Norwegian betrays their hiding place, but they escape to free the general and send word for the invasion to start. But the girl is not satisfied, and once more fools them into trusting her only to give them up. The patriotism of a seeming Quisling sets them free to guide the approaching raid.

POLICE BULLETS (Monogram)

Melodrama-Farce

PRODUCER: Lindsley Parsons. Directed by Jean Yarbrough.

PLAYERS: John Archer, Warren Hymer, Joan Marsh, Pat Gleason.

SYNOPSIS

The head of a protection racket, hearing of his possible prosecution on income tax evasion charges, hires a man with a photographic mind to memorize his books and then destroys the ledgers. However, this fails to save him, following various and sundry farcical complications.

The New Victory Carbons

Designed to Conserve Copper for War Needs

Winning this war is the first objective of every American. The will for Victory includes taking in stride whatever sacrifice or inconvenience may be occasioned by the demands of our war effort.

Government curtailment of copper necessitates reducing the thickness of copper coating on "National" copper coated high intensity projector carbons. This may result in a slightly longer spindle on the carbons, and in the case of the 7 mm — 6 mm combination, may result in some reduction in screen illumination, although there will still be sufficient light for satisfactory projection.

Fortunately, the culmination of research work on the 8 mm — 7 mm trim makes it possible to burn these new carbons, even with the thinner copper plating, and to obtain even more light with the same current formerly used (within limits of the new maximum). Savings as high as 30% in carbon consumption can be had for the same amount of light on the screen if the present light level is satisfactory. When using power sources designed for "Suprex" type lamps similar savings can be made, while retaining the same screen illumination as formerly, by shifting from 7 mm — 6 mm trims to the new 8 mm — 7 mm. To accomplish this may require enlarging present carbon holders, which can be done with little effort.

Operation at reduced arc current may also, in some instances, necessitate readjustment of the feed ratio of the projection lamps in order to maintain correct position of the carbons with a minimum of manual adjustment.

The trade-mark on these new Victory carbons is imprinted in white, instead of the familiar blue. Maximum allowable arc current is also stamped on each carbon. It is important that this current limitation be observed.

The words "National," "Suprex" and "Orotip" are trade-marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

Save the Copper

Most of the copper used for plating copper coated projector carbons drops to the floor of the lamp house when the carbons are burned. Continue to save these copper drippings and turn them over to an authorized scrap dealer or to such other agency as may be designated by our government.

Low temperature cabinets for testing a wide variety of military equipment are helping to provide better products more quickly. G-E condensing units are on the job.

Airplane propellers, rivets, shell casings, armor plate are a few of the war products that are made faster, better, in greater quantities with the aid of G-E refrigeration.

How does COOLING equipment make it HOT for the Axis?

Naval vessels of every type — cargo ships—army establishments must have refrigeration for food preservation and for drinking water. G-E equipment is used in great quantities.

Many vital war jobs are being performed today by G-E air conditioning and commercial refrigeration products. Equipment that normally would be for your use, is helping to speed war output—improve war products—test new military devices—keep food fresh for our fighting forces throughout the world.

SURFACES OF FORMICA!

Simple to Care for

THE thousands of stores, theaters, hotels, and public buildings in which Formica has been installed in the past few years are happy in their choice today, not only because the material is exceptionally attractive, with handsome colors and patterns, and deep limpid finishes, not only because it is durable, but because it is so easy to clean and maintain. In the present labor market that is an advantage of no mean importance.

Usually all that is needed to make Formica surfaces immaculate is rubbing with a damp cloth to moisten it and with a dry one to wipe it dry. Sticky or stubborn material can be removed with alcohol or benzol without injury to surface. There is no laborious polishing.

ISSUE OF JULY 25, 1942 VOLUME 148, NUMBER 4

Air Raid Precautions Run $125 to $200 per Theatre

SO FAR AS motion picture theatres have carried out civilian defense recommendations for air raid and blackout precautions, the cost per theatre has run from $125 to $200, in the middle of the country as well as along its coasts. This is indicated by reports from widely separated sections of the nation, including both those conceivably exposed to air raids and areas as safe as Kansas.

Preparations among coastal theatres, both East and West, were prompt and met pretty completely the admonitions of the civilian defense people. This is quite in accordance with expectations; the surprise comes from the inner sections of the country. While precautions in those regions have not been as general or comprehensive as those along the coasts, it appears, they nevertheless have gone further in some inland areas than real danger of enemy action would seem to dictate.

In California, Oregon and Washington substantially every theatre is fully equipped with bomb-fighting materials and implements of some kind, while emergency lighting provisions have been extensively carried out in co-operation with local fire and defense authorities. Equipment dealers and exhibitor organizations report that prior to the first organized blackouts practically every house was equipped substantially according to official recommendations, including stirrup pumps.

East Coast measures among theatres have been somewhat more sporadic than along the opposite edge of the country. Here the more elaborate installations have been pretty much confined to the circuit houses. One of the most comprehensive programs in the East is that of Rhode Island, where 95% of the fifty-five theatres in the state are well enough equipped, according to W. E. Spragg, district manager for M & P Theatres who is also the amusement industry co-ordinator in Rhode Island, to be given a certificate of approval by the State Council of Defense. These theatres, reports Mr. Spragg, have spent an estimated total of $10,000 on equipment, labor, etc., which amounts to about $180 per theatre.

Precautions in the Midwest

In the center of the country activity of this kind appears highly varied from region to region.

In Kansas City, Mo., for example, emphasis is on organization of personnel to handle emergencies, first-aid, co-operation with local civilian defense leaders. Few theatres have been equipped with complete materials and appliances, one exception being the Newman, another Loew's Midland, whose manager, John J. McManus, is chairman of the local theatre group for industrial protection.

Though there has not been any expectation of air raids in this Midwestern area, theatre managers and owners have a co-operative attitude. They have understood, however, that the supplies were not plentiful, and that those available should go first to coast theatres.

One point that seems generally accepted is that exhibitors and managers assume responsibilities that will include their own personal attention to their theatres, for the protection and guidance of their patrons, when practice blackouts, or raid "warnings" occur.

Activity in civilian defense by executives is illustrated by such work as that of H. E. Jameyson, district manager at Wichita for Fox-Midwest, who is a district fire warden. He has his organization set up and regularly functioning. The staffs of the local theatres have drills, meetings, practice in handling emergency situations, etc. The Fox theatres have connected the pumps that force the water from each of the theatre's wells for its cooling system, to city mains for auxiliary pressure, in an emergency.

Another example is that of Louis Higdon, manager at Chillicothe, Mo., for H. J. Griffith Theatres, Inc., who is in charge of civilian defense activities in that city.

Blackout Tests Not Favored

There have been few tests of civilian defense organization set-ups in the Kansas City area. Test blackouts have been held in a section of Kansas including Manhattan and Ft. Riley, at Leavenworth, and at Augusta. A test of air raid warden organization is to be held shortly in Kansas City, and later, a practice dimout. There is considerable reluctance in this area to complete blackout tests; it is felt that they might do more harm than good in some cities.

In addition to going along with local civilian defense department programs, a good many exhibitors and managers have gone in for first aid. All managers, several assistant managers, and the district manager, James J. Long, of the Fox-Midwest First District, comprising Kansas City, took the Red Cross first aid course, and all received certificates.

One supply house has had some demand for emergency lighting equipment from exhibitors in the Kansas City territory; to assure lighting in case of disablement of regular current sources. Outside of this, there is no call for special equipment.

St. Louis Preparations More Extensive

In St. Louis and its surrounding territory there has been a somewhat keener sense of emergency. Recently Charles H. Ellaby, president of the St. Louis Board of Public Service, and Vital Functions Chief of the Office of Civilian Defense there, told a mass meeting of civilian defense workers that he was hopeful other industries in the city could make half the progress made by the theatre business in civilian defense.

Soon after Pearl Harbor, the Amusement Defense Bureau was organized and at least one meeting a week has been held. The bureau also includes representatives of other forms of entertainment—bowling alleys, amusement parks, legitimate theatres, dance halls, etc.

Typical of the manner in which the bureau has functioned effectively is the way the Fanchon & Marco organization has equipped its big Fox theatre, 5,038-seat house and called third largest theatre in the nation. Approximately $1,200 has been spent in recent months for additional equipment for this theatre for the protection of patrons and property in blackouts or air raids.

A special film has been produced showing how the Fox staff would function in the event of an actual air raid or in test blackouts. It shows graphically how the switchboard operator in the second floor offices of the F & M organization warns the staff via a special communications system the moment an alarm is sounded. A microphone has been set up on the switchboard, and the warning the operator sends goes to nine communication stations in the theatre, none of which can be heard by the patrons.

Permanent installations of fluorescent lights have been made at the Fox, and the theatre is exceptionally bright when the emergency equipment is used. This equipment is powered by a gasoline-driven generator backstage. Ushers also are given special blackout lamps to carry.

Special Fire Equipment in Most Theatres

Most of the 90-odd theatres in St. Louis have added special fire fighting equipment, which includes scoop type shovels; 300 pounds of sand divided into 50 pound sacks; new hose; dry chemical fire extinguishers; stirrup pumps to fight incendiary bombs; axes, and portable lamps for emergency lighting.

Most of the 900 employes in St. Louis theatres have had at least ten hours of first aid training and fire defense work, and at least five hours of gas defense and drill. Many of the houses have added microphones and have posted lists of instructions for projectionists on how to cut into the regular sound system to warn patrons to keep quiet. The theatres have special lights on the stage to warn OCD workers of an alert, so they can leave quietly and not create any untoward disturbance among audiences.

The 660-seat subsequent run house, Yale, in the St. Louis Amusement Company chain, is typical of what has been done among the smaller houses. Over $100 has been spent to give it four portable blackout lamps, two storage batteries (to which ordinary automobile headlight lamps have been attached), one stirrup pump, two shovels, 300 pounds of sand, a dry chemical fire extinguisher, three pails and an extra stepladder. The communications system has also been extended.

The first objective of the Amusement Defense Bureau is protection of patrons, but also a factor underlying the extensive arrangments made so far is that property destroyed now will not be replaced until the war is over.

The threat of air raids in St. Louis is felt to be really quite serious, in view of the fact that more than $200,000,000 in war contracts were let there even before December 7, and the world's largest small arms factory is located in town, while a mammoth TNT plant lies 12 miles outside the city.

Each amusement unit is now appointing a "co-ordinator," and the manager of each house is making space in the theatre available to civilian defense officials as headquarters for different sectors of the city.

Regional WPB Directors

IN THE JUNE issue of BETTER THEATRES were listed the local offices of the War Production Board, to which theatre operators are directed for priority assistance when in immediate need of equipment or parts because of a breakdown—or, presumably, an impending one.

These offices are regionally organized, and while local offices forward requests direct to Washington for immediate action, not all theatre needs are of such "emergency" classification, and may lend themselves more to consideration by a regional director. The latest official list of regional offices, and their directors, has therefore been requested from the WPB. No director has yet been appointed for Minneapolis and Seattle. Those named are:

Boston (Region I)—Walter H. Wheeler, 17 Court Street.

New York (Region II)—John P. Maguire, Chanin Building.

Philadelphia (Region III)—Orville H. Bullitt, Broad Street Station Building.

Atlanta (Region IV)—Frank H. Neely, 116 Candler Building.

Cleveland (Region V)—John C. Virden, Union Commerce Building.

Chicago (Region VI)—Joseph Overlock, 20 North Wacker Drive.

Kansas City (Region VII)—Wade T. Childress, Mutual Interstate Building.

Dallas (Region VIII)—R. Eugene Risser, 4th Floor, Fidelity Building.

Denver (Region IX)—Leslie A. Miller, Kittredge Building.

San Francisco (Region X)—Harry H. Fair, 1355 Market Street.

Detroit (Region XI)—Ernest C. Kanzler, 7310 Woodward Avenue.

In each case these men are addressed as Regional Director, War Production Board.

Buying Do's and Can'ts

Noting several announcements of the WPB of interest to theatre managements:

1. Establishment of a new service for applicants for priority assistance who use individual PD-1A certificates. If applicants will enclose with their blank a self-addressed post card, the case number assigned to their application will be stamped on the card, and it will be returned to them to facilitate handling of subsequent inquiries with respect to the application. All inquiries concerning applications should be submitted in writing.

In order to avoid unnecessary correspondence, applicants are requested not to make inquiries concerning their cases for two weeks after they have been received by WPB. This is the maximum time normally required to process an application, and usually the application will either be granted or denied in a shorter time. If there is a delay beyond two weeks, or if for any reason supplementary information is submitted, use of the case number in correspondence will expedite handling and assure a prompt reply.

2. Confirming the little known privilege of using Form PD-1X in purchasing theatre equipment through a theatre supply dealer. This is a form on which dealers who buy directly from a manufacturer must apply for assistance in the acquisition of goods for re-sale. Preference ratings will be assigned to stipulated quantities of equipment necessary to the continued operation of theatres. By this method theatre owners will be able to obtain essential materials from their usual sources of supply without filing applications themselves.

3. Excluding (to all practical intents and purposes so far as commercial theatres are concerned) auditorium seating from the restrictions of Order L-41, the one dealing with construction for amusement functions, limiting such expenditures to $5,000. This of course tosses auditorium chairs over into the M-126 classification exclusively, which, come August 3rd, removes standard auditorium seating from the market altogether.

Chairs substantially using wood, fabricated fibre materials and other substitutes for metal, may receive WPB approval, however. But unless their approval by the Government, and their acceptance by theatre operators, are forthcoming, new auditorium seating is "out" for the duration.

A Year of Candy

Existing stocks of candy in the warehouses of manufacturers and distributors should last about a year with further rationing, according to opinion voiced at the recent convention of the National Confectioners' Association in New York. The principal cause of shortage, it was pointed out, is the lack of sufficient cocoanut oil and cocoa, which in turn is due to the diversion of ships to the carrying of war supplies.

At the same time it was asserted that fairly good products to replace the cocoanut oil are now being made through "hydrogenation," with vegetable and organic oils as the base product. And there will be plenty of peanuts . . . no kidding.

Lighting Guide

A book that should prove very handy for theatre men to have around is "Fluorescent Lighting Manual," just published by McGraw-Hill, New York. Written by Charles L. Amick of General Electric's Nela Park Engineering Department, it is of course authoritative and complete in engineering details; the author has, however, endeavored to write, arrange and illustrate the book so that it can be of immense practical use to the layman. It tells how to judge requirements, select fixtures, install the lamps and so on.

Save That Copper

The nationwide salvage campaign has brought another appeal to theatres to save all the copper possible. Christopher J. Dunphy, chief of the Amusement Section of the WPB's Service Branch, followed Chairman Donald M. Nelson's general appeal with one addressed to theatre managements and staffs, urging that all unused copper be scrapped, and copper carbon drippings be saved.

This copper should be sent to a theatre supply dealer, Mr. Dunphy pointed out, as quickly as possible, and he added that managers should keep accurate records of their carbon drippings because "these furnish a vital contribution to the war." The records? Or the drippings? Anyway, you'd better do it. —G. S.

Simple Method of Testing and Correcting the Projection Light System

• Wartime operation places special emphasis on efficiency, but important to effective as well as economical projection at any time is perfect adjustment of arc, reflector and lens. This article, the fourth by the author in a group on methods that make for greater efficiency in projection, presents material especially developed for it, and given practical tests.

By CHARLES E. SHULTZ

The author expresses his appreciation to Mr. Alvin Sloan of the St. Cloud Amusement Corporation, for the use of its theatres in conducting practical tests of the data contained in this article; and for the co-operation received from Mr. George Miller, Business Agent of IA Local 365, and its members.

HOW OPTICAL alignment is one of several vital prerequisites of an efficient projection optical system, was pointed out by the writer in the May 30th issue of BETTER THEATRES. This article deals explicitly with the direct results of poor optical alignment — lowered screen intensity, uneven light distribution and unpleasant off-color illumination which result. Comprehensive methods are given for determining the point or points of incorrect alignment, and direct methods are suggested for their correction with the suprex type arc.

CHARLES E. SHULTZ

ELEMENTS IN "ALIGNMENT"

Optical alignment is fundamentally a rather simple condition to understand and maintain, and requires no costly special equipment to analyze or correct. The methods suggested in this article make it possible to analyze optical misalignment by direct observation; and methods are given for translating these observations for location of the point or points responsible for efficiency losses.

Optical alignment is a condition in which the center of each component part of a complete optical system falls upon an imaginary straight line known as the optical axis of that system.

Figure 1 represents a straight line along which are spaced four circles whose centers are at the center of the line. These circles are numbered from 1 to 4. No. 1 represents the optical center of the reflector; No. 2 represents the center of the crater of the positive carbon; No. 3 represents the center of the projector aperture; and No. 4 represents the center of the rear element of the projection lens.

(If we wished to add a fifth point, we could represent the center of the front element of the projection lens; but the type lens holder used in most projectors eliminates the danger of co-axial misalignment of the lens, therefore it can safely be assumed that if the center of the rear element of the lens is at the axis, the entire lens will be aligned.)

"POINT OF INDICATION"

circle. Point A is the point of aerial image where a sharply focused image of the reflector appears when a card is inserted into the light beam. The exact point of aerial image is determined by moving the card back and forth perpendicular to the beam until the point is found where the image of the reflector is most sharply focused.

Point A will be referred to hereafter as the point of indication because the image of the reflector at this point will indicate the presence of optical misalignment by observation.

By the type of image observed at the point of indication we will be able to locate the point, or points, of misalignment in the four-point line by translation of the meaning of each type of image observed.

Assuming that one of the four points must be selected as a pivotal point, it is logical to choose point No. 4, as this represents the projection lens, which is held in a fixed position within the projector. It follows that Points 1, 2 and 3 must be in line with each other and with Point 4 if optimum alignment is to be attained.

Misalignment of any of the three points with each other, or which Point 4, can be observed at the point of indication. In observing the image at the point of indication, the light would be so intense and the beam so hot, if the entire projector aperture were used, that it would be necessary to wear dark glasses and use metal for a screen to avoid burning up the screen in the intense heat of the beam, or damaging the vision of the observer.

To avoid this and at the same time to obtain a higher degree of accuracy in these tests, a pinhole plate may be placed in the projector aperture with the hole on the axis. This will reduce the intensity of the image at the point of indication to comfortable viewing brightness and reduce the heat to a negligible temperature.

This pinhole plate is the only piece of equipment necessary for analyzation of optical alignment by the methods described in this article.

MAKING PINHOLE PLATE

To construct the pinhole plate, obtain a small piece of metal of 12- or 16-gauge material and cut it to any shape which may easily be held in the projector aperture by closing the gate upon it.

Determine a point in this plate which will be approximately the center of the aperture when it is at the most convenient position in the gate. (Be sure the plate is large enough to cover completely the aperture and allow no light to strike the projection lens.) At this point drill a .022-inch hole. This is a hole so small that it is just possible to see light through it. The size of this hole need not be exactly .022-inch, but a larger hole will increase the intensity and heat at the point of indication, as well as reduce the accuracy of the analysis. Figure 3 illustrates such a pinhole plate.

TESTING FOR ALIGNMENT

To test for optical alignment proceed as follows:

1. Strike the arc.
2. Insert the pin hole plate at the projector aperture with the hole as nearly at center of aperture as possible.
3. Change the focus of the lens until the light reflected from the rear element forms the smallest possible point of light upon the plate. (Caution—the pin hole plate will become very hot, do not burn your fingers. It is advisable to open the dowser for about 30 seconds and then close it for one minute, repeating this all during these tests to avoid overheating the gate and pin hole plate.)
4. Shift the plate about until the point of light reflected from the rear element of the lens falls upon the hole in the plate. This establishes alignment between points number 3 and 4 on our four point line.
5. Re-focus the lens to its original position. (It is advisable to mark this point before moving the lens so that it may easily be returned to this position.)
6. Hold a card in the light beam just in front of the projection lens at the point of indication and move it back and forth in the beam of light until the point is found at which the image of the reflector is sharply focused.

If your projector was originally designed for the projection of silent film, Point 3 will be off the center of the sound aperture .049-inch, but at the center line of the film. As this condition is often confusing the following description may be of interest.

The silent projector was designed with an aperture measuring .9062-inch in width by .68-inch in height. The center of this aperture was at the center line of the film, and the film tracks and guides were constructed to position the center line of the film at the axis which ran through the center of the projection lens. This resulted in the center lines of film, aperture and lens all assuming a position at the axis in perfect alignment.

Sound Projector Change

With the advent of sound-on-film projection, the aperture was reduced to .825-inch in width by .6-inch in height, and the center of the aperture was shifted over .049-inch from the center line of the film to allow room for the sound track beside the picture. The position of the film in relationship to the lens remained unchanged.

Figure 4 illustrates the relative positions and proportions of the silent and sound apertures. As may be seen, the film and lens remained in the same position, but the center line of the film and the center of the sound aperture are separated by a distance of .049-inch.

We need not, however, let this slight misalignment be a source of concern. The method just given places the hole in the pinhole plate at the axis, and in line with the lens, and we may consider Point 3 in our four-point line as the pinhole position, rather than the center of the aperture.

Let us examine the image which appears at the point of indication as a test of the degree of accuracy of the optical alignment:

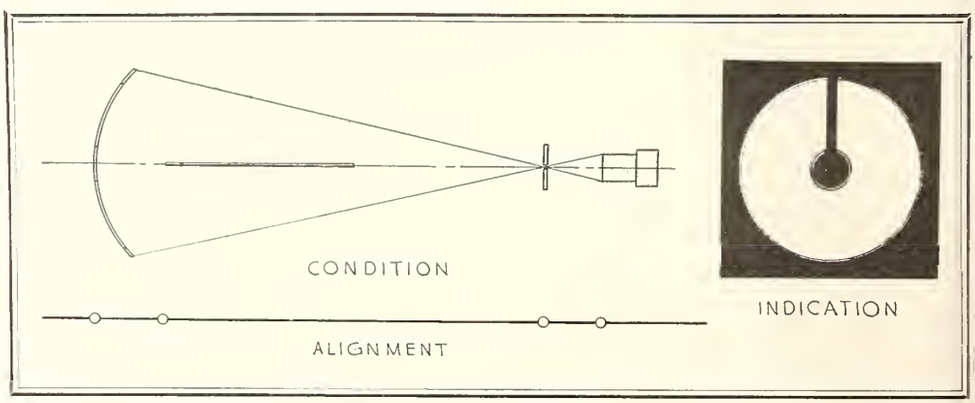
CORRECT FOCUS



If you see a clear white field all over the image of the reflector, with the exception of the shadow of the positive carbon holder and V-rest assembly, the entire system is in correct alignment and the reflector is in correct focus.

This condition is illustrated in Figure 5; it of course represents an ideal condition.

If the image of the reflector appears as shown in Figure 6, it indicates proper alignment, but incorrect focus of the reflector. In this case the distance from the crater of the positive carbon to the face of the reflector is too great.

This condition is corrected by focusing

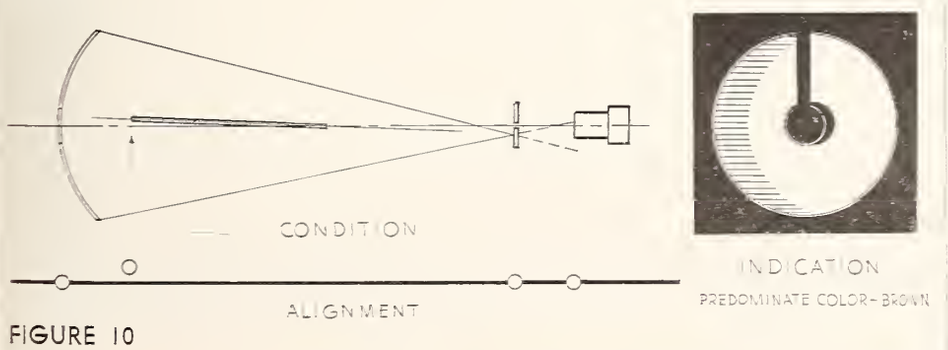

FIGURE 10

the reflector until a clear white field is obtained.

INCORRECT FOCUS

If the image appears as shown in Figure 7, it indicates proper alignment, but incorrect focus of the reflector. In this case the distance from the crater of the positive carbon to the face of the reflector is too short.

This condition is corrected by focusing the reflector until a clear white field is obtained.

It may be seen that the last two conditions are not the result of optical misalignment, because the illustrations show that the areas of color are concentric bands of equal width.

TESTING AND CORRECTING

We can also go by the translation of colors.

Blue always indicates too long a focus.

Yellow or brown indicates too short a focus.

These colors result from the position of the arc in relationship to the surface of the reflector.

Suprex Misalignment and Correction

The suprex type arc has three definite colors in three zones. The first zone, just in front of the crater, is blue in color and is the point where the gaseous discharge from the arc sweeps across the face of the crater and upward into the tail flame. The second zone is the crater area, which is white in color; and the third zone, which is yellow, is the incandescent carbon just behind the crater. The color of the light depends upon which of these zones is at the focal point of the reflector and the point of indication clearly shows what part of the reflector is receiving any given color.

If the image of the reflector appears as shown in Figure 8, there are several conditions which must be tested:

1st—The lateral adjustments of the reflector may be incorrect.

To correct, attempt to clear the field by lateral adjustment.

2nd—If the first method fails to clear entirely the field, the condition is a misalignment as pictured in Figures 9, 10, or 11.

Figure 9 illustrates a condition in which the reflector and positive carbon crater are both off the axis, but in different directions. This condition may be caused by the entire lamphouse assuming a position not perfectly parallel to the axis.

To correct, loosen the bolts holding the lamphouse and shift it angularly until the image of the reflector at the point of indication shows the lamphouse to be parallel to the axis. (Each time the lamp is shifted it will be necessary to alter the lateral adjustment to test the clearness of the field.)

3rd—If the first and second suggestions do not completely clear the field of color, the misalignment is as shown in Figure 10 or 11.

A condition such as shown in Figure 10

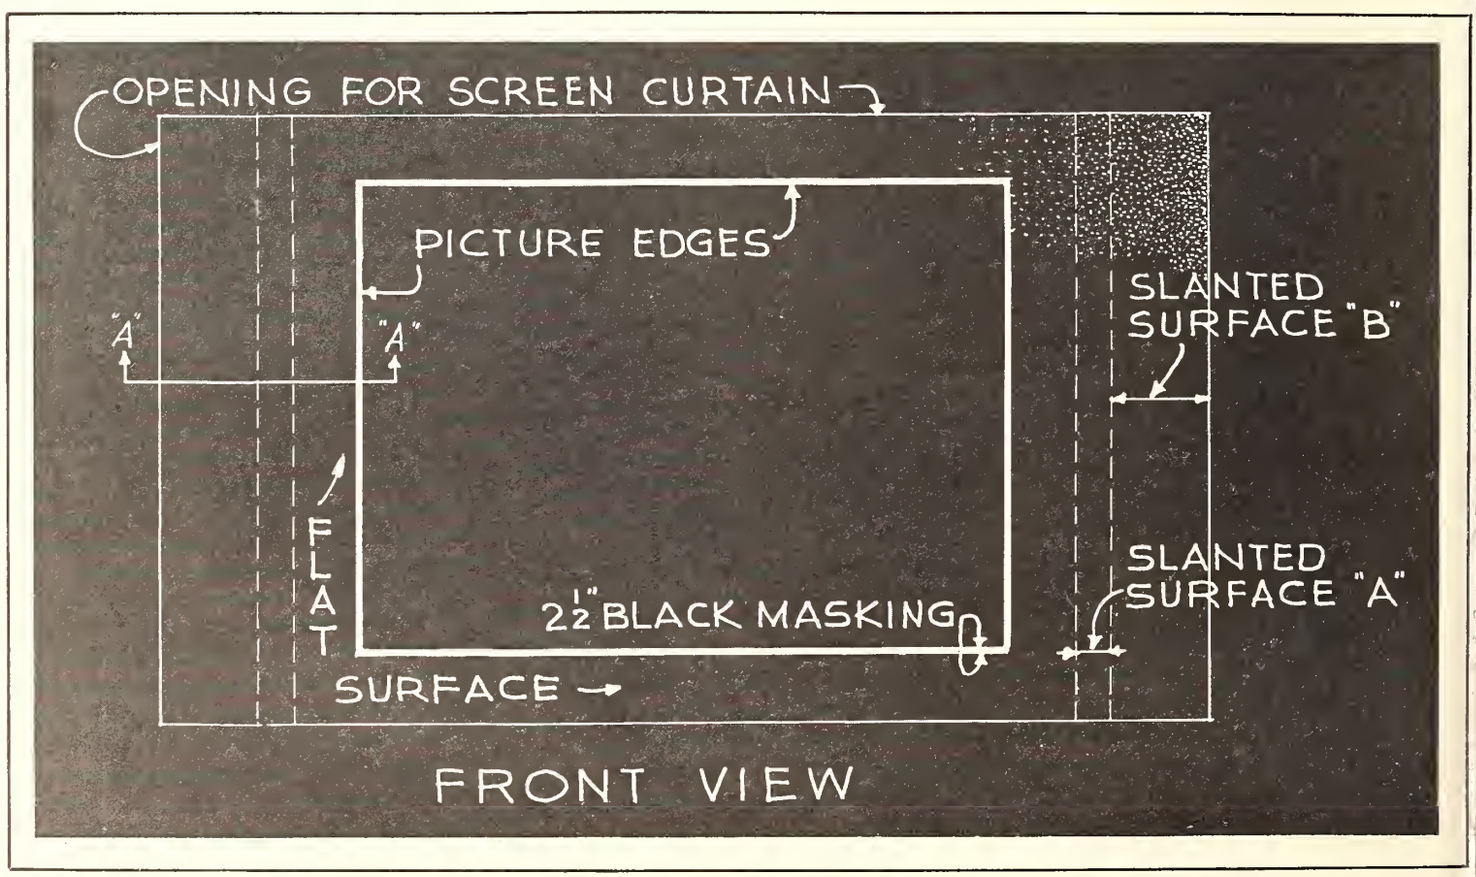
DESIGNS and DEVICES

By BEN SCHLANGER
Theatre Architect and Consultant

Here's a way to make your picture more impressive with a

LUMINOUS SCREEN FRAME

A COMPARATIVELY inexpensive change that can be made today in the auditorium, to create a refreshing improvement, calls for the removal of the wide black masking and draperies usually found surrounding the screen, and replacing them with thin plywood or other composition board, as framing for the screen. Such an installation is diagrammed in the accompanying sketches.



The new surfaces recommended for framing the picture, will appear slightly illuminated, receiving their light from side spill reflections from the screen proper, and from stray light rays coming from the lens system of the projectors. Since all of this light automatically changes in intensity in accordance with the density of the picture as it is being projected, there will never be an annoying or distracting amount of light thrown on the frame surfaces.

None of the light thrown on to these surfaces will reflect back to the reflected picture, therefore the contrast values of the picture cannot be impaired. This new treatment is especially recommended where a wide or deep auditorium causes the picture to appear too small, although it is desirable in all instances because of the greater naturalness obtained with slight illumination surrounding the picture.

Many attempts have been made to obtain properly illuminated picture surroundings. Some of them have proved unsuccessful because their light was not synchronous with the screen light; and others, because they are as yet too expensive to build and also require further development. The scheme illustrated here requires no change in the screen, or any secondary lighting.

The existing black masking around the picture may be left in place or be reused. The new light gray surface shown on the drawings should cover all but 2½" of the masking closest to the edge of the picture, as illustrated. This remaining narrow masking is necessary to absorb the uneven edges of the projected picture. Further experimentation may develop some method of eliminating even this much of black masking. It would be a distinct improvement to have no such sharply defined boundary for the picture.

The new flat surface and the slanting surfaces, A and B, can be supported on a light framework made of wood. The wood frame should not show at the edge adjoining the black masking near the picture edge. Only the thin edge of the surface material should show, since a thicker edge would pick up and reflect too brightly the light coming from the picture. Highly illuminated stripes are just as undesirable as dark contrasting stripes or areas. The thin material can project about 3 inches beyond the framework for best results.

The surrounding framing surfaces are divided into three parts. Each part functions to receive and reflect light differently. The flat surface contiguous to the narrow black masking receives its illumination from the stray light rays of the projection lens system. This part is kept flat because it would re-reflect too much of the screen light if it were at an angle like the rest of the surfaces. There is an equal band of this surface on the sides and top and bottom of the picture. This band should be equal in width to one-tenth of the width of the projected picture.

The slanting surfaces, A and B, appear only on the sides of the picture. They receive their light from side spill reflections from the screen, as well as from the lens system. Surface B has less of a slant because it is desirable to pick up less light as the distance from the picture increases, to effect slight fadeout at extreme sides.

Surface A should be equal in width to one-eleventh of the width of the picture. Surface B should be equal in width to one-seventh of the width of the picture (all of these dimensions can be varied slightly to suit conditions). Any major adjustment to fit conditions should be made by decreasing or increasing the width of Surface B.

LIGHT VARIATION CONTROLLED

Note that a slight curvature is shown between each break in surface. This is done to avoid any sharp break in light intensity. If very thin material, such as ⅛-inch plywood is used, this curved work can be done very simply by keeping the back framing to one side of all the curves.

The angles shown for Surfaces A and B can be varied slightly, keeping the A surface at a greater angle than the B surface. Relative dimensions have been given so that correct sizes can be figured for any screen.

Theatres which happen to have exceptionally large screens in relation to their size would particularly require this recommended screen treatment; however, there are very few such instances. A theatre whose screen is equal in width to a dimension obtained by dividing the distance from the last row of seats to the screen by three and one-half, or less, may be considered to have such a large screen.

The dimensions given are based on a shape for the entire light field which approaches the shape of the image of view in real life. Some time in the future the projected picture may fill this entire field. The present motion picture shape, as dictated by present film widths, sound tracks, etc., is not what it should be, not being wide

FABRICS: THEIR PLACE IN THEATRE DECORATION

● Views of two new Connecticut theatres—I. J. Hoffman's Capitol in Milford, and J. Quittner's Eastwood in East Hartford—exemplifying today's use of wall fabrics . . . with comment by John Eberson, architect for both houses.

DECORATOR: William Riseman Associates

By JOHN EBERSON

THE use of wall fabrics in motion picture theatres is to be highly recommended; it is effective, artistic and practical, for more than one reason.

Wall fabrics have great acoustical value when used as a covering material for acoustical pads, from flannel up to rockwool. In itself when stretched, it is effective in softening and absorbing the high-frequency waves of shrill sounds.

Cotton-rayon fabric offers an excellent opportunity to treat wall surfaces in artistic, decorative fashion by virtue of its uniformity and peculiar sheen, due to the fact that in weaving these materials color varieties and combinations can be better handled than by brush in plain or stencil effect.

The application of wall fabrics is speedy and rapid. Naturally proper stripping and ground work must be provided to permit a quick and lasting installation.

The use of wall fabrics in the remodeling and redecorating of theatres under present war conditions, offers a ready means of creating impressive effects without interfering with the restrictions which the war has imposed, justifiably enough, on the building and decorating trade.

see them coming to our rescue in wartime decorating —and whereas so-called "hard" merchandise will be increasingly scarce, the weavers of fabrics have set up spools and frames which weave rayon and cotton into all manner of beautiful coverings without drawing on war-prohibited materials.

Another advantage of wall coverings for treatment of theatre walls that we want to mention, is the great variety of patterns, and the number of colors that can be made at the present time. The present market offers to users a great variety of fabrics, both in quality, weight and design, which were designed by the manufacturers in a voluntary effort to meet war regulations.

Manufacturers have learned under the direction of theatre architects to arrange for a combination of yarns in the weaving of these wall fabrics which will stand the temperature and humidity changes brought about by air-conditioning installations, and when the fabrics are carefully selected and intelligently specified, stretching and warping of materials can be avoided.

The only thing that might appear difficult under present circumstances in the manufacture of cotton and rayon fabrics, which are commonly called "damask," is the dependability of dyes and bleaches.

¶ Watch the "Little Things" If You Want to Conserve

NOW WHEN almost everything must be made to last longer, we are more likely to appreciate the value of so-called "unimportant things," if anything bearing at all upon the operation of motion picture theatres could be called unimportant. If you would check back in your mind past troubles necessitating emergency calls for quick repairs, you doubtless will find that it often was some little detail which was initially at fault.

Most of us, when confronted with an emergency or an exacting situation, try to solve the problem in a complicated manner, even though the difficulty really is a minor one. The trick, of course, is to be able to pick out these "little things" from practical knowledge and investigation. Take, for instance, the case of a motor-generator breakdown in a certain theatre recently. The theatre requested a survey to find out what made the motor-generator set break down, and wished to have an engineer make or suggest the necessary repairs.

On arriving at the theatre, the engineer was led by the house electrician, in somewhat unsteady style, partly due to the darkened theatre and dim light of the flashlight, to a room under the stage. There two heavy-duty motor-generator sets were found set up, each thickly covered with dust and surrounded by numerous oily rags. On being questioned, the electrician proved to be really a general handyman around the theatre, rather than a qualified electrician.

TOMATO CAN TROUBLE

An effort was made to turn over the shaft by hand; it barely moved. The commutator and brushes were checked next, and on the commutator face rough, freshly cut ridges and grooves were found. When an explanation was sought from the handyman, he innocently replied that he had used a screwdriver to scrape the hardened dirt off the commutator face!

Next, the oil cups were checked, and it was found that they were about three-fourths full, with dirty fuzz and grit adhering inside. When questioned about the condition of the oil, the handyman seemed utterly puzzled; however, it was soon found that he had used an opened tomato can to keep the oil in.

It was also noted that a large heap of ashes from the boiler was laying about two feet away from the motor-generator set. When advised how to remedy these neglected conditions, our handyman nonchalantly replied that he never took much trouble to purchase a proper oil can or to obtain the right type of oil, explaining that he "had other things to do." Then he added that the generators had run properly for a number of years, and furthermore, that in case one set should break down there was always another one to keep the show going. Here the basic trouble consisted in such simple little things as purchasing an oil can and proper type of oil, making systematic and careful inspection, and keeping the motor-generator sets and the immediate area around them clean. Many more years of trouble-free operation would have been added to the life of those sets had these "unimportant things" been taken care of.

M-G ROOM TOO HOT

On another occasion a request was made by a manager to check the motor-generator starters which always kick out about an hour or two after the show was on. On checking the motor-generator room the trouble was soon found. The first thing noticed was that there was hardly any ventilation in the room, yet it contained two motor-generators, and two ballast rheostats with a floor area of about 6 x 6 feet and a ceiling height of about eight feet.

The rheostat shelf was installed about six inches away from the starters, and approximately in line with them. The starters were of the regular across-the-line type with over-load and under-voltage protection. Inside these starters thermal relays were used that "kicked out" at exactly the temperature for which they were designed. As a rule these settings are very close to the horse-power of the motor they are to protect in case of a short-circuit, line faults or motor defects. What happened in this case was that the heat from the motor-generator sets and especially the ballast rheostat, increased the normal temperature setting of the relays ever so slightly, due to lack of ventilation in the room, and as a result they "kicked out" the generator after a short time in operation.

The most practicable remedy was to install a ventilation system, and to relocate the rheostats away from the starters. One, of course, could have increased the size of the thermal relays in the starters, but then the motors would not have received the proper protection and a motor burn-out might have resulted.

TOO SMALL TO NOTICE?

One day an excited call came from a theatre, stating that in one lamp no light could be produced at the arcs, and it was found to be badly pitted and burned at the blades and jaws. When this switch was thrown out, with the current on, a large flash was noticed; when it was thrown in, the arc control motor would speed excessively; but when the arcs were struck, only a red glow would be noticed at the carbon ends.

The d. c. panel and fuses were checked, as well as the rheostats. They were found in good condition, as were the wiring circuits; however, when the old carbon trims were removed from the lamp it was noticed that the positive carbon had a fused spot just where it normally rests in the jaw. Also the positive jaw was pitted and fused in the "V" slot that holds the carbon. According to this, a short-circuit existed somewhere on the positive line, but checking this line revealed no fault, so it was decided to take apart the entire positive jaw assembly. On backing off the two screws that fastened the jaw to the lamp, a short piece of copper wire was found in back of the insulators lying across the two screw lugs. Now, this bit of wire was purposely put in that place, or accidentally dropped in during servicing. And this little piece of wire could have stopped the show for some time and never be suspected of causing the trouble.

Another time a call was made to check a condition where one lamphouse would burn properly for a short time, then go out completely. This trouble occurred only if a certain make of generator was used. The setup in this particular projection room was two projectors, two 2-pole double-throw knife switches in the d. c. panel, two ballast rheostats, and a two motor-generator sets used alternately. The wiring layout was so that each generator could feed either lamp, or both lamps, by throwing over the double-throw switches in the d. c. panel. In trying to locate the reason one lamp gradually went out when it was thrown on one particular side of the d. c. panel, the arc lamp switch, the entire circuit wiring, the rheostat and motor-generator sets were carefully checked. When the trouble persisted, the only other thing left was to remove the entire dead-front barrier of the d. c. panel, to check the buss bars and lugs. The trouble was finally traced down to one lug on the positive side. However, when a test lamp was put across it, with the generator running, the lamp would burn brightly, then gradually dim out. Even after tightening this lug the trouble continued. When it was taken off it was found that the buss bar was bent a little at the rear of the lug, and as a result it made only a slight, gradual contact. A new lug was installed and the bar straightened, which entirely eliminated the trouble.

CASE OF A BROKEN PROJECTOR

Then there was the manager who excitedly insisted that one of his projectors was falling apart. He bitterly criticized the type of projector that had recently been installed, complaining that the noise from it could be heard in the auditorium, and since he had a full house, he threatened to sue if he had to refund any money.

A sharp metallic noise seemed to be coming from the soundhead. The projectionist seemed puzzled and when questioned said that the trouble developed suddenly about an hour previously. The noise really was bad—it gave one the impression that something would tear loose any minute. A careful checkup was made with the aid of a flashlight of all the sprocket idlers and guide rollers, and finally it was noticed that one of the film rollers was not turning and was slightly out of seat. When this roller was touched the noise suddenly stopped, indicating the trouble. A drop or two of oil at the ends of the roller, after it was properly seated, effected a complete cure. The manager came into the projection room, breathless and smiling broadly, offering congratulations on the quick and effective repair.

Another time a call was made at a theatre where a certain changeover coil always shorted, blowing a fuse. The manager was quite upset and rightly so, as it was the second coil that had been installed in this particular changeover. He was under the impression that old rewound coils were being sold him. A thorough checkup was made of the foot switches, the wiring and circuit hookup, and the changeover assembly; however, everything seemed in good working order and it was finally decided that the entire changeover coil assembly should be removed. On checking the burned-out cork it was noticed that there were burnt short-circuit marks at exactly the same spots.

Nothing unusual could be found inside the coil housing, so a new coil was inserted and the housing was reassembled on the projector head. But before the cover was put in place it was found that the screw that fastens the plunger collar was extending so much inside that it barely touched the coil. This screw was backed off and it was found to be of the wrong type for the changeover housing, used with no thought given to the trouble it would be almost sure to cause later on!

MYSTERY OF STAINED CEILING

Carelessness costs money. I recall a trip to a theatre to check the ceiling in front of the projection room where a stain on the plaster seemed to get bigger all the time. When I flashed a light on the stain from the rear of the balcony it did seem quite bad, and of a peculiar color. On climbing to the hung ceiling through a trap door I soon found the cause of the trouble. A pile of carbon stubs and ash drippings was laying on a wood platform on which an exhaust fan was mounted for exhausting the air from the hung ceiling. What happened in this case was that when it rained the water would beat in through the exhaust fan louvres, run along the wood platform into the pile of carbon stubs and drippings, then go down upon the auditorium ceiling. How the carbon stubs and drippings got on this platform is anybody's guess.

WHAT IS AN APERTURE PLATE?

In another theatre a new screen was installed with new masking for the picture. The installation men set in a square corner masking, whereas the aperture plates in the projector head of course had rounded corners. The manager wanted to know the cost of remodeling his projector, to give a square-corner picture. When told that the change involved would be simply to insert square-cornered aperture plates in place of the round-cornered ones, he could not believe it; in fact, he did not understand just what an aperture plate was and how it could frame the picture on the screen.

The moral of this little string of true stories is obvious: You can't underestimate the importance of details. A lot of annoyance—and money—can be saved by being sure that those "little, unimportant things" are absolutely all right.

¶ Making the Theatre Safe for Employes

THE SAFETY of theatre patrons, always of great concern in theatre operation, has been even more on our minds since entrance of the United States into the war, and a large share of these columns has been devoted since Pearl Harbor to ways and means of protecting the customers. Now we turn to measures that minimize hazards to employes, at all times.

There is, however, a wartime angle to the matter, inasmuch as men trained to theatre work are not normally available. Accidents to theatre help during normal times were bad enough, but during the war such accidents can easily upset the smooth running of the theatre. No employe trained in his line of work and in the specific methods of a certain theatre can be replaced quickly by a "green" employe, no matter how small and easy that work may appear on the surface. It will take from several days to months before a new employe will catch on to the job, and in the meantime the theatre show routine will suffer.

The problem is twofold: How can accidents be avoided or be cut to a minimum; and how can time and money be saved in getting the work of the theatre done efficiently?

LADDERS FOR THEATRE WORK

One important source of trouble is the use of improper ladders in general maintenance work. One of the pieces of equipment most often used in every theatre for maintenance work, is a ladder. The ladder must be used for changing the letters in the marquee and for replacing burned out light bulbs or tubes. It is used in cleaning the auditorium side walls, panels and fabrics, the screen or draperies on the stage, cleaning or replacing auditorium lighting fixtures and bulbs, etc., etc. Use of an old 'rickety' ladder can cause a serious accident; at best, it wastes time and induces breakage.

In the first place, in using an unsteady or poorly constructed ladder, two men usually must handle it to afford some degree of safety. While one man is working at the top, the other must hold the ladder at the bottom to prevent it from slipping. In many cases this two-man team is just as bad as having one man alone on the ladder, for the fellow on top assumes he is safe, whereas the chap holding the ladder may let his attention stray for a moment. The writer knows of many instances in which marquee attraction panel glass, light bulbs and tubes have been broken in just this way.

We recall an occasion when a theatre employe broke his leg while using an improper ladder in servicing a blower. The blower was located in a room at the stage wiring wall and the only means of entering this room was a trap door 12 feet above the auditorium floor. A straight wood ladder was used without safety shoes at the bottom. Another employee holding the ladder let it slip from under his feet just as the man on top was about to enter through the trap door. This man hung momentarily by one hand and then let go, breaking his leg as he landed on the hard concrete floor.

On another occasion that comes to mind an employe fell through a screen while cleaning it. In this case, an old patched up "A" step ladder was used, which gave way as the employe was cleaning the upper part of the screen and masking. Luckily the man escaped with minor bruises and scratches, but the screen was a total loss.

There is no question that a good, sturdy and safe ladder will save time and money in a lot of ways. A ladder that can be used easily and safely by one man will naturally dispense with the services of an extra ladder man, who can be doing other work. The top or platform of the ladder should have sufficient room for holding tools, marquee letters and glass or other supplies, so that the employe can work efficiently and be as safe as when standing on a floor. It should have great strength, but with lightness of weight in handling, and have rugged non-skid safety shoes at the bottom to prevent creeping.

Every theatre ladder should be of such design that an employe doing general cleaning and maintenance work can work close to auditorium walls, especially when there is a side bank of chairs. In this way the wall panels, fabrics, draperies, etc., can be cleaned in less time and with far less fatigue, and in safety.

In cleaning a screen, the use of a long-handled screen brush with a proper cleaning material will also help prevent accidents, to the screen as well as to employes. Such screen cleaning equipment can be purchased at a small cost and it will more than pay for itself in a short time, as many screen surfaces have been ruined by the use of improper brushes and cleaning material. A long-handled screen brush will prove of equal value on small or large screens, as it reduces the possibility that the employe will over-reach himself while he is working on the ladder.

REDUCING GLASS BREAKAGE

The use of a sturdy, well designed ladder will help considerably in reducing the amount of breakage common in servicing the marquee. There is of course the human element that must be taken into account; not every employe is careful in changing letters, replacing burned out lamps, etc. There is bound to be some breakage in maintenance work. Besides providing a well constructed ladder, a way of reducing breakage is by applying a newly developed shatter-proof liquid film on all lamps, tubing, glass letters and attraction panels. Such liquid film was especially developed for use on all glass to prevent shattering. It can be applied easily with a brush. Reduction of light transmission by such coating is negligible.

ELECTRICAL HAZARDS

Another thing that can cause serious accidents and loss of time and money, is the improper handling of electrical equipment. Take, for instance, defective electric light plugs attached to a sweeper, box office heater, etc. These plugs in time become hazardous, as the prongs may be bent or loose, or the insulation on the cap and wiring may be broken. This condition is the direct result of rough handling, caused usually by pulling the plug out by the cord, or by improperly inserting it into the connection. Therefore all electric cords and plugs should be checked carefully and if defective, new ones should be purchased. There have been many cases in which unsuspecting employes were thus badly burned about the hands, and in which fuses have blown in the panelboard when the show was on. Bad plugs or electric cords can even cause death to the person handling them.

PROJECTION ACCESSORIES

A place in the theatre where proper tools and equipment should always be used is the projection room. There are many theatres that do not even have a proper test lamp in the projection room—or if there is one, it is a crude home-made affair with two old wires attached to a socket. Of course, a home-made test lamp is better than none, but it can be dangerous if improperly made or carelessly handled. The writer knows of one instance in which the employe checked the electric lines by wetting his two fingers and placing them alternately over the exposed bussbar to find out if current was flowing. When he was told of the danger in doing this, he replied that there was no test lamps available in the theatre—this in spite of the fact that a test lamp costs a pittance.

Another item that should be checked is all exposed wiring or cords, especially BX conduits as they can easily cause costly breakdowns in the equipment, fires, and serious injury to employes.

In many theatres there is a definite lack of proper tools in the projection room even now when in an emergency theatre employes are likely to have to make the repairs. An offset screw driver should be on hand for working on the projector mechanism, as well as an accurate gauge. A gauge is essential for the proper adjustment or replacement of projector mechanism, guide rollers, sprockets, pad rollers, etc., as they require very close tolerances, anywhere from .001 to .015 of an inch. A rough guess in doing this precision work may mean a bound mechanism.

Then there is the use in some theatres of "home-made" rewinders and other implements of the projection room. Some of these gadgets are ingeniously contrived, when you consider the materials and facilities with which they were made. And some of them may appear to work all right, too. But can the theatre owner afford to take a chance on them? A splicer, a drive belt, pulley or rewind motor can cause injuries from which serious infections can develop, or fires in the projection room endangering life.

Providing for the safety of employes begins with the design of the theatre itself (we'd hate to be a projectionist in some theatres we've seen!); but it continues throughout operation, in the tools with which the staff works. And in most cases, the difference between maximum safety and ever-present hazards is a matter of only a few dollars. And one accident can cost hundreds.

is rarely encountered with lamps having V-rests for the positive carbon, as they are accurately aligned at the factory. Earlier lamps not having V-rests sometimes encounter this trouble when a full length trim is inserted and the carbon is warped.

A simple test for this alignment may be made by inserting the longest possible positive carbon in the lamp and gripping this carbon with the jaw as far as possible from the crater end. Burn the arc and adjust the negative carbon until a perfectly flat face is burning on the positive carbon. Kill the arc and regrip the same positive carbon so that only about an inch or so protrudes from the jaw, being careful not to turn the carbon as you regrip it.

Strike the arc again and make no adjustments. If the face of the positive carbon still burns perfectly flat after a minute or so of operation, the positive carbon is in alignment.

If, however, the face of the positive carbon burns off at an angle, the positive carbon is out of alignment.

In the case of lamps without V rests, this condition may occur if the carbon is warped and be present in a different form with each trim of carbons used.

Correction: There is no permanent correction for this condition, but the jaws of each lamp should be inspected for pitting or burrs which might cause the positive carbon to protrude from the jaw at an angle.

In the case of lamps with V-rests and floating positive carbon jaws, the presence of such a misalignment would indicate that the wrong size of carbon was being used in the V-rest, or that the V-rest had been burned or damaged.

4th—If none of the preceding alignments are found, the condition may be as pictured in Figure 11.

This is a condition in which the entire lamphouse is parallel to the axis, but off to one side of the axis, causing points 1 and 2 to be out of line.

This condition is often encountered with old-style bases designed to permit moving over the lamphouse for slide projection; and it is sometimes encountered with universal bases.

To correct, loosen the lock screws and move the entire assembly toward you as you stand on the operating side of the projector and at the same time adjust the lateral adjustments of the reflector.

If this makes the condition appear worse at point of indication, reverse the process by moving the entire assembly away from you and at the same time adjust the lateral movement of the reflector as before.

Move the assembly a little at a time to avoid going past the proper point. If you should go too far and pass the proper point, the color areas will appear at the opposite side of the image at the point of indication.

When you have obtained a clear field on the image of the reflector at the point of indication, tighten all locking screws

A New Star Over America

THIS is the new All-Navy "E" burgee. With its added star, it signifies that, for a period of over six months, production of Navy material has been apace of schedule. First flown in America over the Bausch & Lomb plant, it is official Navy recognition to B&L workers of their continued achievement in Production for Victory. It replaces the Bureau of Ordnance flag and "E" pennant awarded Bausch & Lomb July 25, 1941.

The Navy "E" has always been an honor to be striven for, to be guarded jealously. On gun turret, battleship funnel, or the flagstaff of an industrial plant, it is a symbol of championship performance. But today, Navy officials—and the American public—are anxious to see this award in as many places as possible. Because "championship performance" is what America needs today—all down the line.

Workmen at Bausch & Lomb are devoting to the specific implements of war, the experience and skills gained in the production of scientific optical instruments. Today the world depends on America's men-behind-the-men-behind-the-guns to destroy the forces of agression—that the ideals of individual freedom may survive.

which may have been loosened, and make the following check-up:

FINAL CHECK-UP

Be sure the pinhole plate is still correctly centered with the lens by changing the focus of the lens again until the light reflected from the rear element forms the smallest possible spot of light on the pinhole plate. (Be sure this spot of light falls exactly over the hole in the plate.)

Return the lens to its original position to obtain correct focus for projection.

Focus the reflector from long focus to short focus and observe the results at the point of indication.

The bands of color should appear from the outer diameter of the image and be of equal width at all points. For example, let us assume that we begin with a focus so long that the entire image is blue from center hole to outer diameter. As we shorten the focus, the entire image would increase in intensity, and white would begin to appear around the center hole of the image.

Continuing to shorten the focus would result in this disc of white increasing in diameter until it covered the entire image, and all parts of the disc of white would reach the outer diameter simultaneously. At this point we would have correct focus and alignment.

If we should continue to shorten the focus, a yellow band would appear at the outer diameter and a continuing focal reduction would cause this band to widen until all of its diameter approached the center hole and the entire image would be dark yellow.

The final test of exact alignment is the fact that these bands of color are of equal width at all points and reach the outer diameter or center hole simultaneously at all points.

If the bands of color appear on one side before they appear on the other, or one part of the band reaches the center hole or outer diameter before the entire band has reached this point, a slight misalignment is indicated and should be checked by one of the methods described. The final adjustment should be made very carefully, for it requires only the slightest movement to make the correction.

A condition which is sometimes encountered is shown as it appears at the point of indication in Figure 12. This condition can*not* be corrected by optical alignment corrections as it indicates inaccuracy in the curvature of the reflector. With this condition, the areas of distortion will still be plainly seen even after perfect focus and alignment are accomplished. The only solution to this problem is to replace the defective reflector and, for the time being, clear the field as completely as possible by the methods described.

MAKING A LUMINOUS SCREEN FRAME

The surfaces here suggested should be of a very light grey color. A certain amount of experimentation may be necessary to hit on the intensity of the shade. It may also prove desirable to paint certain portions lighter or darker than others; if too much light appears on any portion, it can be painted darker, and vice versa. Any surface at the top or bottom of the treatment, at right angles or at any other angle to the face of the screen, should be subdued so as not to receive or reflect any but the slightest amount of light from the projector or auditorium sources.

The screen curtain should be used only at the ending of the day's run for protecting the screen, or for effect purposes between pictures. During the picture projection period it should be concealed as shown to avoid distracting light reflections from its surfaces.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S

COMMENT on PROJECTION

Projection in the Army And Its Possible Effect

AMONG the letters that I have been receiving from Army camps have been quite a few indicating that even though a post may have several projectionists among its enlisted men, the chaps assigned to handle projection in the camp theatres are quite likely to be former bakers or taxi drivers. Why this should be, I wouldn't know.

F. H. R.

I am not inclined to criticize the fellows who are running our Army. They doubtless know what they are doing when they assign a certain fellow to a certain task. And since the main business of the Army is the waging of war, it is a small matter anyway. There is, however, yet another aspect of this situation, which is that men not previously getting their living from projection are being trained in that line of work, and thus are potential competitors of established projectionists after the war, should they care to adopt projection as their occupation.

I have no idea how far this has gone or may go; certainly at this stage of affairs, I am not viewing it with alarm. Of interest, however, is a letter from a projectionist who apparently has been doing a bit of observing at a camp in the Southeast, and who, as a result, has got himself a bit steamed up over this development. Here is what he has to say:

"This is my first attempt at contacting you, and this letter is not to be concerned with my equipment and personal problems. I have nothing to complain of in my present position. I like it fine.

"My equipment includes Super-Simplex, Simplex 'one-kilowatt' arc lamps, and R.C.A. sound. The manager orders parts and supplies when needed and not two months later. But all this is beside the point. I have been a projectionist for only about four years, but my dad has been at it for twenty years, so you see I was practically brought up between carbons and sprockets. I am only 18 years old but am projectionist in the 'A' house here. There is another theatre here, but it is slowly falling apart.

"Now to get to the purpose of my letter, It is about the way the U. S. Army is overrunning our trade. Mr. Richardson, do not misunderstand me. There are some fine projectionists in the Army; I am speaking of those greenhorns who are being placed in the projection rooms. Man, it is awful! Some of them had no idea what a reel looked like, let alone a projector, until they were given the job of 'running the show.' Can't something be done about the mess they are getting this trade into?

"I suppose the Army is hard pressed for projectionists, but some of our men must have been inducted into the Army! Why don't they get these jobs?

"Understand, I am not trying to stir up trouble; however, it does seem some consideration should be shown the men already in the trade. As you know, this field is overcrowded, yet the Army is teaching projection to three or four green men a month in one camp. I have heard dad talk about the ill paid jobs, and much to my sad experience I had one once. We have struggled for the past quarter of a century to bring our craft up in both standards and in salaries. When all this fighting is over we will have a rush of Army-taught projectionists trying to get our jobs, and quite likely, to get them, they will all be willing to work for less than we do.

"I know I am young, but I try to uphold the highest standards and I feel I should be paid accordingly. I will give to the best of my ability to the work and I will constantly try to improve that work, but I will give up the work altogether and let the Army lads have it before I will work for a junk shop or for a concern which takes cheap, inefficient help merely because the field is flooded. I feel certain many of our members will think the same about this and it will work to the detriment of the entire industry in the long run."

Where Should a Projectionist Be During Projection?

FROM AN exhibitor in the New England States whom I have known for several years and who has impressed me as a man recognizing the importance of high projection standards, comes the following letter, which is printed without a single alteration:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: I have read every word of your department for several years and very seldom have I found reason to disagree with your conclusions. As to your Bluebooks, they are invaluable. The industry owes to you a vote of thanks for the splendid work you have accomplished through your many years of service.

"And now I will set forth the gist of a row I am having with one of my projectionists. Incidentally, my projectionist is a member of the union. He delivers the goods as a rule, and what I complain of may never cause trouble, but—

"I have insisted that one projectionist stand at the side of his projector all the time it is in operation and I insist there is nothing important enough to call him away.

His answer is always, 'Hooey! That is not only unnecessary, but impractical!'

"I am omitting all names in this matter for what we are arguing about is an all too common practice in a large percentage of theatres and I cannot prove the statement that it has caused serious property damage, nevertheless I am confident that in some cases it has. The projectionist I write about is an admirer of yours and has agreed that if the matter be fairly submitted to your judgment, he will abide by your decision in the future. Will you not, therefore, give us your decision?"

If your projectionist is a follower of my writings, he already knows the answer. I most emphatically agree with you! A projectionist is paid to do his work, not to play cards or read magazines, file his fingernails or take a nap. Of course, in a one-man projection room it is necessary for the projectionist to perform certain duties which take him away for a time from the operating projector; however, with two men in the room his place is beside the working projector and it is dangerous to leave it. Sure, if everything is in good working order nothing should happen; but when something does happen (and anything mechanical can go haywire at any instant) the time which elapses before the trouble is noticed, plus the time required to get to the projector, may be enough to permit serious trouble.

Eucalyptus Oil on Film; Eliminating "Gear Ring"

I HAVE received this question from a projectionist: Will eucalyptus oil harm film?

Well, that all depends. Any oil soaked on to film will make, to say the least, a mess of it; however, eucalyptus oil, used properly, is not detrimental to film. For instance Walter Dunkelberger of Fargo, N. D., tells us that in the case of "wad" and emulsion "cake," a solution of a few drops of eucalyptus oil and two ounces of ammonia applied to the film with an eyebrush (which can be purloined from your wife's dressing table) will work wonders in most cases. The wax, he says, is cut by the ammonia while the oil lubricates the film. Be sure to shake the solution well before using, and use sparingly.

Brother Dunkelberger goes on to say, "The draft has taken some of our men and we have all been doubling up to do our bit. Besides that I have been appointed 'officer in charge of moral units' for our county O.C.D. Whipping theatre, ballroom and recreation managers and staffs into line is no pipe, especially when you have worked or are working for these same individuals, and I feel a bit the worse for wear (as no doubt do they).

"Our setup is coming along nicely and we are getting a lot of publicity for our efforts in the O.C.D. and our co-operation with the national war effort in running propaganda shorts. Of course this all creates good-will, and tell me, what entertainment enterprise can't use all of that they can get. The only trouble encountered, really, is the number of hours in a day.

"By the way, when you want to eliminate 'gear ring' on the W.E.-206 system, try the following:

"Drill three holes in the gear faces half way from the center to the edge, and equidistant, then fill the lower portion (faces) with lead. Machine surfaces smooth and level."

Thanks for the "tips." We are all doing a bit more these days than we normally do. Somehow or other we will find the time for the work required of us and will probably be better for it.

Care of Screens in War-Time and All-Time

WE ALL realize by this time how essential it is to care for all equipment to the very best of our ability in order that we may give the best possible presentation to patrons and avoid breakdowns. But there is one item of equipment which has been so habitually neglected that we rather expect it to get less than its due attention even while we are concentrating on conservation. This item is the screen.

You all know that dirt on a screen shortens its life as well as reduces the brilliancy and definition of the picture, at the same time impairing sound quality and volume. Not less than once a month the dust should be freed from the perforations. This can be done by tapping the lower border of the screen hard enough to set up a vibration, which will help loosen the dirt.

Every month brush off any free dust collected on the face of the screen. A soft, long haired screen brush is best for the purpose, but be very careful not to rub (just brush) the screen as any pressure will leave a mark. A vacuum cleaner may be used to good advantage on the back of the screen, but it is very dangerous for use on the front because the nozzle may leave a mark should it touch the surface.

It is essential that free air be circulated through the screen. If the baffles of the horns or any other object at the back be too close to the screen, the air will become blocked and uneven deterioration will ensue. Any dead air will cause damage.

Make sure nothing comes in contact with the front of the screen.

Safe Cleaning of All-Metal Reflectors

I SEEM to be getting a large portion of my mail these days from very young projectionists and from men who have gone into the service (what is the matter with you old bucks?). Here's a letter signed Bill Goodman, a youngster from the land of the sun flower. He says he likes his metal reflectors, but he is afraid he is not cleaning them properly and wants some help as to the best way to do the job.

It is not necessary, according to the manufacturer, to remove an all-metal reflector in order to clean it thoroughly. It is readily cleaned while either hot or cold. But it is important to clean it with proper cleaning compounds. The manufacturer recommends powdered Bon-Ami because it is non-inflammable, doesn't scratch and is inexpensive. It is dangerous to use compounds of unknown ingredients.

Before the actual cleaning dust lightly with a clean dry cloth so as to remove the carbon dust and any other particles of loose material from the reflector face. Then sprinkle the cleaner on a clean wet rag and rub until a paste is formed. Apply to the entire surface and let dry before removing with a clean dry cloth.

Of course if this is applied while the reflector is hot, no waiting will be necessary, since it will dry immediately—and do not be afraid of applying a wet cloth to the hot surface. It will not damage it.

Mounting Soundhead On a 1916 Model Projector

WILLIAM E. GOEWER, Elmhurst, Ill., projectionist, has come forward with a nut he wants cracked. He writes:

"You are receiving this letter from a chap that has been reading your columns for a long, long time, but who has never quite got around to writing to you. Now that the pen is full, the paper here and the inclination ditto, I should like to ask you what may seem to be a simple question; but alas, people to whom I have gone with this same question give me assorted answers.

"Can a soundhead be mounted in a vertical position?

"Now before you wonder why in tarnation anyone would want to mount a soundhead in a vertical position, let me explain. I have in the basement of my home a Motiograph model 1-A projector which was made in 1916. It is today a very quiet and smooth-running machine. The machine was used but a very short time and then discarded when sound was introduced. Now the physical characteristics of the projector head are such that no soundhead can be mounted in the usual position in front of the sprocket. However, by mounting it in a vertical position in front of the lower sprocket I can get synchronization at 19½ frames. Will you give me your opinion on this subject?"

Well brother Goewer, I'll say your question is an original one, so far as I am concerned, and I've had about every conceivable question fired at me. You have given me very little to work on and it is not just clear in my mind what you have done.

I don't just recollect the details of the design of a 1916 Motiograph, but in any case there has been such advancement in projector design generally since then that I can see no reason for going to the trouble to adapt a soundhead to a 1916 model.

The vertical position apparently accounts for your achieving synchronization at a distance of only 19½ frames, instead of the standard 24. But how have you managed to thread the film workably, providing proper loop and passage through the scanner? I guess you should have drawn a diagram. As for my opinion, it can be given by asking the question, why bother?

But maybe some of you other chaps have an opinion to offer.

The Need for Engineers' Training in Projection

A QUESTION which is almost as old as the motion picture industry itself, but ever new, comes in this letter:

"Please tell me what is your opinion concerning the need of technically trained projection engineers. For several years I was an assistant projectionist, then I finally worked up to be real honest-to-gosh projectionist in a very fine theatre. After that I enrolled in the electrical engineering department at the Iowa State College. I have always thoroughly enjoyed this sort of work and now I propose to take a year's work in light and the optical system of the motion picture projector, stereopticon, theatre lighting and anything else I can get my teeth into under the direction of the physics and electrical engineering department.

"What I wish to know is: Do you think that the industry still needs men with the education which I have outlined? Do you think it would pay me to go ahead and follow these plans?

"Personally, I believe that the day is practically gone when any fellow with a pair of pliers and a screwdriver can be allowed to ruin the eyes of the public and wreck a good installation because of lack of knowledge."

It is my opinion that there is a greater need than ever for technically trained men in projection. When we consider this industry's tremendously rapid growth, the artistic quality of its product is rather a matter for wonderment than for criticism. Yet, as an industry, we appear willing to waste materials and electric energy through misuse of projection equipment. I am sorry to say that even today the average exhibitor feels the projection of his show calls only for the ability to obtain and maintain a good light to thread the projector, and to "operate" it without considering the skill necessary to do this at the lowest cost for power and replacements.

An All Too Common Attitude

In a hazy sort of way the average exhibitor knows that the costly projectors, motor-generators and other equipment will not last as long as they should in the hands of a man who lacks thorough knowledge; he does not translate, however, vague ideas into dollars and cents. The wage he pays each week he can actually see. Loss due to inefficiency is not so immediately discernible. And so all friend exhibitor does is to kick like a bull when compelled to replace costly equipment which has been ruined by his "cheap" men long before it should have shown signs of appreciable wear.

Possibly he sees his competitor with a better picture on his screen than he has. He rushes to his own place and examines everything that could possibly be responsible—except the one thing which is: his "operator."

But I have faith to believe that in time all this will be changed. There already has been a great change. It will continue. With the many books on the market to be read and studied, with the many examples placed before them of disaster through ignorance, gradually all managers and exhibitors will educate themselves to the point where they will understand that they must have educated projectionists.

Union Education Beginning

Some unions are now helping in the education of its men. They have a long way to go, but a beginning has been made. Some of them are still making no effort to pick men who have ability and a love of their work, but gradually they are coming to look into the future and to realize that nothing cheap and easy can get by forever. The public will not stand for shoddiness and the better managers and exhibitors are crying for unions to furnish better men.

But for some reason utterly beyond me, there are exhibitors who will pay almost any rental price demanded for a picture, then be quite content to trust its reproduction to almost anyone who will work cheaply enough.

In spite of the attitude in some quarters, I believe technical courses, plus energy and stick-to-itiveness, can earn a just reward in projection. In money—and in less tangible but also important considerations.

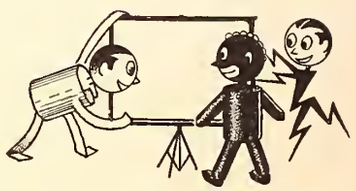
THE 3 C'S GO TO WAR!

How you can cut down on their use and still get good light projection!

The 3 C's—Copper, Carbon, and Current—are mighty essential to Uncle Sam, yet they are important for morale building movies, too.

You can help the war program by reducing your use of the 3 C's, and you can do it without impairing your projection results. How? By taking these three steps—



1. PUT YOUR EQUIPMENT IN SHAPE!

Have your projector lamps and power equipment inspected by a competent technician and placed in the best possible operating condition. This will help to secure the maximum amount of light from the current consumed, and help to conserve materials by preventing unnecessary wear.

2. RCA MAGICOTE YOUR LENSES!

Lenses treated the RCA Magicote way are extra efficient. They pass more light, yet keep it under better control. The result—a brighter, snappier picture.

3. INSTALL NEW RCA SNOWHITE SCREEN!

Buy and install a new RCA Snowhite Screen, so that the most efficient use is made of the projected light. The RCA Snowhite Screen has many unique properties that increase the effectiveness of the light and give you better projection results.

Take all three steps and you can materially reduce your use of Copper, Carbon, and Current without sacrificing the effective projection light you need. See your RCA Theatre Supply Dealer or your nearest RCA Service Representative. Or write RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Camden, New Jersey.

"20th Century-Fox has really reached into the heavens for this one. They scooped up all the stars and put them on the same screen . . . Selling the Movies

AN INEVITABLE approbation from able showmen will greet Mr. Joseph Bernhard's urging of a policy aimed at stimulating the public to "go to the movies instead of a movie . . . " This was urged upon a staff convention as a subject of cooperation between the distribution organization and exhibitors.

The fact is that there has been no consistent effort in behalf of the whole of the motion picture as a medium of entertainment since the early years of the feature picture era, when such concerns as Famous Players Film Company and Triangle Film Corporation were asking a new public of greater buying power to realize that the screen had escaped from the nickelodeon and taken a place alongside the stage.

There have been some sporadic efforts. There was once a "Greater Movie Season" and there was that ill-fated "Movie Quiz" national lottery contest by which the industry sought to overcome the adverse influences of such invasions as Bingo and Bank Night. "Movie Quiz" was a notable failure—garnering ill will, if any. One difficulty with the "Quiz" was that it sold cash prizes, not pictures.

The motion picture industry in general has taken the public's attention to the medium for granted, and the while has devoted all effort to competition for sharing in the over-all gross. Among the consequences of that have been the provocations for all manner of litigations and much adverse publicity. To the consumer public a very large part of the news of the motion picture has been the news of internal controversy.

JUST now it appears that the motion picture industry, including most conspicuously the theatres, is doing a goodwill job for itself of considerable importance in the cooperations with the war effort, especially in the furtherance of the sales of bonds and stamps. Exhibitors in a number of diverse situations have observed manifestations of a new sort of friendliness on the part of patrons impressed by the patriotic activities of their community theatre.

In the war effort every theatre has access to an all-important and vastly dramatic common cause. It now requires no inventiveness in quest of a theme and provocation for institutional expression reaching beyond the direct bid for patronage from the marquee. Every theatre has a chance for a more intimate relation to its public and its region. The national cause is a cause of every community, and in every community is a theatre which can make itself a center, a place of welcome, cheer and enthusiasm.

Meanwhile, the basic function of the theatre is as a place of entertainment, and shall be so long as this is America. Now in war, as in peace, the theatre is obligated to remain a place of invitation, elegance and comfort, a place of happiness, escape if you please, escape from the hell of war abroad and tedium and travail at home.

The theatre is a place not of preachment but of participation. It is ever the servant of the people's will, never a dictator, never an instrument which says "you must" and at its loudest can say "we shall".

That, too, must be safeguarded. The motion picture theatre will be a place of American democracy, as long as there is one.

And now to return to Mr. Bernhard's plea—the motion picture theatre will continue in service and prosperity so long as motion pictures succeed—"the movies", not just "a movie".

ADVERTISING and COSTS

SIGNIFICANT evaluation of the services of trade and technical journals in the fields of industry is presented in an official Washington pamphlet discussing the status of advertising costs under government contracts. In substance it is held that general advertising is an inadmissible item on the reasoning that "advertising is not required to do business with the government. However, certain kinds of advertising of an industrial or institutional character, placed in trade or technical journals, not primarily with the object of selling particular products but essentially for the purpose of offering financial support to such . . . journals, because they are of value for the dissemination of trade and technical information for the industry, are not really an advertising expense to effect sales so much as an operating expense incurred as a matter of policy for the benefits of the business and the industry. . . . "

IN EDUCATION

HERE at hand is the season's biggest product announcement, a matter of 310 pages, all about pictures and the like of which this industry never saw. It is the eleventh annual catalogue of the Film Exchange of the Department of Education of the State of Ohio, under the imprimatur of Mr. Kenneth C. Ray, director of education, and compiled by Mr. B. A. Aughinbaugh, supervisor of film affairs. Mr. Aughinbaugh was among the earliest, if not the earliest, of educators to recognize the classroom capacities of the motion picture, and to do something about it.

The long and consistent development of the use of the motion picture by the educators of Ohio is of particular interest in the light of today's swift expansion of the services of the film. And in this very hour of writing the War Production Board in Washington is sitting with representatives of the entertainment screen to consider a rationing of film, so much of which must now go to the machinery of war.

Meanwhile that educational operation out in Ohio affords some startling comparisons in scale of operation as compared with our amusement field. The Ohio Exchange handles more films each day than the total operation of the ten theatrical exchanges do in a week. There are four times as many sound picture equipments in the schools as there are theatres in the state.

THIS WEEK IN THE NEWS

How to Sell 'Em

HOW the 1942-43 product will be sold by the five consenting distributors was still largely anyone's guess at mid-week. The "blocks-of-13" selling plan proposed by the United Motion Picture Industry conferences as a substitute for the Consent Decree's blocks-of-five provision which expired June 1st still had not been adopted officially.

The unity plan remained before the Department of Justice. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold indicated that his anti-trust division would not take any action on the plan one way or another until he had seen Attorney General Francis Biddle. Mr. Biddle was busy prosecuting the eight Nazi submarine spies. This raised the possibility that the plan might not be submitted to Judge Henry Goddard in Federal district court at New York for approval before the new season starts on September 1st.

Judge Goddard leaves on his vacation August 1st. This makes it distinctly possible that the plan may not be formally included in the decree. Mr. Arnold was reported to have pointed out that under the "escape clause" the Big Five might sell under any plan they desire. Unity leaders, however, still were hopeful that their formula, which calls for five pictures to be trade-shown, seven to be identified in each block, would be officially adopted.

Sales staffs meanwhile were busy cleaning up contracts for the current season. They also were at work selling specials for next season.

MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO have announced trade showings of next season's pictures. Warners has listed 10 pictures "for next season." Paramount remains silent about its plans.

Out of Bankruptcy

WILLIAM FOX, founder of the Fox Film Corporation, predecessor to Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, this week was discharged from bankruptcy by Allen B. Endicott, Jr., Federal referee, in Atlantic City, N. J. Although free of his bankruptcy obligations, Mr. Fox still awaits a decision on his appeal from a sentence of one year and a day meted out to him by a Federal court jury after he pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy arising out of the bankruptcy. He is at liberty under bail pending the decision.

He first filed a petition in bankruptcy in 1936 listing liabilities of $9,935,261 and assets of $100. Filing of these papers started a rush of claims. These totaled $55,000,000, many arising from the disputed ownership of the All Continent Corporation, which was licensed in the names of his wife, Eva, and their two daughters, Mona and Belle. A settlement of most of the claims was effected last September with creditors accepting $895,000.

Meanwhile, Morgan S. Kaufman, former attorney for Mr. Fox, and a former referee in bankruptcy, has been declared guilty of "grossly unprofessional conduct" by three special masters appointed by the U. S. district court in Philadelphia. They recommended that the Federal courts discipline him, charging that he was the go-between in the "loan" of $10,000 made by Mr. Fox to John Stokely, son-in-law of Federal Judge J. Warren Davis, who had been accused with Mr. Kaufman in two Federal trials.

Out Again, in Again

IT WAS one of the swiftest out and in again crises in the industry's long history of top personnel changes.

William F. Rodgers, vice-president and general sales manager of Loew's, Inc., had resigned, it was reported on Thursday. In a letter to Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Mr. Rodgers had asked to be relieved of his duties on September 1st. It ended an 18-year association during which Mr. Rodgers had risen to the top of the sales field as salesman for Loew and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product. He had been named a vice-president only a few months before.

His future plans were the prime subject of speculation among all ranks of the industry on Thursday and Friday. He was variously reported by "authentic" rumor as headed for the top position at RKO, United Artists, and an unnamed, undefined "new company." Members of UMPI wondered what would happen to the unity conferences which he had guided as chairman.

Friday night Mr. Schenck announced that Mr. Rodgers and Loew's had concluded an agreement whereby his present contract as general manager of sales would be continued "for an additional period of years." Mr. Schenck added, "I hope and expect Mr. Rodgers will continue indefinitely with this organization with which he has been so successfully associated for 18 years."

In the Army Now

THANKS to the motion picture the U.S. Army today can train its soldiers in 40 per cent less time than it took to teach their fathers in 1917. Colonel Melvin E. Gillette, commanding officer of the Army Signal Corps photographic center, speaking before the Sales Executives Club in New York this week, disclosed that where motion pictures are used to instruct soldiers the training period is reduced "upwards of 40 per cent." Although the Army is sold on the value of visual education, training films only supplement the drill field, manuals and text books. They do not replace them, he said.

More than a Billion

MORE than a billion dollars in receipts was reported for 1940 by 4,425 active motion picture theatre corporations, 2,353 of which paid income and excess profits taxes of $12,600,000, it was disclosed Tuesday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Income returns for the year were filed by 4,636 film corporations, the Department explained, but 211 of them were inactive during the year and 2,072 others, although they had total compiled receipts of $194,392,000 and paid dividends in cash and assets other than their own stock of $329,000, had an aggregate deficit of $10,397,000.

The 2,353 corporations which operated "in the black" from the standpoint of the Treasury, had total compiled receipts of $810,375,000 and net income of $78,983,000 on which they paid income taxes of $12,525,000 and excess profits taxes of $74,000. The dividends paid by these companies amounted to $37,336,000.

Included in the income of the reporting corporations was $16,782,000 received as dividends from other domestic corporations and $184,000 received as interest on Government obligations. The tax-paying corporations received $16,672,000 of the dividends and $177,000 of the interest, of which $34,000 was subject to excess profits tax and $143,000 wholly tax-exempt; the deficit companies received $110,000 in dividends and $7,000 in interest, all tax exempt.

"Under the stimulus of larger public spending power, earnings of the moving picture companies are climbing back to the best levels in recent years," the Wall Street Journal said Tuesday in a survey of the industry. The financial newspaper said that in spite of higher taxes, earnings of most film companies this year probably will be as good as or better than a year ago. (Wall Street investors are definitely bullish on film stocks—see page 12.)

Alien Patents

GERMAN-OWNED patents in the radio and television field formed a large part of the more than 1,500 patents taken over this week by the U. S. Alien Property Custodian, Leo T. Crowley.

Rapidly making a cleanup of enemy-owned interests in this country, Mr. Crowley said that patent monopolies and industrial units painstakingly built up in this country since the last war were being taken over and put under American ownership and management in large numbers. Many affect communication and entertainment.

Also Mr. Crowley officially confirmed that Ufa, Inc., American distributor of German films, was among seized German properties. Last April 4th MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported that Mr. Crowley's agents had seized the company's Rockefeller Center offices, discharged employees and sold fixtures and furniture. Its films were placed in warehouses and books turned over to the Treasury Department for an investigation of the Nazi film agency's operations. Previously MOTION PICTURE HERALD had disclosed direct connections among Ufa, its now interned president, George Nitze, and official Nazi screen propaganda agencies.

Cohans and the Fays

GEORGE M. COHAN will be honored next Monday in his home town, Providence. The Town Criers of Rhode Island Committee to Honor George M. Cohan that day will place a plaque on the house at 536 Wickenden Street, in which he was born and which is still owned by a relative, Mrs. Mary A. O'Hern, 78, a cousin of Nellie Cohan, the actor's mother.

The committee chairman is former Mayor Joseph H. Gainer. A member is Ed Fay, Providence theatre owner.

Coincidentally, Warners' "Yankee Doodle Dandy" opens at Mr. Fay's Majestic theatre in that city next Friday.

The committee advertised the picture's advent in last Sunday's Providence Journal.

Time on the March

ABSENT from RKO's sales convention in New York this week, and from that company's 1942-43 release schedule, was the March of Time, distributed by RKO for six years. It was reported at mid-week that the magazine newsreel, sponsored by Henry Luce's Time, was preparing to march henceforth under the 20th-Fox banner.

The subject had its first release on February 1, 1935, and distribution by RKO began in 1936 after its sponsors had attempted independent sales and distribution.

Less Sound and Fury

SOUND trailers—those with music but no dialogue—are being discontinued for the duration of the war. The move, effective September 1st, is said to be one of conservation. Trailers will be restricted to actual picture scenes.

It is understood an agreement has been reached on maximum footage for trailers, 180 feet maximum for Class A product, 150 for Class B pictures and 125 for westerns.

National Screen Service this week discontinued its sound trailer department.

Even Lady Hollywood loses

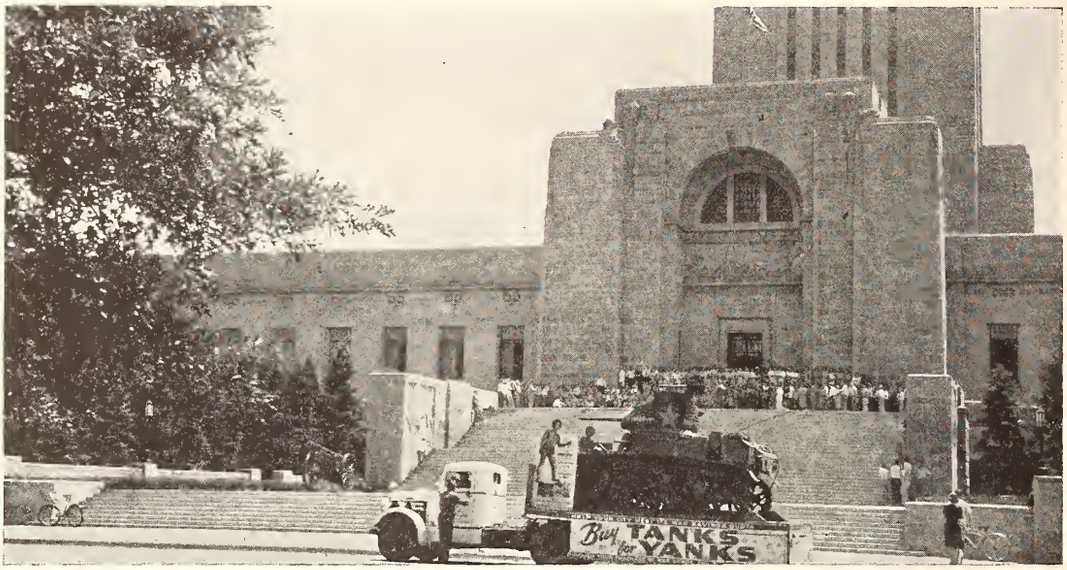
Under the head of "Product Shortage" MOTION PICTURE HERALD, of July 18, editorially discussed some of the peculiar, adverse and inhibitive effects of the current distribution system, emphasizing the limited availability of product and pointing to conditions which prevent complete realization of box office values. This piece arrested the attention of R. B. Wilby of Atlanta, a leader in exhibition and an aggressive authority on trade practises. In a letter to the editor Mr. Wilby says:

"I was very much interested in that piece headed 'Product Shortage.'

"When your exhibitor does not get the product of companies B, D, E, and G, not only do those companies get no revenue from that town but motion pictures as a whole get a smaller revenue. That is obviously true because the exhibitor quite naturally pays less for the small pictures from companies A, C and F than he would pay for the best ones from the first four. Doing less business with the small ones from the first group, the use of them rather than the better attractions from the second group results in a net loss to the industry as a whole, including even Miss Hollywood.

"Much more importantly, however, it takes away from the residents of that community, as it does from thousands of other one-theatre communities in America, the opportunity to see those better attractions made by B, D, E, and G, and thereby brings about a considerable public resentment against the policy and therefor the local exhibitor and the business as a whole.

"Pursuing the thought a little further, your villager could secure additional top pictures from B, D, E, or G by going double feature, thereby having a greater outlet and perhaps adding B, or even B and D to those which he can use. Hence, the exhibitor is forced into a double feature policy, which he does not want, in order to get a few more good pictures which he wants so badly. Then perhaps Miss Hollywood gets hers back but much of the public resentment and some of the economic loss remains.



"As someone said in a talk before the Southeastern Exhibitors Association recently:

"'The producers of films may holler themselves black in the face but the fact still remains that the man who is selling the product has less trouble selling it where a theatre uses two pictures on a program than where it uses only one, so the distributors will seek in every way possible to foster any system which makes it easier to sell product which could not be sold on its own merits.'

"The very heart of these exhibitors' objections to the new sales plan was that it made somewhat easier the forcing of undesirable pictures upon the small exhibitor as a part of the price of securing product which he wished to run, and at the same time kept out of his theatre other equally desirable pictures because of his inability to pay not the dollar but the undesirable picture part of the price."

WALL STREET BULLISH ON MOTION PICTURE STOCKS

Boom brings Prices Up to Highest Level of Year; Industry Position Strong

by THE ANALYST

Wall Street is "going to the movies" in a big way.

Apparently convinced by the increasing jingle of box office cash registers and the rising line on motion picture earnings charts that the silver screen is, and will continue to be, a war-tense public's major form of relaxation, the bankers and brokers and the speculators and investors are definitely bullish on the industry.

Some even look beyond the recognized war function of the motion picture as a morale builder and say that any possible decline in domestic business with the return of peace would be offset by a revival of foreign markets.

The result is that many film stocks once considered too volatile for anything but a speculative flier now are crowding out old "blue chip" steels, motors, rails and utilities as a favorite medium for investment.

Moreover, the current boomlet in motion picture shares on the stock exchange, which continued this week to lift their prices to the highest levels of the year, is Wall Street's recognition of the fact that the industry now is in the strongest financial position of its history.

Wall Street Impressed By Quality of Films

Banks and insurance companies like the way in which the picture business has put its financial house in order during the last few years by paying off debts and building up cash reserves. Film companies are having no trouble these days in refunding obligations falling due over the next few years and replacing them with long-term debt at interest costs as low as those paid by other industries.

The financial community is impressed, too, by the high quality of recent films. Particularly favorable comment has been made about such productions as MGM's "Mrs. Miniver" and Warner's "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and it is said that any raw material shortages that may develop from the war could be offset largely by concentration of production on films of higher calibre, with resultant longer runs.

Position Favorable On Taxes, Priorities

The industry is considered in a favorable position as to taxes and war-time priorities and price-fixing. Most film companies, it is pointed out, should enjoy large excess profits tax exemptions because of their big investments in theatres and studio properties. No major restrictions or priorities are expected to be placed on the industry because of its influence on public morale and recognition of the part it is playing in the war effort through sustained output despite considerable loss of talent and manpower to the armed services.

The industry's ability to translate higher gross earnings into bigger net profit, despite higher costs of labor and material also has made an impression in financial circles, particularly the comeback staged by picture companies which suffered a sharp decline in profits when the war's outbreak cut off foreign revenues.

The Wall Street Journal, in a survey of the industry published on July 28th, said:

"Under stimulus of larger public spending power, earnings of moving picture companies are climbing back to the best levels in recent years. In spite of higher taxes, earnings of most companies this year probably will be as good or better than a year ago.

"So far, gas and tire shortages appear to be helping rather than hurting attendance in larger cities, where the bulk of theatre profits is earned. Business, especially in the east, has been better than usual in the warm summer months.

"Automobile driving has not as yet been curtailed greatly in the middle west and the west since cities in these areas do not have as many transportation facilities as eastern cities and are more spread out, it is possible attendance there may be hurt by country-wide gasoline rationing, if it materializes.

"Strong efforts are being made by the industry to persuade the British government to release the large sums in blocked profits now held in Great Britain running well in excess of $35,000,000. It is probable the greater part of these funds will be released within the next year or sooner. Lend-lease arrangements have relieved the strain on British sterling exchange."

Cite Rise in Admission Tax Collections

Other circles, commenting on the increased spending power of a public working at the highest industrial production rate in the country's history, because of the war, say that while there is more money to spend there are less civilian goods to spend it on and a good portion of the surplus is bound to find its way into box offices. Travel restrictions, also, are keeping many vacationers at home and increasing the takes at neighborhood theatres.

Federal admission tax collections in June were nearly double those of the corresponding month last year, being reported by the Internal Revenue Bureau at $11,550,144, against $11,803,922 in May and $5,880,649 in June, 1941.

Mr. Bernhard's talk to the delegates was made by long distance telephone from Washington where he was detained at a conference with the War Production Board.

Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, presided at the two-day meeting at the William Penn Hotel. He told the salesmen that more personalized service to exhibitors would be necessary as a result of the dislocations caused by the war effort and said the company was prepared to meet the situation.

Mort Blumenstock, advertising and publicity director in the east, discussed the company's press relations.

Mid-Atlantic and central district winners in the recently concluded national sales drive were announced as follows: Harry Seed, Central district manager, second place; Robert Smeltzer, mid-Atlantic district manager, third place. MGM District Meetings Held on Policy

PRC May Change Name to Pathe

There is a possibility that the Pathe name will replace that of Producers Releasing Corporation, George J. Bonwick, vice-president and treasurer of Pathe and treasurer of PRC, said at the regional meeting at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, last week. "Just when this will happen I can not say at this time but we have been thinking about it," he said.

O. Henry Briggs, PRC president, said the company was in a position to progress rapidly in the next two years and promised that if the sales department showed a comparable increase in business with the new season's product, based on higher budgets and production costs, with the increase of last year, the quality of next year's product would be scaled even higher.

It was decided at the Chicago meeting that two pictures each season would receive extra exploitation and increased advertising. The two selected for special attention this year are "Jungle Siren" with Buster Crabbe, and "The Yanks Are Coming." Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales, reported that the company's accounts were up 30 per cent.

Those in attendance were Henri Elman, George Topper, Victor Bernstein and Jack Barry, Chicago; Nat Kaplan, Donald Duff, Cincinnati; Lee Goldberg, Bernard Rubin and Jack Lawrence, Cleveland; William Flemion, Robert Snyder and Herbert Foster, Detroit; Sam Abrams and John Bohn, Indianapolis; Beverly Miller, Kansas City; James Jovaney, Cleve Adams, Milwaukee; Charles Weiner, Minneapolis; M. The company's next regional will be in Dallas, August 1-3.

OWI FILM AIM IS TO BEAT NAZIS AMONG NEUTRALS

Kastner explains United Newsreel as First Step in Counter-Propaganda

First official disclosure of the current structure and projected plans of the United States Government's propaganda film program designed for overseas consumption came this week from Lacy W. Kastner, in charge of motion picture activities in the publications division of the Overseas Branch of the Office of War Information, with headquarters in New York. The branch, which embraces press, radio and publications, is under the direction of Robert E. Sherwood. Edward Stanley heads the publications division.

In the recent setup of Elmer Davis as chief of Office of War Information, upon appointment of President Roosevelt to that post in June, all information for official dissemination outside the continental limits of the United States (except Central and South America), whether, radio, publications or motion pictures, is handled exclusively by the Overseas Branch. At present, Mr. Kastner, who was former general manager of Continental Europe for United Artists, is in charge of film activities, with Martin Quigley, Jr., as assistant. It is understood that in the near future a special division for films may be formed.

Prior to the formation of OWI, film activities outside the Western Hemisphere were part of the foreign service of Col. William J. Donovan's Office of Coordinator of Information.

In line with Elmer Davis' recent moves to discard, whenever possible, the mantle of secrecy which hitherto cloaked the activities of federal information services, Mr. Kastner this week in New York discussed the extent of participation by OWI's publications division in forming United Newsreel Corporation recently. He also disclosed plans for a short subject film program created especially for the overseas market.

Newsreels "First and Most Urgent Job"

United Newsreel was the first and most urgent job, according to Mr. Kastner, which the overseas film division achieved. United Newsreel Corporation was formed in May under the auspices of the five American newsreel companies of the parent distributors, MGM, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal. Each week it prepares a consolidated newsreel from the best footage of each of the five firms. The reels are distributed to various parts of the world through the regular channels of the individual newsreel companies. Shipment of the reels is undertaken by the U. S. Government. This week the eighth issue was completed.

The newsreels are synchronized in 14 different languages including Arabic, French, Portuguese, Turkish, Mandarin Chinese, African, German, Swedish, Finnish and the four basic languages of India.

Formation of United Newsreel, said Mr. Kastner, was based on the fact that the Government felt it was most urgent for American newsreels to get into neutral countries. He said that no American newsreel was sent into Portugal last year. In Switzerland, only 450 feet a week were released by Movietone News in 1941 and this footage was made up in Spain. In India, very little American newsreel material has been distributed.

LACY W. KASTNER

Two British reels were released weekly in Sweden. Portugal and Cairo also played British newsreels almost exclusively.

Mr. Kastner said "Our aim in forming United Newsreel Corporation was to obtain for foreign distribution the best footage of all the American newsreels, combined into weekly releases, which would offset the German product in neutral countries." He indicated some observers believed the United Newsreel issues superior to our domestic releases.

Since the outbreak of World War II in September, 1939, during the time he had toured all the capitals of Continental Europe, Mr. Kastner said he saw and studied the screen technique of the Germans, which, he said, was of superlative quality. "Sometimes," he declared, "after I came away from seeing one of those Nazi propaganda films, I was so impressed with the technical excellence of the picture that frequently I had to remember it was Hitler we were fighting.

"In my opinion, however," he asserted, "99 per cent of the exhibitors in neutral countries, Spain included, would rather play American features and American newsreels than anything else. They know their audiences are eager for news about the United States.

"Our objective in this deparment," he said, "is to offset the influence on neutral peoples which these same Nazi pictures are effecting and to show to all the peoples of the world America's war effort.

"We don't want to talk about the mistakes we have made in the past," he said. "We want to look to the future. We want to show the people abroad that America is doing everything in her power to prosecute, with her allies, the war against the Axis."

The second phase of the program as outlined by Mr. Kastner is to produce one-reel shorts for the foreign market which will "show the progress being made in the United States towards the war effort. We want to depict our American way of life. Through these films we want to show how the standard of living of the average American working man is higher than that of any worker anywhere in the world." These pictures also are to be synchronized in the 14 different languages and will be distributed abroad by the leading American companies. Transportation for these films will be undertaken by the Government.

It is understood that OWI will contract with established producers for making these shorts. The only demand made, he said, will be that the company which gets the contract must produce films of the highest quality. Firms which specialize in producing pictures which apparently suit the specific needs of OWI will be called upon, he said.

The shorts program is being designed to counteract the opinion of some nations abroad, OWI officials declared, that America is not contributing its share in the war against the Axis. "The people of neutral countries have been seeing Hollywood product. They have not seen anything which tells them what our objectives are in the war and how we are going to achieve them."

Negotiating Contracts For First Series

Queried as to the extent of the budget for the shorts production, department heads disclosed that funds had not yet been granted and that they were not prepared to give an estimated or tentative figure. It was disclosed, however, that contracts for the first series of pictures were being negotiated and would be completed as soon as the funds were made available. It also was disclosed that the division was preparing to send field representatives to certain key points throughout the world, whose duty would be to survey areas assigned to them and to report on public reaction to the newsreels and shorts offered through OWI, in addition to all American motion pictures being shown in the territories they visit. They also will make necessary recommendations and suggestions.

It was learned that through certain individuals who currently are acting in behalf of OWI abroad, requests for films have come to the overseas branch from various governments. "For example, India has asked us," Mr. Kastner said, "for cultural films and for pictures on irrigation, cotton growing, power and information in general about the American way of life, particularly the life of the American farmer. These films are very much needed in India at the present time," he said.

U. S. REPORT CITES GROWING COMPETITION IN MEXICO

Department of Commerce notes Rise of Mexican and Argentine Films

"Hollywood is being forced into the background by Mexican and Argentine productions" in Mexico's film theatres, according to a U. S. Department of Commerce report published this week in "Foreign Commerce Weekly," its official periodical.

Analyzing the general condition of the motion picture business, domestic and foreign, in Mexico, the publication declares that "Mexican producers now feel their most serious competition is from Argentina, not the United States," and explains that since the advent of talking pictures, American films, which still maintain their popularity in Mexico's large cities, "are fast being replaced" in outlying sections by that country's own product and Argentine pictures which are produced in the Spanish language.

According to Foreign Commerce Weekly, the output of Mexican producers is not adequate to meet the yearly requirement of approximately 650 films, chiefly from the United States and Argentine, which are distributed in the 800 theatres currently in operation.

Mexico's domestic industry, reports the periodical, showed marked improvement in 1941, producing 40 full length features, 12 more than in 1940. "Estimates of production costs of these films vary greatly, but it is believed that the average cost of a feature is between 125,000 and 130,000 pesos (approximately $25,600 and $26,000). The yearly gross income of the country's 800 film houses is estimated at 36,000,000 pesos (approximately $7,380,000)."

Three Main Studios Handle Output

The survey points out that the output of the industry's 27 producers is handled by three main studios which provide film laboratories, technical direction, general equipment and in some cases, financial assistance. "The Banco Cinematografico which was formed in January, 1942, to serve a group of five affiliated picture companies, now handles 60 per cent of their financing and also assists non-affiliated companies. Interest charges are high—from 12 to 15 per cent per annum; collateral is ordinarily required; and frequently the bank resorts to holding a film negative until a loan is paid. Other banks occasionally handle this type of loan, of course," adds the report.

No direct subsidies to the industry are provided by the Mexican Government, but legislation has been enacted in Mexico City requiring local theatres to show domestic films at stated intervals.

The method of import levies by which the industry is "protected," is next discussed. The duty levied on all foreign made positive films brought into Mexico includes the tax on pictures in the Spanish language, which is materially less than the tax on films in other languages. "This regulation has no doubt been helplful to Argentina in establishing a market, but it does not appear to have interfered appreciably with the sale of United States product.

"An entertainment tax, based on the capacity of the theatre, is levied by the municipality in which the theatre is located, and a Federal surtax is figured on the basis of the municipal tax. Although these taxes," says the report, "are actually levied on the exhibitor, in many cases the distributor contributes toward their payment. Distributors also pay Federal taxes of their own plus a censorship fee of five pesos per reel of film."

Adventure and Action Stories Preferred

According to the survey, Mexican theatre patrons prefer "adventure and action stories in the pictures imported from the United States, and Tarzan pictures always enjoy long runs. Comedies also are popular, and western dramas with plenty of shooting rank high, especially in the rural districts."

Referring to standards by which Mexico censors films, the report says: "Central Censorship Agency is the official reviewing board for all motion pictures shown in Mexico. Political propaganda in itself is not generally considered objectionable, but scenes, songs or situations which disparage Mexican traditions or customs, or the presentation of the country's history in an unfavorable light, may cause a film to be rejected.

"There are no restrictions against the portrayal of priests, ministers or representatives of any church," says the publication, "but obvious religious propaganda is not permitted. On the other hand, exploitation of moral entanglements is viewed leniently, and some films are even featured and widely advertised as 'improper for ladies and minors.'"

At present there is no law requiring that pictures with English subtitles be dubbed into Spanish before they are shown in Mexico, but the censors do require the superimposition of sufficient Spanish subtitles to make the story intelligible to a non-English-speaking audience.

Declaring that the film industry in Mexico is "rapidly becoming 'war-minded,'" Foreign Commerce Weekly reports that members of the Film Board of Trade now include a patriotic insignia bearing a large "V" and the words "America Libre y Unida" in all their newspaper advertisements and that the national anthem is included as part of each theatre program. In addition, film conservation, according to the publication, is receiving much attention.

"Films no longer suitable for release formerly were destroyed to save storage space, but salvage possibilities now are being studied. It has been suggested that the films either might be sold to enamel or nail-polish manufacturers or be shipped to the United States to be reclaimed for byproducts."

The periodical also touches on the increasing need for 16 mm equipment for education films, pointing out that "there is a good potential market for this type of equipment in Mexico." Many schools, churches, prisons, hospitals and other institutions which are interested in presenting educational pictures are handicapped by the lack of the necessary technical facilities. The only 16 mm projector now owned by a Government institution, according to the weekly, is the new General Hospital in Mexico City, where the equipment is being used in teaching medical and operating techniques.

BOX OFFICE RISE IN PUERTO RICO

Increased business at film theatres in Puerto Rico is reported by the U. S. Department of Commerce in the July 25th issue of Foreign Commerce Weekly. According to the publication, box office receipts for April were higher than for any April since 1932, and were almost 10 per cent greater than in April of last year. The Puerto Rican Chamber of Commerce reported that, in spite of poor business in December and January of this year, theatre figures for the 12 months ended April 30, 1942, were up 12 per cent compared with the preceding fiscal period.

Ohio Tax Collections Show Decrease

The Ohio sales tax yield for the first six months of this year amounted to $26,749,091, compared with $29,683,033 for the same period of 1941, a decrease of 9.9 per cent, according to Don H. Ebright, State Treasurer.

The revenue from admission taxes, based on three per cent of grosses and including all amusements, increased in practically the same ratio as the decrease in the sales tax, the 1942 figure being $903,674.62, against $823,415.05 for the first half of last year. A breakdown of figures covering theatres alone was not available.

WPB Order to Curb Film Use Foreseen

Officials warn Committee Further Cuts must be made in All Footage

from WASHINGTON BUREAU

Direct Government action to limit industry consumption of raw film stock may be taken soon by the War Production Board, members of the Hollywood production priorities committee were warned as they arrived in Washington Tuesday to meet with the WPB.

The possibility that the WPB shortly may be forced to issue an order drastically restricting the consumption of motion picture and still film by the industry, still photographers and amateurs was indicated by officials. They pointed out that Army demand is enormous and steadily increasing, possibly soon to exceed the capacity of the producing factories.

There were many signs that officials in charge of priorities had decided that the voluntary film conservation program already placed in operation by the industry was insufficient. Still greater slashes in the use of undeveloped negative and print stock must be made, it was said. However, no official would permit himself to be quoted. They pointed out that the meeting Tuesday and Wednesday was to seek a joint solution of the question.

A serious shortage of raw stock for commercial consumption, developing as a result of increasing military demand, was the subject of grave discussion Tuesday at the meeting of the committee cooperating with the War Production Board. Wednesday they met again with Harold Hopper, WPB official from the Consumers Branch, who is in charge of the Motion Picture Division.

Must Cut Consumption To Total Used in 1941

The industry representatives were told that they would have to cut their film consumption immediately to at least the 1941 figure, but there was a general impression that if the WPB should issue the order in mind, a much greater reduction might be required.

The committee submitted 24 additional measures of a technical nature which have been adopted to save film, and agreed to meet among themselves in the near future to work out a further program for the maximum conservation of raw stock.

The film situation was only one of a number canvassed with board experts who reported that the steel situation is still tight; that the situation with respect to lenses and vacuum tubes was more critical, and that there had been no favorable developments in rubber so far as civilian consumption was concerned.

While the greater part of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of raw stock supplies, there were some reports of progress on other conservation projects.

The proposal for a new intermittent mechanism which would reduce the amount of film necessary for a picture, advanced at the June meeting, was discussed and it was reported that some progress had been made, but that another month would be required, at least, for perfection of plans. One of the principal difficulties involved in the development of a mechanism which will run less film per minute is that of developing an interchangeable device which will handle both current and new film, thus avoiding making present films obsolete overnight.

Labor, Material Ratio Seen Widening

It was reported also that there is a considerable re-use of material in the industry, and that the former ratio of three parts of labor to one part of material has been widened to five and, in the case of at least one company, to seven parts of labor to one of material.

The discussion of the material situation brings out the information that nails, some months ago expected to become scarce, now are increasingly plentiful. Production currently is ahead of last year, and has been permitted to expand to make possible the increased use of wood instead of metal, urged by the Board.

There was some discussion of the plight of newsreel men unable to obtain new automobiles because of rationing restrictions, which do not countenance new cars or tires for cameramen. It was suggested that some 1942 model cars might be acquired from men going into military service, who would sell their machines without any red tape.

The committee is scheduled to return to Washington next month for another survey of the situation.

Among those at Washington were: Gradwell L. Sears, United Artists; Ed Mannix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; John J. O'Connor, Universal; A. Schneider, Columbia Pictures; Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures; Earl I. Sponable, Fox Movietone; R. C. Barrows, Twentieth Century-Fox; Joseph Robbins, National Screen Service; Norton Ritchie, Monogram; Ray Klune, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers; John Wolcott, March of Time, and Alan F. Cummings, Loew's, Inc.

Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity director of United Artists, it is reported, shortly will go on leave from his company in order that he may devote his full time to the Government.

It is said that Greenthal is about to become associated with one of the Government agencies in connection with war salvage work in the film industry. Such salvage work is a function of the War Production Board.

UA Product Talks Move to New York

Final decisions on the United Artists new season's program, and producer deals and other matters on which discussions have been under way in Hollywood for several weeks will be made next week at a meeting of company owner-members in New York, it was reported this week.

Sir Alexander Korda, David O. Selznick and Mary Pickford are to attend the New York meeting. Charles Chaplin, the other owner-member, is expected to send a representative.

Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of distribution, who attended the coast meetings, is due to arrive in New York Monday, while Edward C. Raftery, president, was to leave for New York early this week.

Miss Pickford left over the weekend for Corpus Christi, Tex., to see her husband, Buddy Rogers, who is in the Army, and was to proceed to New York from there.

Anti-Trust Suit Filed Against Distributors

A $360,000 damage suit was filed in U. S. district court Chicago on Tuesday against RKO, Loew's, Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Vitagraph, Inc., Warner Bros. Pictures, Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corp. and Warner Bros. Theatres, Inc. The plaintiffs, Florence B. Bigelow, Marion B. Koerber, John E. Bloom and William C. Bloom, operators of the Jackson Park theatre, Chicago, charge the defendants with conspiracy under the Sherman anti-trust laws. They contend that the runs granted theatres of the defendants are discriminatory, arbitrary and illegally discriminate against business of the plaintiffs in favor of the defendant exhibitors.

The bill asks for damages of $360,000 and an injunction under the Clayton Act enjoining defendants from enforcing the present Chicago releasing system.

Thomas M. McConnell, who recently resigned as a member of the Chicago arbitration panel and who heard three clearance cases while still a member, is the attorney for the plaintiff operators.

$14,000,000 ANNUAL CANDY SALES ARE THREATENED

Reduction in Volume and Variety seen When Present Stocks are Cut

The sweet tooth of America's motion picture audience, and the substantial revenue which many exhibitors obtain from confectionery sales face short rations for the duration.

Raw materials for candy manufacture are fast approaching the critical shortage stage and although there are sizeable inventories on hand of chocolate bars, gum drops and other confections featured in theatre vending machines and candy counters, the makers see a sharp reduction in both volume and variety as soon as these stocks are depleted. Already extensive efforts are being made to stimulate public interest in substitutes.

Dried fruits, raisins, nuts, cakes and several varieties of soy bean confection are being tried in a number of theatre situations. Their acceptance has been varied, but the circuits and concessionnaires that have tried them are hopeful that the public will accept the substitutes as supplies of chocolates and other standby sweets diminish.

Prudent exhibitors are trying out substitute confections now to find out those the public likes best and to acquaint patrons' tastes with changes to come. It would appear wise, too, to contact local jobbers and makers for forecasts on local supply.

Income from the sale of soft drinks, candy confections and other refreshments in theatres has been estimated at $14,000,000 a year by the U. S. Treasury. Other sources place the total revenue to theatres from this sideline at $16,000,000 a year, possibly more Profits from candy vending in theatres are reported high with large operations at a margin of at least 50 per cent. Many theatres, report 40 per cent or more profits on volumes ranging from $30 or $40 a week in small town and neighborhood houses to several hundred dollars a week in the big situations where as many as 25,000 admissions a week are recorded. Higher costs and scarcity are cutting deeply into these profit margins however.

Circuit Theatres Large Consumers

Evidence of the success of candy sales as a "clear" revenue producer is seen in the fact that better than two thirds of the large circuits have machines or counters in their theatres. Paramount, Fox West Coast and other big chains maintain their own buying and servicing divisions. Others, including Warners, Loew's, RKO and regional circuits have contracts with concessionaires and receive a percentage of the revenue.

An increasing number of theatres, particularly among the smaller circuits, have ended their contracts with concessionaires within recent years to take over candy operation directly. They have found that the profits more than justify the time and trouble needed to keep stocks full and check sales. They buy from local candy jobbers who feature name-brands of merchandise.

BAR VENDORS IN HALIFAX

Automatic vending machines selling candy, cigarettes and similar merchandise have been barred in Halifax, N.S., by action of the City Council. The measure was passed at the behest of local merchants. Machines have been a profitable source of revenue for many theatres in the city and the law has added to the cost of merchandising candy, cigarettes, etc., in theatres inasmuch as a counter attendant must be employed. A number of theatres are expected to drop their vending sidelines in consequence.

This growing business is now threatened by wartime shortages in at least three of the six principal ingredients for practically every type of candy bar. These basic materials are sugar, cocoa, vanilla, nuts, corn syrup and gellatin. Shipping problems have cut imports of chocolate, sugar and vanilla.

Sugar allotments to candy makers have already been cut to 70 per cent of the amount used in May and June 1941 by the Office of Price Administration. Manufacturers expect further cuts. Chocolate and cocoa bean products have also been rationed on a basis of 70 per cent of previous annual consumption and further restrictions are foreseen.

Cocoa, Flavoring Stocks Low

Imports of cocoa, the trade reports, are now less than one fifth of previous years. They estimate that under stringent rationing the available stocks will last about one year. Vanilla, gum arabic and other imported extracts are also vanishing. Makers will get no more, and the output of synthetics is limited. Present supplies will last about ten months.

Cocoanut oils, also used in candy making, are no longer imported. The Philippines were the principal source of supply. Shredded cocoanut and cocoanut candy bars will be just a memory when the present stock is eaten.

The 1,200 makers of candy are busy trying to work out ersatz recipes and candy bars that will use a minimum of scarce supplies yet appeal to buyers. There is no substitute for chocolate. Chemists can make an ersatz version, but they admit it is not on a par with the real thing.

Chocolate coatings consequently will become thinner, solid chocolate bars are likely to vanish, and there will be an increasing use of caramels, gum drops, hard centers, nuts and other commodities that can be made from homegrown materials. Corn syrup and dextrose is replacing much sugar.

Packaging is also a candy problem affecting theatre sales, where the majority of items are five cent bars. Cellophane was barred as a candy wrapper by the OPA on June 8th. Transparent packages have been an important visual appeal to theatre patrons.

Tinfoil and aluminum foil have already disappeared from most wrappers, requiring more careful storage of candy and the more careful protection of merchandise from oils, odors, or dirt.

Vending Machine Manufacture Stopped

Vending machines, used largely in theatres, particularly those in the 2,500 to 5,000 admissions a week class where volume is not ordinarily large enough to support a counter may no longer be manufactured. Replacement parts are obtainable, but likely to grow scarce soon.

The automatic vending machine makers, and large concessionaires, are now reconditioning machines which were replaced by newer models and removed from theatres. Charles O'Reilly, head of the Sanitary Candy Corporation at New York, one of the largest of the concessionaires, said that his company was fortunate in having several hundred of these machines, as well as some new ones, in storage to take care of needs for the next year or more. He also said that the company had a large stock of candy on hand and affiliations with a manufacturer which would enable continued service to Warner, RKO, Fox and other circuits where he operates concessions.

Paramount's candy department, headed by Max Schosburg, also reported that it had supplies on hand for the immediate future. Mr. Schosburg said the department was also testing public response to packages of salted nuts, brittle, fruits and soy beans. The soy beans have been tried with some success in several theatres, it was said. Their installation has been accompanied with display material calling attention to their high nutritive value.

Popcorn Supply Seen Holding

Of all the theatre vending lines popcorn appears least likely to suffer. Although new machines are generally unavailable there are plentiful supplies of homegrown corn, butter and salt. The machines are popular in many small town operations, particularly through the South and Middle West.

Cola drinks and other bottled or fountain soft drinks using syrup and sugar bases are also subject to rations. Growing interest by theatremen in the revenue possibility of soft drink bars or fountains in their theatres has been generally thwarted. They can obtain neither the materials to construct the lounges, nor the drinks to serve in them.

Prices of candy have been frozen by the OPA at March levels, but manufacturers are appealing the ruling on the basis of increased material and construction costs. An increase may be granted. Also bars are growing smaller, and lighter. Machines will be able to handle them however.

Sees Studios Eager to tell Soviet Story

Nicola Napoli, Artkino Head, says Only 3 Pictures are Under Way

That Hollywod producers have shown "enthusiasm" for picture ideas based on the defense of the Soviet Army and the Russian people against Hitler's invasion, was observed this week by Nicola Napoli, president of Artkino Pictures, Inc. Mr. Napoli returned last week from a three-month stay on the West Coast.

"Hollywood is eager to do its part in telling the American people about the war effort of their Russian allies," he said in New York Monday. "At every studio I visited, producers, directors, writers and actors expressed admiration for the fight the Russians are waging against the Nazis and indicated their eagerness to translate some of the drama of the struggle to the screen."

Mr. Napoli, who heads the American distributing firm for Soviet films, declared that "we need 'Mrs. Minivers' about Russia and China and we need them now."

He said that despite the recent and numerous announcements from many sources of production plans for films with Russian backgrounds, only three pictures "are definitely under way: MGM's 'Scorched Earth,' Columbia's 'Caviar for the General,' and Warners' 'Mission to Moscow.'" According to Artkino's president, preparation on a number of films, including two announced by Alexander Korda, "In the Rear of the Enemy" and "The Thirteen," and Arthur Hornblow's "Song of the Red Army," have bogged down. Plans for these and others were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on July 18th.

May Supply Background Material for Films

Mr. Napoli asserted that in his opinion, at the moment, "Hollywood isn't pushing hard enough." He indicated that the industry here is "perhaps a little behind that of other countries—England, for example—by not utilizing the value of the screen for stimulating the people towards greater war effort. Our whole job is to win the war as quickly as possible and everything we do must have that objective at the outset," he said.

He intimated that some Hollywood leaders who have gone on record as to the timeliness and morale value of making films about our Russian allies perhaps may find their enthusiasm tempered by the war headlines from the Soviet front. He also asserted that some producers underestimate the extent of interest shown by the American people in Russia's fight against Hitler.

Mr. Napoli said that during his stay in Hollywood he discussed with major producing companies the possibilities of Artkino supplying background shots for contemplated pictures about Russia. He said that he was currently arranging to get specially prepared material from Moscow for Warners' "Mission to Moscow." Artkino, he declared, is ready to offer similar assistance to all American companies which plan this type of film and may require library shots of the Red Army, Air Force, Navy or Soviet civilians. Terms of such assistance, however, were not disclosed.

"Moscow Strikes Back," the most recent film to come from Russia, according to Mr. Napoli, will open within two weeks after the closing of "Eagle Squadron" now at the Globe theatre, New York. Edward G. Robinson did the narration and the commentary was written by Eliot Paul and Albert Maltz. He reported that a number of Hollywood firms were interested in the distribution of this picture and that at least two "are still dickering" as to terms. It is understood they want to buy it outright, but Artkino wants a percentage deal. "Government officials who have seen the film," he said, "are enthusiastic about it and consider that the picture has great importance as a morale-builder and would like to see it played throughout the United States."

In discussing "Girl from Leningrad," the remake of the Soviet film now in production which will be distributed by United Artists, Mr. Napoli reported that shooting will begin about September 15th. About 30 per cent of the picture will be taken from the Russian original, he said, and new material, supplied from Moscow, will be inserted to bring it up to date. Gregor Rabinowitch and Eugene Frenke are producing; director and cast have not yet been assigned. The script is being written by Howard Koch, who has been released from Warner Bros. to work on the picture with Aben Kandell.

It is understood United Artists has agreed to release the film "with or without marquee names," that their feeling is the script is the most important consideration. Mr. Rabinowitch has a record of 70 films produced in Europe. "Girl from Leningrad" will be his first American production.

Artkino is supplying the required new material and also has a financial interest in the deal, although details of the agreement between the company and the two producers were not disclosed by Mr. Napoli.

No deal has been made for any other remake of a Russian picture, he said, adding that one of the difficulties in arranging for remakes is that Artkino holds rights only for the Western Hemisphere and that distributors prefer obtaining world rights to Soviet productions to insure greater returns.

Among the new pictures expected to arrive in America from Russia within the next month are: "Siege of Leningrad," a full length feature; "Ivan the Terrible," the Serge Eisenstein historical production, and "Masquerade," another feature film.

RUSSIAN SYMPHONY IDEA FOR FILM

A number of Hollywood producers are interested in an original Soviet film script based on the Seventh Symphony written by Shostakovitch, Russian composer, whose work had its American debut recently over the National Broadcasting Company, with Arturo Toscanini conducting. This was disclosed by Nicola Napoli, president of Artkino Pictures, Inc., in New York on Monday.

According to the Artkino head, this script, which was written in the USSR, is among a few others now receiving consideration on the west coast. He said that Leopold Stokowski is interested in making the score for the film. If negotiations are opened, according to Artkino, Moscow has promised to supply original material and the suggested script, which is based on the defense of Leningrad.

The NBC performance of the symphony was termed by New York music critics as the most important musical event in America in a decade. It was broadcast July 18th on a national hookup and throughout the world through NBC's short wave facilities.

Miss Hellman signed for Russian Story

Samuel Goldwyn announced in Hollywood Tuesday that he had engaged playwright Lillian Hellman to write a story, as yet untitled, which describes the effect of war on a group of Russian children and the part they play during the invasion of their homeland by the Nazis. This is Miss Hellman's first story to be written directly for the screen.

It is reported that the author of "Watch on the Rhine," "The Little Foxes" and "Children's Hour" originally intended the story for a play but that she abandoned her first draft and switched to writing a film script because she wanted to get her tale about the young Russians on the screens of the world as "quickly as possible."

Miss Hellman and a director will go to Russia to gather photographic background and story material for the picture, and Mr. Goldwyn already has obtained the necessary visas, it was said. He plans production as soon as the script is completed. The cast will be announced later.

Warners Plans Short On Soviet Dance

"A Nation Dances," is the title of a two-reel subject announced by Warner Bros. this week for its short subject program, which will be made from footage of a national dance festival filmed in Moscow while that city was being bombed.

PICK OF PRODUCT GOES TO SOLDIERS ON ALL FRONTS

Overseas Service and WAC send 16 mm Films, Often Only Form of Recreation

Motion pictures are at the fighting fronts of the world. The latest and finest screen entertainment which Hollywood has to offer now is providing a means of relaxation and contact with home for soldiers of the United States on every front.

These pictures, the pick of current releases, reach our troops regularly through the Army's Overseas Motion Picture Service and the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry, which provides free 16 mm prints. In most instances these films are the only entertainment or recreation available for soldiers at battle stations in remote U. S. outposts.

Much of the story behind the Overseas Motion Picture Service cannot be told. It involves far flung troop dispositions and numbers and other information which is the concern of none but the General Staff. Booking charts for the overseas service are as carefully guarded as the plans for a new gun.

But the importance of screen entertainment to the morale of America's fighting men can be told. The files of the Special Service division of the War Department, headed by Brigadier General Frederick H. Osborn, include many enthusiastic reports from post commanders on the overseas picture service. Veteran officers in the morale branch say that never before have "front line" troops been in such fine mental condition. They attribute much of this spirit to the regular recreation and contact with home afforded through the 16 mm film program.

Eight Exchanges Are At Secret Locations

Prints of selected pictures in 16 mm "non flam" film are donated to the Army by the War Activities Committee. Every company is represented with features and short subjects combined in 90-minute programs. Color prints have been provided, too.

These prints are turned over to the Army Motion Picture Service at New York. The service maintains eight exchanges at strategic, secret locations overseas. From these the pictures are serviced to the most remote outposts.

Three shows a week is the aim for every post. The Overseas Motion Picture Service, given an unqualified priority by the War Department, is getting the pictures there with a speed and efficiency which sets something of a record in film distribution. All available transport methods are used, including the air. When one post shows a reel it is then shipped on to the next station.

The industry, through the War Activities Committee, now supplies all pictures requested by the Army without charge. The 16 mm prints are delivered to the U. S. at New York, in the can and ready to go, usually many weeks before a picture is in general release in this country.

Almost 300 feature pictures have been supplied to the Army by the WAC, and nearly 350 short subjects. As of July 1st 231 titles had been shipped. The number of prints varies.

Pictures are selected by the Overseas Motion Picture Service and War Activities Committee, drawing on the more than 20 years' experience in soldiers' film preference of the Army Motion Picture Service, which operates non-profit theatres in U. S. camps.

The selection generally runs to lighter entertainment. Almost all of Hollywood's musicals, better comedies and action pictures are sure of an overseas exhibition. The serious dramas, and war pictures, also are chosen. "Mrs. Miniver" was on its way to the troops even before it opened at New York. So was "This Above All."

Westerns, mysteries and the liveliest action pictures also are included in the 90-minute package shows, with one or more short subjects. Comedies, cartoons, travel, educational and special shorts are included. The United Newsreel, compiled by the five newsreel companies for foreign release, is shipped weekly by the Overseas Motion Picture Service.

Eleven Producers Are Participating

Each of the 11 producers is participating in the program. Many pictures, not destined for U. S. screens until the new season starts in September, are already in Army circulation abroad.

To date MGM has provided 41 feature titles. Other companies, with the number of titles released to the Army overseas service are: Warners, 26; Columbia, 30; 20th-Fox 28; Paramount, 25; Universal, 32; RKO, 20; United Artists, 10; Monogram, 13; Republic, 11 and Producers Releasing, 5. They also have contributed shorts subjects.

The service was organized by the Army with appropriated funds last year to furnish free amusement and recreation through 16 mm pictures for members of task, overseas expeditionary forces and base commands not receiving 35 mm service. Originally it rented 16 mm prints from the industry. Then, through the War Activities Committee, the 11 major producers undertook to supply titles free of charge.

Colonel J. A. Williamson, who organized the Overseas Service and is credited by industry sources with much of its success this week was assigned to field duty. R. B. Murray, civilian general manager of the Army Motion Picture Service, will take over direction of the Overseas Service.

The agreement between the Army and the distributors stipulates that the pictures are to be shown only to uniformed U. S. fighting men outside the U. S. Prints ultimately will be returned to the distributors.

The Overseas Motion Picture Service provides complete projection equipment to all posts. It is one of the principal duties of the morale officer of each unit. The outfits are complete, with generators, converters, spare parts, screens and everything needed to give a show anywhere.

Major Thomas Johnson, assistant chief of the service, at Washington disclosed how the 16 mm field service was developed during maneuvers in Louisiana last year. A former theatre man with Paramount midwest partners, and later with the Oklahoma network, he was assigned to provide entertainment with two 16 mm projectors and a few thousand feet of film.

Ingenious Devices Used To Keep Show Going

Screens and projectors were set up in churches, schools, swimming pools and under the open sky, he recalled. Often, by concealing projectors and screen in trucks, it was possible to give a show in the woods under blackout conditions. Much the same conditions now prevail overseas.

The reports on overseas showings describe many ingenious efforts by morale officers to insure that the "show goes on." They now are arranging entertainment for soldiers under real blackout and camouflage restrictions. Often the screen shows are the only relaxation afforded troops on the constant "alert."

The Army does not like direct quotations from commanders' reports. But many high ranking officers have expressed thanks directly to the industry for the pictures.

In Ireland, General Hartle, commander of the forces there, recently wrote his appreciation, declaring "the troops of this command are greatly benefited . . . the films that are coming through are first rate . . . and I shall look forward to your future releases."

Major General Charles H. Bonesteel, commandant of the Iceland base, expressed similar appreciation following a recent Iceland screening.

"ARMY PREMIERES" FOR MANY FILMS

Many of Hollywood's newest pictures are having "world premieres" at some strategic Army base in an overseas combat area, through the service which provides screen entertainment for American soldiers wherever they may be. Among recent films receiving "Army premieres" was MGM's "Tarzan's New York Adventure," which had its first showing before a khaki-clad audience of several thousand at an Army theatre in Iceland.

Studios Maintain Active Pace

Despite the agitation, recorded elsewhere in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, for action in the direction of protecting the industry, or an amendment or an adjustment of the Quota law, statistically the present time is not the worst the British studios have faced. At the moment of writing no less than a dozen pictures are in actual process of production, with others ready to take their place, in a state of advanced preparation, or merely waiting for available studio space. Programmes of production have been announced during the past week or so which justify the term "ambitious," and which indicate that more than one company, undeterred by the shortage of studios, material and manpower, is determined to materialize its plans for continued production of pictures for both domestic and world markets.

In the field of actual physical production a survey shows that pretty well every studio available is at present in occupation by production companies. Denham, with most studio stages available normally, is packed to capacity, which is not the same thing as pre-war capacity because many stages are otherwise reserved, less labour is available and some of the buildings have been destroyed by enemy action.

Most active at Denham at the moment is the Michael Powell-Emeric Pressburger unit, known as The Archers Film Productions. Mr. Powell and Mr. Pressburger, who wrote, produced and directed "49th Parallel," have gone to work on two films at Denham. One, "The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp," is more ambitious than the other, "The Silver Fleet." The "Colonel Blimp" picture is an ambitious opus, filmed in Technicolor, and epitomising the clash of ideas between the old generation and the new, covering the last 40 years between the Boer War and the present war, showing that Blimps are not born, but made, and telling the life story of one individual Army officer to prove the thesis.

Colonel Blimp Is a Typical Englishman

Colonel Blimp is a typical Englishman, but, say his producers, no longer typical, with virtues and faults, a sportsman, ingenuous but old fashioned. The film will show "The Colonel" is on the way out. It may not surprise some to know that for this tilt at such an established institution official cooperation was refused and in particular permission was not given for Laurence Olivier to be released from the Fleet Air Arm to play the title role. Roger Livesey has now taken over the part of Blimp, with Anton Walbrook as a German: an Uhlan officer in 1902, a prisoner of war in 1918, and refugee from Nazism in 1939. Deborah Kerr plays three roles, a governess, a nurse and a 1939 girl in khaki. Georges Perinal is director of photography, with Michael Powell directing. G. F. D. will distribute.

Elsewhere on another Denham stage, a second Archers Film Productions unit has taken the floor with "The Silver Fleet," a picture written especially for artist Ralph Richardson, who has been released by the Admiralty to play in the film. Vernon Sewell and Gordon Wellesley, the authors, will direct and Michael Powell produce.

Finishing touches are being applied at Denham by Marcel Hellman to his latest picture, "Secret Mission," which Harold French has been directing, with Carla Lehmann, Hugh Williams and Roland Culver. It is a story of espionage and rebellion in German-occupied France.

On another Denham stage RKO Radio is at work on their latest British production, as yet untitled, and in which Eric Portman and Ann Dvorak are starred. Lance Comfort, director of "Penn of Pennsylvania" and "Hatter's Castle," is directing the two stars in a story which has a distinctly war flavour and tells of the operations of Nazis in Britain at the present time. Victor Hanbury is producing.

Two Cities Films Is Expanding Program

With actual production on "In Which We Serve" completed, Two Cities Films is losing no time in developing its future programme. Production currently is going ahead on the film of women in khaki, "We're Not Weeping," which initially started operation at the Highbury Studios but has since moved elsewhere and is at present working on location in one of Britain's largest A.T.S. training camps. The seven girl stars who are under the direction of Adrian Brunel, with producer Derrick de Marney in charge, are epitomising the lives and careers of British women during the present war. No leading man has yet been assigned to face this septette of beauty.

Leslie Howard, who recently has become associated in a closer degree with Two Cities Films, already has left his mark on the "We're Not Weeping" picture, upon which he will exercise a supervisory interest.

Meanwhile an ambitious expansion of activities has been announced by Two Cities Films which has associated itself with Misbourne Pictures, Ltd., the company under which Leslie Howard Productions operates. Under the agreement between the two the resources of both these companies will be pooled and productions made in closest cooperation. Mr. Howard has joined the board of Two Cities Films, Ltd., and Major Sassoon, one of the pioneer directors of Two Cities, has joined that of Misbourne.

Fillipo del Giudice, recently appointed managing director of Two Cities Films, of which he previously was general manager, not only has obtained the association of Mr. Howard, but also of John Sutro, managing director of Ortus Films, producers of "49th Parallel." The company has obtained studio space not only at Denham and Highbury, previously acquired by them, but at Welwyn and other studios within the Greater London area, which will enable them to materialise their production programme.

Coward Planning "Happy Breed"

With "In Which We Serve" concluded, Noel Coward at present is working on the initial details of his "This Happy Breed," which will go into production at Denham later this year.

With "We're Not Weeping" in full swing, Two Cities proposes to launch shortly at least two further pictures, "This Demi Paradise" by Anatole de Grunwald, and a picture written and produced by Jeffrey Dell, author of "Nobody Ordered Wolves."

Two Cities plans to make at least nine pictures each year, most of these of world market calibre; others will be added to the total plan.

A significant feature in the Two Cities scheme is a guarantee of all production costs in the United Kingdom, with freedom of negotiation for distribution throughout the rest of the world. With these two points Del Giudice believes he will free his company from the shackles of distributor interference.

"In Which We Serve," of course, is being distributed by British Lion. The first two pictures made under the new Two Cities' banner will be for General Film distribution.

Ealing Studios Also Busy

Active, too, at the present moment is Michael Balcon's Ealing Studio organization, which currently has two pictures on the floor, one of them "They Came in Khaki," the Cavalcanti production dealing with air-bourne attacks on Britain, in which Frank Lawton, Leslie Banks and Basil Sydney have leading roles. The other is "The Bells Go Down," which is just leaving the floor at Ealing to make room for the former production, which has been in the location stage "Somewhere in England."

Tommy Trinder, British comedian, is the star comedian of "The Bells Go Down," which deals with the work of the British Auxiliary Fire Service.

An ambitious picture on the Ealing programme is said to document the story of the British Broadcasting Corporation, which this year reaches its 21st birthday. Scenario writers Angus MacPhail and Diana Morgan have been set to devise the script and choose from the wealth of material suitable sequences for the screen epitome of the British radio organisation.

On the tapis also, and awaiting trade show, is "Chetnik," story dealing with the Serbian guerillas. In preparation are "Saga of San Demetrio," which Charles Frend, director of "The Foreman Went to France," will make.

Due also to be made are two Will Hay comedies, "My Learned Friend" and "Bob's Your Uncle;" "The Road to Addis," to be directed by Cavalcanti; and an episode of the Guards at war, which Harry Watt, of "Target for Tonight" fame, will make under the title "Umpety Poo."

At Gaumont-British's Shepherd's Bush studios the eighth week of shootinng has been reached by Gainsborough on the Arthur Askey comedy, "King Arthur Was a Gentleman," which Marcel Varnel is directing under the production eyes of Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black.

At Warners' Teddington studios George King Productions are at work on "Tomorrow We Live," another war subject with a French flavour, which is to be released by British Lion.

At Elstree quick-fire comedian Max Miller is in full swing with a new British National comedy, "Asking for Trouble," which Oswald Mitchell is directing.

At Welwyn the fourth week of shooting has been reached by Associated British on "Women Aren't Angels," in which comedians Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton are being directed by Lawrence Huntington, with Gunther Krampf in charge of photography. That concluded, Associated British will continue immediately with "Thursday's Child."

Milder Plans London Trip

Max Milder, Warner Bros. chief in Great Britain, returned to New York this week from the coast, where he conferred with Harry M. Warner and Col. Jack L. Warner. He is planning to return to London in about a week.

BRITISH INDUSTRY DEMANDS ACTION ON PRODUCTION

Sharp Decrease in Output, Inability to meet Quotas lead to United Protest

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Whatever internal differences may mark the current relations of the various industry sections here—and there is quite an array—there is unity, solid and unsullied, on one point of policy, that something must be done without further delay, about the production industry.

Just what the various groups want done is both variable and at times obscure. That none the less some action will be taken by the Government in the near future would seem a fact worth gambling on.

The inordinate decrease in production—figures have already been published in these pages—the inability of distributors and exhibitors to fulfill their quota obligations, the lack of stability in the whole industry position, have driven all sections and organisations to intense and vociferous revolt against the present condition. Exhibitors, producers, labour unions, even the Films Council itself, have been moved to demand swift action. Parliament itself more frequently than usual of late has been the scene of protests or pleas on the part of industry spokesmen among the legislators.

The fact that the Government's own mouthpieces have preserved a spirit of urbane and sanctimonious placidity, denying the existence of any cause for alarm, expressing official satisfaction with the position, has exasperated industry groups to loud and emphatic protest. It is not necessarily significant.

Fulfilling Quota No Easy Task

Most coherent of all the recent forums in which quota has been discussed is the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, whose exhibitor members are not least of all among the sufferers from the current production slump. Indeed it is alleged that during the last quota year—ended October 31st, last—some 1,200 picture houses failed to fulfill their legal obligations to devote 17½ per cent of their total screen time to the showing of British films. It is alleged, too, that of these 1,200 some 85 have been selected for prosecution. The exhibitors want to know why.

Fulfilling quota obligations with a total of 46 films from which to choose can be no easy task for the 4,750 film houses of Great Britain. Independents in particular face a losing proposition.

How to tackle this anomalous and complex situation has been the recent purpose of the CEA's Brain Trust to devise. Claiming insistently that they do not want the Quota Act abolished, that they believe in its principles, and have in the past profited by its practices, they seek other solutions, new interpretations rather than new laws. Probably their principal purpose would be to secure a guarantee from the Board of Trade that defaulting exhibitors will not be prosecuted unless the circumstances point obviously to guilt on the part of the theatre.

Although no formal or open protests have been made by the distributors to secure an amendment of the Act, it is believed they have the ear and the good will of the Board of Trade. How otherwise, ask many trade students here—among them the more alert minded exhibitors—could the distributors get away with non-fulfillment of their quota obligations, without being subject to the prosecutions threatened against the chosen 85 picture houses? All save one organisation, a British house, state the exhibitor critics, are defaulters over the last quota year ended March 31st. Only the one of the leading houses has enough British films to meet the needs of its clients.

In the economic field, too, the shortage of British pictures is, it is stated, putting up the prices of British films, and exhibitors are being called on to pay through the nose for the dubious privilege of fulfilling the letter of the law.

The official production group, the British Film Producers' Association, is perhaps the least active of all trade bodies when it comes to persuading the Government to protective action, mainly because its principal and more powerful members have been and are making more out of their pictures than was the case in September, 1939. Movements are afoot in production circles to ginger up the Government, to secure a definite and clear cut policy for the industry and to see it materialised.

Now, at long last, the BPFA has consented to hear what the production committee has to say and will formally examine a memorandum prepared by the latter. So, too, is the Films Council, or at least its subcommittee, which includes the production interests thereon, seeking to impress upon the Board of Trade the need for immediate and serious consideration of rationalisation and the necessity to call a conference of the entire industry to examine and if necessary to promulgate its findings.

Industry-Government Relation Called Good

The ice of the producer group, however, is several degrees less frigid than the ice of Whitehall itself. It will take a great deal of hard use of the propaganda blow lamp to melt its chilly surface. Did not Mr. Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, himself, a short while back, express his complete official satisfaction with the present state of affairs, formally give voice to his conviction that exhibitors would be able to fulfill their obligations out of the existing reservoir of films? Can it then be wondered that exhibitors are asking if he has been kept in the dark by his department which should know of the 1,200 defaults by British picture houses?

The War Office, in particular, came in for the most carefully aimed arrows from Willie Hall's critical bow, for its insufficient awareness of the need for keeping the industry alive under the stress of national emergency. Hall argued his case, not only on the grounds that British pictures with British artists made dollars in the U. S., which were an appreciable contribution to the national exchequer, but pointed the moral of the last war, when a like inertia allowed American films with American ideas and American culture to find their way into every corner of the world.

British Government promises Aid for Entertainment Films

A direct promise of aid for British motion picture production, even for pictures not considered to be war propaganda, was made to the industry in England this week by the Ministry of Information. Such aid will not be a Government subsidy, but will provide for the release from Government service of technicians, players and studios for production of quality films of any type.

The guarantee came after long argument by the industry that propaganda for morale was as important as direct propaganda for British arms and followed reports that strictly war subjects had not been outstanding box office successes.

The development also is considered to be bound up with Board of Trade plans for the industry's future. In this connection producers are to confer in the near future with Hugh Dalton, Board of Trade president, to plead the necessity of freeing studios and personnel to maintain an operating foundation on which to build the post-war industry.

Production of films for special Government purposes, meanwhile, is continuing. Paramount this week began distributing to Ministry of Supply factories the first issue of 50 prints of a Government sponsored newsreel aimed at enlightening armament workers on the use to which their product is put.

French Circuit Owner is Here to start Anew

Frenchmen in Vichy France yearn for the "old days" when they were able to see good American films, according to Leon Siritzky, French circuit owner, who is in New York with his two sons, studying the American film situation, and desirous of reentering the business here.

Mr. Siritzky, one of the great theatre owners of France, recently deprived of a far flung circuit of more than 75 houses, cited an editorial in May, in the Eclaireur de Nice.

It said, in part: "When will there come again the days when we can see good American pictures."

Mr. Siritzky remarked that the editorial was daring and provocative of much comment, in view of the relations between Vichy and Germany.

It is, however, what everyone there already knows. American pictures are extremely popular. They outdraw new French films, which in turn are far greater attractions than German imports. However, the American films are old, and the prints are old; insamuch as the Germans forebade the showing of American films made after 1938.

Mr. Siritzky, who, under the extremely individualistic French production system, was consulted by producers before they made films, was unable to say precisely what he would do in this country.

Has Made Application For U. S. Citizenship

He brought with him certain valuable story properties. He would like to see them made in Hollywood. And he would want a part in the production, he said.

One story is that of "Madamoiselle Nitoucha," a popular French film of 10 years ago, made by Richebe. It was to have been made in France, with Danielle Darrieux as its star. That was the German plan. They asked for the rights, but didn't get them.

Mr. Siritzky brought here considerable of his capital, although the Germans forced him to liquidate his theatre circuits at an unfairly low figure. He and his sons, Sami and Joe, have been studying American film distribution, in the event they acquire theatres here.

A Russian citizen, the theatre owner has applied for American citizenship, a move he did not make in France or in Turkey, where he operated houses previously. Referring to the application he said he feels citizenship here is a duty owed for the freedom of enterprise he found.

Was First Exhibitor in Turkey

Mr. Siritzky said he was the first film theatre owner in Turkey. In 1909, he opened a film house in Constantinople. He remembered he ran parts of pictures outside the theatre, then drew the curtains across the screen, and announced the rest of the show might be seen inside the theatre—at an admission price.

He operated five theatres in that country. Twenty years ago, he sold them and went to France, where he was sole owner of the country's third largest circuit.

Mr. Siritzky noted the contrast between the American and French distribution systems, remarking that in the latter, clearance was only a vague factor: "You can have the worst sort of house," he said, "but if you pay the money, and are not bucked by, let us say, Gaumont or Pathe or the Siritzky chain, you get the picture." He said that even in the instances of the opposition mentioned, favoring of such circuits by the seller was predicated upon their buying power, not by rigid rules of house condition, mileage, territory and the like.

Mr. Siritzky's sons, with their families, preceded their father and mother here by one year.

Composers meet on War Songs

Four hundred inhabitants of Tin Pan Alley, including some of America's leading song writers, gathered in New York Tuesday to discuss war songs.

The purpose of the meeting, which was called by the Songwriters Protective Association, was to inspire tunesmiths to write "fighting" songs for the armed forces. The conference took place at the Park Central Hotel.

Sigmund Romberg, president of the association, declared that the idea of the conference was "to create songs to be sung by the fighting forces rather than at them. The country needs songs that will arouse the nation's armed forces and not soothe them, songs to inspire the fighting mood rather than dreams of the girls they left behind," he said.

Edwin C. Miller, until recently chairman of ASCAP's administrative committee, was appointed general manager of the association, Mr. Rosenberg announced.

It is understood the meeting resulted from the appointment last week of Lanny Ross, radio singer, to an Office of War Information advisory board. OWI, it was said, is interested in aiding morale through war songs. The board, when finally established, will include leaders of the music industry who, it is hoped, will attempt to promote the publishing of fighting war ballads.

Guests and speakers at Tuesday's meeting included: Lieut. Com. Charles B. Cranford, morale officer of the Third Naval District; Captain Charles E. Clapp, Jr., morale officer of the Army Air Force; Representative Sol Bloom of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Edwin L. Hughes, president of the National Music Council; John G. Paine, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; Merritt E. Tompkins, general manager of Broadcast Music, Inc., and Walter Douglas, chairman of the Music Publishers' Protective Association.

Alstock names Chertok Coast Producer

Jack Chertok, MGM short subjects and feature producer, has been named coast production chief for the Motion Picture Section of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. The appointment followed a recent visit to California by Francis Alstock, director of the film division of the U. S. agency headed by Nelson Rockefeller.

Mr. Chertok will be in charge of the California administration of the Coordinator's program of special ideological productions for Latin America. He is to serve without compensation and will remain at the MGM studio as a feature producer and to supervise some short subject production. He will work in cooperation with the Motion Picture Society of the Americas, and Mr. Alstock's west coast agent, David Hopkins.

The new arrangement is expected to facilitate the production by Hollywood studios of the special scripts which the Coordinator's office is now preparing. Short subject scenarios for about 25 pictures are being writen by leading Hollywood writers under the direction of Kenneth Macgowan and Philip Dunne. They are aimed directly against Axis propaganda in South America. These "ideological" subjects were described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for July 18th.

The scripts prepared under Mr. Macgowan's direction will be offered to all Hollywood studios without charge, for inclusion in their own short subjects program. If there are no acceptances, or if pictures because of their specialized nature are not suitable for theatrical release in this country as well as Latin America they will be produced and distributed directly by the Coordinator.

These films are to be assigned to the coast studios and paid for on cost plus contracts. The first three subjects are expected to be ready for production within a few weeks.

Charles E. McCarthy Named Alstock Aide

Charles E. McCarthy, formerly director of advertising and publicity for Twentieth Century-Fox, has been named executive assistant to Francis Alstock, chief of the Motion Picture Section of the Office of Inter American Affairs. Mr. McCarthy, who will have charge of the New York office of the film unit, has been with the Coordinator since January in charge of the information division of the Motion Picture Section. No change in salary is involved in his new designation.

Stage Door Canteen Plans Own Show

Volunteer workers of the American Theatre Wing Stage Door Canteen plan to produce a one-hour show written and acted by themselves and presented for themselves and the servicemen who frequent the canteen in New York. First performance of the show will be August 18th at the canteen.

The committee in charge of the presentation includes Josephine Lyons, Peggy Clark, Betty Lawford and Bernard Simon. Edward Duryea Dowling will direct, Edward Sinclair will stage the dances and Robert Frann the musical numbers. Soldier-patrons of the canteen have written some of the music for the show.

"So small is the world nowadays," writes Aubrey Flanagan, our war-front correspondent in London, "that, when, in a remote lane in Devonshire, near the sea, but miles from civilization as we know it, we hailed a tired and grey-haired soldier who climbed the hill, in a uniform, which, in the misty half-light of dusk and four Pimms Number One, looked to us like a Royal Air Force outfit. We offered him a lift, from our car, and were quite surprised to hear him answer in the ripest drawl accent of the Texas of your U.S.

"He was from the Rio Grande, and is here with a worthy bunch of Americans. But those warm Texas tones in those wilds of the British country-side warmed the cockles of our heart. The lanky Texan's son is in the Eagle Squadron. His daughter is a Ferry Pilot who wings across the Atlantic in the black of night. The Americans are certainly getting around these days."

On the weekend, recently, when the FBI captured those submarine-borne saboteurs, on Long Island and in Florida, the Eighty-sixth Street Theatre in New York's German Yorkville district was showing "My Favorite Spy!"

A movie theatre owner, who prefers anonymity, swears that the following actually happened, last Sunday, at his theatre:

Twice, the house mop-and-bucket brigade was called to the rescue in the flood waters of plumbing trouble. A young kid started a commotion, by screaming, when he strayed from his sister. An indignant father rushed back with his son's birth certificate to show proof that the kid would not be 12 years old until August, and, therefore, was entitled to an eleven-cent admission. A boy with a small flag in his mouth fell while walking down the aisle with his mother. He cut the roof of his month, and great howls of anguish arose during a dramatic moment on the screen. The mother rushed the boy to a hospital. And returned the next day demanding they be allowed to see the rest of the show. An usher going down front to keep boys quiet was hit in the mouth with some padding, torn from one of the seats. Quite some business of ejecting the trouble-makers. Complaints came because the drinking fountain ran out of ice. The colored boy sent for a new supply, let the ice cake slip in the cooler and broke the coil. The drain pan ran over. Another call for the mop-and-bucket brigade. A slug in the candy vending machine clogged up the works and put that out of business. Some gent's wife caused a rumpus when a lost, stolen or strayed husband couldn't be located.

And so to bed.

"We're fifty German airmen who were shot down today by the British R.A.F.," was the reply.

Said St. Peter: "Wait a minute while I look at the DNB (Nazi) communique." After reading it he came back and announced, "It says here that only two German airmen were shot down today. So two of you can come in and the rest of you can go to hell."

The scene, they complain, shows George Washington stumbling in on Benedict Arnold holding Martha Washington on his lap. The Sons of the American Revolution condemned the sequence because "it reflects on the character and chastity of our first President," quoted the press dispatch.

TALENT SUPPLY IS MAJOR PROBLEM OF STUDIOS

Solution Seen Either in Pools or Increasing Number of Loanouts

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

With the war now making greater inroads into the ranks of marquee value players, one of the questions confronting Hollywood is the problem of either pooling talent or increasing the number of loanouts.

"Pooling of talent" among the major studios has long been looked upon with disfavor, due to policies established years ago in view of anti-trust law decisions.

However, the exchange of players in bona fide bartering deals for others players, other talent or literary properties has been practiced extensively.

In fact, of 128 top name players active in the past year, 74 of them, or 57.8 per cent, worked in more than one studio. Included in the 54 who worked at only one lot were standbys" of their respective studios—the Clark Gables, the Mickey Rooneys, the Ann Sheridans, the Tyrone Powers, and those who made only one picture during the period.

A breakdown of the activities of the top name value group shows:

One player worked in five studios.

Ten players each worked at four studios.

Twenty-five players each worked in three studios.

Thirty-eight players each worked in two studios.

Fifty-four players each worked in one studio.

Brian Donlevy, under contract to Paramount, holds the record as "chief commuter" of Hollywood. Having made five pictures at Paramount, he appeared in one for United Artists—Edward Small's "A Gentleman After Dark," Universal's "South of Tahiti," "Columbia's "Two Yanks in Trinidad," and is now working in MGM's "Clear for Action," previously called "Men at Sea"; "Navy Convoy" and "Cargo of Innocents."

The 10 who have made or are making appearances in pictures at four studios each are:

Charles Boyer, Bruce Cabot, Henry Fonda, Robert Preston, Kay Francis, Lloyd Nolan, George Sanders, Barbara Stanwyck, John Wayne and Warren William.

Playing roles in pictures at three studios each are:

The two-studio group consists of:

The one-studio contingent, some of whom made only one picture since the start of the season, includes:

Richard Arlen, Jean Arthur, Gene Autry, Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Humphrey Bogart, James Cagney, Madeleine Carroll, Bing Crosby, Irene Dunne, Deanna Durbin, Nelson Eddy, Errol Flynn, Glenn Ford, Clark Gable, Greta Garbo, Judy Garland, Greer Garson, Paulette Goddard, Betty Grable, Sonja Henie, Katharine Hepburn, Miriam Hopkins, Kay Kyser, Veronica Lake, Hedy Lamarr, Carole Landis, Laurel and Hardy, Myrna Loy, Jeannette MacDonald, Mary Martin, Charlie McCarthy-Edgar Bergen, Ray Milland, Merle Oberon, Dick Powell, Eleanor Powell, William Powell, Tyrone Power, Cesar Romero, Mickey Rooney, Martha Scott, Ann Sheridan, Norma Shearer, Penny Singleton, Red Skelton, Ann Sothern, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner, Jane Withers, Loretta Young and Robert Young.

What the future augurs in castings for the new season is highly problematical. With the Selective Service making inroads on the ranks of name players and volunteers joining the armed forces weekly, studios now are hard pressed as to future commitments.

Talent today more than ever before has become a seller's market. Top freelance players are now commanding the highest figures ever obtained for their services, a situation which apparently will continue for some time.

Benny Gets Started

After a period of bickering which doubtless got the picture some advance publicity but did the star no good, Jack Benny's "Meanest Man in the World" went before the cameras in a week which saw the production level holding at 55, with 13 pictures finished and a like number started. Benny's was the single picture started at Twentieth Century-Fox, where two finished. Paramount, which has more pictures in its backlog than any other studio, spurted ahead with four going into camera stage, one to cutting room.

INDUSTRY TO LEAD BOND DRIVE DURING SEPTEMBER

"Billion Dollar" Campaign Is Planned by Treasury; Under WAC Supervision

Motion picture industry leadership in the sale of War Bonds and Stamps will come in a "billion dollar" drive in September.

The drive, which received unanimous support from all factors of the War Activities Committee, was announced last week by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury. Its general title will be "Salute to Our Heroes Month."

It was noted that the nation's retailers have been the "spearhead" of the July Bond and Stamp drive; and the film industry will be given leadership in September.

Some of the phases of the drive will be: 300 bond rallies in 300 cities; the largest concentration thus far of touring motion picture stars; sales and delivery, of bonds and stamps by theatres to patrons; pledges by each city, so that it may be visited by the touring stars, of at least $1,000,000 in bond sales the day of their visit.

8,451 Theatres Represented

The War Activities Committee, meeting in support of the September campaign, brought together in representation "more of the nation's theatres than in any industry gathering held in years." The WAC asserted 8,451 houses were represented.

Among those at the session, Friday, July 17th, in New York, were: Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA; Lee Newbury, representing M. A. Rosenberg, president of Allied States; Nathan Yamins, representing Allied of New England; Harry Brandt, president of Independent Theatre Owners of New York, and also representing Robert H. Poole of the Pacific Coast Conference; Walter Vincent, Max A. Cohen, John H. Harris, Si H. Fabian, and Arthur L. Mayer.

Affiliated theatres were represented by: Spyros Skouras, Dan Michaelove and Aubrey Schenck of Twentieth Century-Fox; Joseph H. Bernhard and Sam E. Morris, representing Warner Bros. Theatres; Nicholas M. Schenck, Joe Vogel and Oscar A. Doob, representing Loew Theatres; W. B. England, representing RKO Theatres; Barney Balaban, Leonard Goldenson, Sam Dembow and Leon D. Netter, representing Paramount Theatres.

Circuits Represented At Conference

In addition the following Paramount partners were present, either as members or guests of the Committee: John Balaban, A. H. Blank, G. Ralph Branton, R. J. O'Donnell, Karl Hoblitzelle, Samuel Pinanski, E. V. Richards, Jr. and R. B. Wilby.

Others present were: George J. Schaefer, chairman of the War Activities Committee; Francis S. Harmon, Coordinator of WAC; Lowell Mellett, chief of the Bureau of Motion Pictures of the Office of War Information, and his assistants, Arch A. Mercey and Sam Spewack; Carlton Duffus, of the U. S. Treasury's War Bond and Stamp organization; Mrs. Florence Marston, alternate for Edward Arnold, representing the Screen Actors Guild, Joseph H. Hazen, William F. Rodgers, Howard Dietz, Austin C. Keough, Walter C. Ament, acting chairman of the Newsreel Division, Jack Alicoate, vice-chairman of the Trade Press Division, Si Seadler, vice-chairman of the Publicity and Exploitation Division, William A. Scully, chairman of the Distributors Division, and Joseph H. Seidelman, chairman of the Foreign Managers Division of the War Activities Committee.

In the September drive, the stars will not appear in theatres. They will be present at public rallies, and will visit factories.

Anent the plan to have each of the cities visited pledge $1,000,000 in bond sales the day of the stars' visit, it is thought the immediate result, with 300 cities scheduled, will be at least $300,000,000.

Of the delivery, as well as sale, of bonds and stamps, by theatres to patrons, it is thought the arrangement will benefit millions of workers who have not time to visit the bank with certificates now being given. It is noted that theatres which have obtained special Treasury permission to sell the war issues directly have reported success and greater sales.

Theatre June Sales Totaled $18,000,000

Theatres will advertise: "Bonds While You Wait, Day and Night, Night and Day —including Saturdays, Sundays, and Holidays."

The September slogan will be "Buy a Bond to Honor Every Mother's Son in Service."

Each buyer will be given a postal card, with the message, for mailing to relatives in the service: "I just bought a War Bond, and was thinking of you."

Apropos of the role theatres have, in selling war issues, the Treasury commented that in June, the nation's houses sold more than $18,000,000 worth.

Last week, the Eastern Public Relations Committee of the film industry pledged that the WAC would receive "one week's priority" on every home office publicity and field exploitation worker during September.

The Committee, meeting at the New York office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, heard an outline of plans, from Oscar Doob, on leave from the Loew circuit to head the WAC drive, and Gordon White.

Advance Men For Rallies

It learned the country will be divided into seven zones, each zone to have a minimum of seven Hollywood stars working seven days a week to aid local WAC committees; that the WAC's Hollywood division will supply advance men for stars and rallies west of the Mississippi, and its eastern division such men for rallies in the east, and that the advance men will work without pay.

The Committee was informed Monday that Robert Coyne, Treasury Department staff field director, is sending complete instructions to all state, county, and city administrators. They are to work closely with the film industry.

WAC local committees are being urged to meet immediately with their local Treasury agents, and also with all organizations of their areas which may be of aid to the September campaign.

Varied Bond Sale Activity in Field

Joseph Miklos, manager of the Warner Palace, Norwich, Conn., has sold $270,000 in War Bonds to the town treasury. He also is selling bonds and stamps at his lobby booth.

The Translux Theatre at 49th Street and Broadway, New York City, up to July 21st, sold $54,105 in bonds and stamps. The circuit's three other houses in that city sold, to that date, $21,979.

Dave Kaplan, manager of Warners' Stanley theatre, Atlantic City, led the entire Warner circuit throughout the country in the sale of war bonds and stamps. Mr. Kaplan has set the record with a sale of $51,000—$44,000 in bonds and $7,000 in stamps, which includes the sale of three $10,000 bonds and one $5,000 bond.

Purchasers of War Savings Stamps at the RKO Grand, in Cincinnati, during the engagement of "Eagle Squadron," were asked to register in a special autograph album in the stamp booth in the lobby. The album, when filled, was sent to the Eagle Squadron, composed of American fliers with the Royal Air Force, England.

William Miskell produced a War Bonds show at the Omaha Municipal Auditorium, which was to be held Thursday night. It featured Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. Mr. Miskell is manager of the Tri-State circuit's Orpheum theatre, in that city.

Miami, Fla., theatres reported sale of $19,590 in June in War Stamps and Bonds. The

RALLIES PLANNED TO OPEN DRIVE

Six giant rallies in various sections of New York City are set for August 25th and 26th as a preliminary to the "Salute to Our Heroes" month in September, in which the industry will take a leading part in the projected sale of one billion dollars in war bonds and stamps. The plans were announced this week by the War Activities Committee following a meeting of the New York State committee, headed by Max A. Cohen, in the local headquarters of the War Savings Staff.

Abbott and Costello, currently on tour on behalf of bonds and stamp sales, will be the chief attractions at the rallies, it is planned.

Theatres press Bond Sales Activity

Wometco Theatres of Miami reported that their sales increased, in some cases almost 400 per cent, when lobby tables and booths were installed. This circuit had marked success in arranging Saturday meetings of children's clubs in six neighborhood houses, stressing idea of regular weekly purchases of stamps through the theatre they attend.

Alaskan Theatre Sells $1,025 in Bonds

An Alaskan theatre, the Coliseum, at Sitka, Alaska, reported to the WAC a sale of $1,025 in bonds for June.

The Hempstead Theatre, at Hempstead, Long Island, had a sale of $2,632 in stamps and $12,600 in bonds for June.

The Treasury Department's 100 per cent flag has been awarded the Harris Amusement Company, Pittsburgh, for signing up every employee to buy war stamps or bonds weekly, under the payroll allotment plan.

Philadelphia exhibitors were urged to plan for fullest cooperation in the bond campaign to be conducted in the theatres this autumn by Si Fabian and Harry Brandt, addressing an open meeting on Monday at the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia, held under the auspices of the War Activities Committee. The 125 exhibitors present, representing the majority of theatres in the area, were also urged to program as many Government reels as possible.

Indiana theatres have collected $45,574 for the Army and Navy Relief Fund drive, Kenneth Collins, acting chairman of the Indiana WAC announced.

Manager William S. Canninng, Interstate Empire theatre, Fall River, Mass., is given much credit for its American Heroes Day accomplishment when, with a quota of $60,000 in bonds, Fall River exceeded that quota more than nine times, selling a total of $541,628. The center of the city, in front of City Hall, was roped off from early morning until late at night. Mr. Canning acted as master of ceremonies part of the time. Programs were presented by orchestras, a WPA Band, and entertainers from local and nearby restaurants and night clubs.

Sixty prints of three Walt Disney cartoons made for the National Film Board of Canada are being distributed there to promote purchase of war savings stamps and certificates.

Among those the commissioner cited were J. J. Shubert and the local Shubert manager, Al Munro; Marcus Heiman, Saul Kaplan of the Colonial Theatre; George Gibbs, president of the musicians' union, and T. Frank Meagher, president of the stagehands' union.

Paramount 'Inn' to Benefit Navy

The world premiere of Paramount's "Holiday Inn" at the New York Paramount next Wednesday evening will feature a special, "big" stage show, and will be at admissions of from $1.10 to $5.50, for the Navy Relief Fund.

Unions have pledged cooperation, so that stagehands, projectionists, and musicians will work without pay; actors' unions have done the same.

The stage show, one of the largest ever arranged in connection with a film premiere, is to include bands led by Phil Harris, Skinnay Ennis, Xavier Cugat and Benny Goodman, Phil Spitalny's choir, Myrna Loy, Zero Mostel, Ann Miller, Betty Hutton, Hazel Scott, Marjorie Reynolds, Alice Fay, Irving Berlin and Connie Boswell.

The committee in charge, of which Robert M. Weitman is secretary, is headed by Jules Stein, chairman. Others on the committee include Martin Block, Kate Cameron, Alan Courtney, Richard Gilbert, Abel Green, Cecil Hackett, Oscar Hammerstein, John Hertz, Jr., Leonard Joy, Mac Kriendler, Harold Lafounte, Bert Lytell, Alfred McCosker, Neville Miller, William Paley, John Robert Powers, Alvino Rey, Manie Sachs, James Sauter, Sam Shain, Donald Shaw, Elias Sugarman, Cal Swanson, Deems Taylor, Rocco Vocco, Danton Walker, Frank Walker, David Werblin and Mark Woods.
